OBJECTS TO USE OF POLICE.

President of Lighter Captains' Union Criticises Hylan.

A letter to Mayor Hylan, criticising him for ordering police to run the municipal ferries to Staten Island during the marine workers' strike, was given out yesterday by James McGuire, President of the Lighter Captains' Union. This organization was one of the six units of the Marine Affiliation engaged in the strike.

"The police were created to preserve law, property, and order, not to be placed in a position to incite trouble by making strikebreakers out of them by placing them on ferryboats to take the place of strikers," he wrote. "If you did not want this trouble, why didn't you see that your municipal employes were getting these wages and working conditions?

"That small army that was out represents about 38,000 votes, without what they could control from the unorganized army of voters. You must remember that without the support of organized labor you could not have been elected Mayor. I would be pleased to have you explain just why you took the stand you did in this matter, as early as possible, for the benefit of the organization I represent."

Hearings of the subcommittee of the National War Labor Board upon the controversy of the unions and the boatowners will be resumed in the Board of Estimate Room in City Hall at 10 o'clock this morning.

ORGANIZE EAST SIDE BLOCKS

First Steps in That Section Taken at Test Meeting.

The first steps toward block organization of the East Side were taken yesterday when Miss Beulah Weldon called together persons living in Henry Street between Montgomery and Gouverneur Streets and held a "test block" meeting at the Henry Street Settlement House, 265 Henry Street. Four hundred and twenty local community districts have already been formed by the Council of National Defense, but this is the first attempt of such organization on the East Side. Miss Esther Johnson was elected president, and Miss Lillian D. Wald vice president.

A lieutenant representing each tenement on the block was chosen, and these were instructed to notify all the families of their respective houses to appear at a meeting on Wednesday night. They will then elect one captain to represent the block at the Central Executive Committee. This committee will look after the housing conditions on the East Side, bring complaints before the city officials and take care of the community in general.

APPEAL FOR ARMENIA.

Women Ask America to See That Oppressed People Are Freed.

An appeal for America to stand side by side with Armenia and use its influence to see that that country is granted its independence is being being circulated by the Women's National Defense Committee of the American Defense Society. After paying tribute to the unconquerable bravery and courage of the Armenians, the statement says:

"We must prove by deeds and not by words alone that America has drawn the flaming sword, not for aggression but for liberty, not for war but for peace; and when the inspiration of victory shall flood our souls with its eternal light, then can our hands clasp in brotherhood the hands of a free Armenian people. America must see to it that they shall be delivered from their oppressors and shall freely enter into that 'land of liberty' for which they have paid so terrible a price."

COMMERCE BOARD OVERRULES ORDER GIVEN BY M'ADOO

DECIDES FOR LUMBERMEN

WILSON'S WORDS QUOTED

Commission Contends War and Its Conditions Ended with Signing of Armistice.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—In a decision which is bound to attract wide attention as sounding a keynote to business reconstruction and because of the positive attitude of the Interstate Commerce Commission in asserting its supremacy over the Director General of Railroads, the commission today declared its full authority to review rates fixed by him.

The commission goes even further and orders the present Director General to establish new rates, on the basis prescribed by the Commission on Lumber and Other Forest Products, from California and certain northwestern points to destinations extending from Denver to the Atlantic seaboard.

The decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which was written by Clyde B. Aitchison, formerly a member of the Oregon State Railroad Commission, was handed down in the case of the Pacific Lumber Company and others against the Northwestern Pacific Railroad Company and others, and holds that rates on lumber and other forest products from certain Western points to the East were unjust, unreasonable and unduly prejudicial to the extent that they exceed rates on some commodities from what are known as California Coast group points to the same destinations east of Denver. These rates were sought to be fixed by the Railroad Administration when Mr. McAdoo was the Director General of Railroads.

The commission refused to be impressed with the contention of counsel for the Director General that "the importance of the relationship of rates and rate adjustments has largely disappeared for the period of the war" and the further plea that extraordinarily high rates on lumber do not work a hardship on the industry because of the abnormal prices being received for the product.

The case decided today was begun before the assumption of Federal control of the principal systems of railroad transportation. The complaint was brought by eleven corporations engaged in the manufacture of lumber and forest products in the Humboldt Bay district of California, on the ground that the rates from there were discriminatory against most of the competing lumbermen in the larger coast group outside that district.

While the case was pending, but before it came on for argument, President Wilson, approximately a year ago, issued his proclamation taking over control generally of the transportation systems of the country, including the roads of the principal defendants in this case. Under the provisions of the Federal Control act of March 21, 1918, former Director General McAdoo initiated a general increase in freight and passenger rates on roads under Federal control, to take effect June 25, 1918. A supplemental complaint was then filed, naming the Director General of Railroads as a party defendant.

Text of Board's Decision.

The decision, after going thoroughly into the merits of the case and the action taken by Director General McAdoo, asserts the authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission over the Director General of Railroads in the matter of rates in these words:

"Upon argument, on behalf of the Director General, we were asked to take judicial notice that the lumber business, as, in fact, all business, is not conducted as it was before the United States was drawn into the European war; that shipments are made under permits issued by the Federal Government; that prices are much above normal, and that no matter how high the freight rate the shipper does a profitable business, and that many embargoes prevent shipments to various points, contended broadly.

"The importance of the relationship of rates and rate adjustments has disappeared to a very large extent for the period of the war, and these cases are going to be decided by this commission while the war is in progress and while we are in this abnormal situation that the war has brought about.

"Even if all the abnormal conditions were as counsel for the Director General stated them, the continuance of an unjust and unreasonable rate situation and relationship would not thereby be warranted. The more abnormal other conditions the greater would seem to be the need for unswerving fidelity to the standards of justness and reasonableness in transportation charges as between competing persons, localities, and commodities.

"This principle was recognized by Congress. The Federal Control act was enacted in the midst of war and while Congress was daily dealing with the abnormal commercial conditions caused by the war. Notwithstanding the fact we were at war and commercial conditions were abnormal, Congress express-

PARIS, Jan. 19.—The number of totally blinded victims of the war among all the allied forces has now been calculated as 7,000. Twenty-five or 30 per cent. will probably have to be added to this figure from among the patients now undergoing treatment.

The total of those who lost one eye amounts to between 30,000 and 40,000.

TEN STATES FIGHT U.S. PHONE RATES

CHANGE AT LAST MIDNIGHT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—New toll and long distance telephone rates approved by Postmaster General Burleson will become effective at midnight tonight except in those States where temporary restraining orders against the companies have been issued by the courts. This announcement was made tonight by W. H. Lamar, editor of the Postoffice Department and a member of the Federal Wire Control Committee.

Mr. Lamar had said during the day that the rates would become effective despite efforts of State regulatory bodies to suspend or modify them. So far as the Post Office Department had been advised tonight, he said, restraining orders had been issued in only two States—Indiana and Mississippi. According to information received here, restraining orders had been issued in New Jersey, Illinois, Missouri, Michigan, West Virginia, Nevada, and Arizona. The Massachusetts Public Service Commission has also issued orders against the Government rates going into effect pending its inquiry.

The Federal Court at Pensacola, Fla., is the only court in the United States that has held full hearings and rendered a decision on an application for an injunction, Mr. Lamar said, and its decision today denied the restraining order. He added that the court at Lincoln, Neb., also has held a hearing, but has not yet rendered a decision.

Under the new rates as fixed by Mr. Burleson there will be a basic charge of 6½ mills a mile for a message with half the day rate for night service up to midnight and one-fourth of the day rate between that hour and 4:30 o'clock in the morning.

The new charges were recommended in the first report of the Committee on Rate Standardization and Mr. Burleson said their effect would be to equalize the toll and long-distance charges over the country. In many instances rates in certain localities will be increased and this fact led to efforts of some State regulatory bodies to prevent the new schedule from being put into effect. Generally, however, there will be a reduction in rates, according to the Postmaster General.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 20.—The Public Utility Commission today ordered suspended the increased rates for telephone toll service, which were scheduled to go into effect tomorrow on order of Postmaster General Burleson. The suspension is made on authority of the New Jersey State statute, which provides that the reasonableness of the increase shall be shown. This statute, according to the statement of the board, is not nullified by the proclamation by which the President assumed control of the telephone lines, as the proclamation provided that State laws should not be revoked.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Jan. 20.—An order to suspend the proposed increase in telephone rates as directed by Postmaster General Burleson, to become effective at midnight tonight, was issued today by the Missouri Public Service Commission. The commission also instructed its attorney to file injunction proceedings to halt the increase. The order of suspension applies only to the Bell Telephone Company since none of the other companies filed schedules of increased rates.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—A temporary injunction restraining the American Telephone and Telegraph Company from putting into effect the new long-distance telephone rate ordered by the Postmaster General, was obtained in a State Court this afternoon on petition of the Illinois State Public Utilities Commission.

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 20.—Telephone companies of Michigan were warned by the State Railroad Commission today that any attempt to put into effect at midnight tonight the new toll rates announced by Postmaster General Burleson would result in prosecutions under the State law. Telegrams sent to the various companies state that as the rates have not been approved by the Railroad Commission they are illegal in Michigan. The telegrams quote the State law which provides a fine of from $1 to $1,000 for each violation of rates fixed by the State Commission.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Jan. 20.—An order restraining the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company from putting into effect at midnight tonight the new schedule of rates as provided by

GERMANY'S VOTE SHOWS STRENGTH FOR SOCIALISTS

Indicated That Centrists and Democrats Will Also Have Power in Convention.

EXTREMISTS ARE REBUKED

Berlin Official Majority Party Estimate Is for 40 to 50 Per Cent. of the Total.

EXTENSIVE RIOTS DENIED

But Copenhagen Advices Report Serious Disturbances in Berlin and Hamburg.

BERLIN, Jan. 20, (Associated Press.)—Richard Fischer, Secretary of the Majority Socialist Party in Berlin, estimated early this morning that in the elections to the National Assembly the Majority Socialists would have between 40 and 50 per cent. of the votes, the Independent Socialists 5, the Centrists 30, and the German Democrats from 15 to 20 per cent.

Twenty-four of the 831 election districts in Greater Berlin give the following totals: German Democratic Party, 7,375; Majority Socialists, 8,195; Independent Socialists, 3,005; German National Party, 4,706; German Peoples Party, 2,990; Christian (Centrist) Party, 2,254.

In the Ruhleben Precinct the Majority Socialists polled 1,028 votes, and the Independent Socialists 7.

The strength shown by the Democratic Party is surprising to the politicians in view of the fact that Berlin has long been overwhelmingly Socialist.

A majority of the election officials said that they were too tired to make a final count on Sunday night.

Paris Gets Many Returns.

Brunswick City—Citizens' League, without Democrats, 16,477; Democrats, 16,200; Majority Socialists, 6,363; Independent Socialists, 26,335. It is noteworthy that the United Bourgeois Parties polled more than the Minority Parties, although Brunswick is one of the latter's strongholds.

Barmen City—Nationalists, 22,968; Centrists, 8,310; Democrats, 12,680; Majority Parties, 29,302; Minority Parties, 10,949.

Ask Americans to Settle Jugoslav-Austrian Border.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—A dispatch to the Havas Agency from Graz, Austria, says that Plenipotentiaries of German Austria, Carinthia and Jugoslavia, at a meeting held to discuss the settlement of the question of boundaries, decided, in order to prevent a resumption of hostilities, that an American investigation commission should study the situation and conduct inquiries along the borders of the States concerned. The appointment of such a commission was proposed by the Americans themselves.

Negotiations, begun last week to obtain a cessation of hostilities on the Carinthian front, have resulted in a renewal of the armistice.

PEACE IN MARCH HOPED FOR IN PARIS

But a Prerequisite Is the Triumph of Moderate Parties in German Election.

THEN TO FIX BOUNDARIES

By ERNEST MARSHALL.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—Present arrangements are that the Peace Conference will hold sessions on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of each week, and a high authority said last night that all necessary work could be got through in time to allow of the signature of the peace treaty in March, if one thing happened. This one essential condition to an early conclusion of the peace negotiations is that the election in Germany should result in the formation of a stable and responsible Government.

Such information as has reached certain well-informed quarters here points to the probability of a return of the bourgeois and Majority Socialist candidates in sufficient numbers to insure the creation of a strong moderate Government. This is the hope on which some of the allied delegates at the Paris conference base the prediction of a possible signature of peace in March.

Peace with Germany at that time would not necessarily mean that all the questions with which the Paris conference has to deal had been settled. The plan along which the conference will work, if the German elections result, as it is hoped, will be to determine the essential points of the peace treaty and to lay down certain broad general definitions which will govern the working out of such details as there may not have been time to settle in their entirety. The determination of certain disputed frontiers, for instance, might very well be carried out by commissions specially appointed for that purpose along the lines of the principles established by the treaty of peace.

It is evident that this plan can only be successfully carried out if it is thoroughly well understood by possible recalcitrants that the great powers will take measures to see that the decisions embodied in the peace treaty are accepted by all concerned.

At Work on the Plans.

At most of the headquarters of the various delegations to the Peace Conference hard work is in progress. The Villa Majestic and the Hotel Astoria, where the huge staffs of the British delegation are housed, were hives of industry. Clemenceau's call for memoranda from each of the chief delegations on the responsibility for the war and international labor legislation has set a rapid pace for the Conference.

So far as the British were concerned, a good deal of preliminary work of this kind had been taken in hand some time ago under the general direction of Lord Hardinge, permanent Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, but the final papers to be submitted to the Conference had to be prepared hurriedly from rough drafts submitted by various departments.

At present the date of the plenary session, at which the League of Nations question will have pride of place, is not yet determined, and it will probably depend on the progress made with the business which Clemenceau put on the program yesterday.

Some cynics still suggest that the conference will merely affirm its general adhesion to the principle of the league and then refer the examination of the various schemes which are known to have been dealt with to a special committee, which, according to these cynics, will be tantamount to interment. In responsible British quarters, however, there is not the slightest disposition to agree with this view. It was pointed out today that the British Government was pledged to do its utmost to further the foundation of the league on a practical basis,

PETROGRAD ENVOY HEARD

DENOUNCES THE BOLSHEVIKI

SHORT SESSION IS HELD

Today the Danish Envoy to Petrograd Will Give His Testimony.

PARIS, Jan. 20. — (Associated Press.)—The meeting of the Supreme Council today took up the Russian situation.

An hour was given over to hearing Joseph Noulens, the French Ambassador who has just returned from Russia, where he personally witnessed the various changes that had been taking place in the Government and conditions there. What he told the council was not disclosed, but an authorized statement from M. Noulens sums up his views thus:

"The Bolshevist power is the enemy of the Entente. It is responsible for the Russian defection from the Entente. It furnished Germany with food during the war. It protested against the terms of the German armistice. These acts show an uncompromising attitude of hostility against the Entente.

"Tyranny and terror, which are increasing daily, should place the bloody chiefs at Moscow and Petrograd outside the pale of humanity. No society of nations could deal with such a regime, which constitutes today the most serious obstacle to a general peace. Until the regime falls, which I hope to see the Allies actively undertake, Europe will continue to be exposed to the severest risks of agitation and war."

M. Noulens will be followed tomorrow by H. Scavenius, the Danish Minister to Russia, along the same lines.

The Supreme Council reassembled at 10:30 o'clock with Vittorio Orlando, the Italian Premier, the only absentee. The council as it met comprised ten members—two from each of the five great powers. President Wilson and Secretary of State Lansing representing the United States. Baron Nobuaki Makino, chief of the Japanese mission, attended the session for the first time, accompanied by Baron Matsui, Ambassador to France.

The three other members from each power did not attend, as full meetings of the membership of 25 are only assembled when subjects of special importance are under consideration by the council.

Arthur J. Balfour, British Foreign Secretary, was accompanied to the meeting by Lord Robert Cecil, who has especially in charge the subject of a League of Nations on behalf of Great Britain. Lord Robert remained only a few moments and did not enter the Council chamber.

Following the meeting this communiqué was issued:

The President of the United States of America and the Prime Ministers and Foreign Ministers of the Allied Governments, assisted by Baron Makino, and the Japanese Ambassador in Paris, met at the Quai d'Orsay this morning between 10:30 and 12 o'clock.

M. Noulens, the French Ambassador to Russia, who returned a few days ago from Archangel, addressed the meeting and gave particulars of the situation in Russia.

The next meeting will take place on Tuesday at 10:30 o'clock in the morning to hear the remarks of M. Scavenius, the Danish Minister in Petrograd, who left the Russian capital very recently.

Consider Whether to Intervene Actively in Russia, Give Non-Military Help or Cease to Oppose Reds

PARIS, Jan. 20.—Delegates to the Peace Conference have before them three main proposals regarding the policy to be adopted toward Russia.

The second advocates by every other means than the dispatch of troops assistance to the elements in Russia fighting for democracy and order against the Bolsheviki, with the object of contributing to the restoration of normal conditions in the peripheral regions of Russia, and to encourage the populations of the central regions, still under Bolshevist domination, to an effort to obtain similar conditions.

The third involves the cessation of opposition to the Bolshevist Government, the withdrawal of the associated and allied troops, and an attempt to reach a working arrangement to assist Russia out of her troubles, though the formal recognition of the Bolsheviki is not necessary.

Under the third proposal the associated powers would attempt to supply Russia with food and other urgent necessaries, and assist in the reorganization of transportation, industry, and commerce, provided that the Bolsheviki would guarantee to discontinue their attacks on their neighbors, refrain from molesting allied sympathizers, and cease terrorism.

COBLENZ, Jan. 20.—Brig. Gen. H. A. Smith, who is in charge of the administration of civil affairs in the German territory occupied by the American Army, has effected an arrangement with the allied high command by which manufacturing establishments in our sector may market their products both in France and in Germany. He has also made arrangements looking to a full supply of coal from down the Rhine. He hopes within three weeks to have every idle man in our region at work.

General Smith aspires to put our part of Germany in good economic condition. At first he met some opposition from others powers indirectly concerned, because some officials deemed the American plan unwise, in that it would strengthen Germany, and therefore be a bad step for the Allies, to take.

But he countered with the argument that articles he wished to be manufactured would not add to Germany's military strength, and that it was the desire of the American Army civil administration here to make its part of the Rhineland prosperous, and not to endanger France or the other Allies, but to place at least a part of Germany in a position where it would be able to pay its part of the allied indemnity.

France Demands Goods.

France put forward a suggestion that she be allowed to buy that part of the region's manufactured products which she could use, and when he agreed to this his plan for the sale of the products in other parts of Germany went through.

Officials intrusted with arranging for France to take what part of the products she needed started out on the supposition that a credit could be made, but it was firmly pointed out that the Americans had put themselves in a position where they were responsible for economic prosperity hereabouts and must have assets in a form that could be quickly liquidated, and that therefore all customers in this market must pay in cash. The French agreed.

When this plan, which will take in most of the workers, whom 1,000,000 of German population supplies, gets to working we shall control a wide range of manufactured products, as well as incidentally a large wine business. In addition, this part of Germany produces a great amount of foodstuffs, distribution of which will be under American direction.

Food Situation Improves.

The American Army also has charge of food conditions at present in that part of Germany we occupy and, incidentally, I quote a sentence from

AMERICANS FAVOR ACTION

Believe Refusal to Allow Trade Current to Flow Will Spread the Bolshevist Spirit.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—No general opportunity is to be afforded to Germany—for the present at least—to make progress toward a resumption of normal economic conditions. This decision has been reached by a majority of the Supreme Council of the Inter-Allied Peace Conference after going over the situation in the light of the most recent information. In taking this action the Supreme Council acted contrary to the sentiment prevailing in the American delegation, where the feeling was strong that the whole world would be better served if Germany was given a measure of participation in the world's business.

It was the Americans who brought the question squarely before the Supreme Council. They had become convinced that if present conditions continued in the territories constituting the former German Empire, Bolshevism would obtain such a hold that it would be impossible to check it, and as a result it would spread westward and become a menace to every country.

The view of the United States representatives was that the situation could best be met by modifying the blockade against the German ports so as permit a fair degree of trading with the outside world, thus permitting Germany to purchase food and other much-needed supplies with her own money earned through selling German exports wherever a market was available.

The understanding obtained here is that the American representatives are willing to go to the extent of permitting Germany to have some raw materials to enable her to finish goods that would bring in money to pay for what was furnished her by other nations to supply her actual needs but it is doubtful if this point is pressed as it is realized by all those concerned in making peace that the first obligation in the way of reconstruction and restoration is toward the allied countries that suffered heavily through the German methods of frightfulness.

It is a fact, however, that the American representatives felt that something should be done to relieve the conditions in Germany and elsewhere in Central Europe in order to remove the political dangers threatening from human suffering.

For their part the French have made it clear that they are not satisfied that Germany is in no condition to come back quickly into a position of economic strength under the encouragement of a lifted blockade. Furthermore, the French are understood to have felt that it would be better not to show favors to Germany until the terms of peace were accepted by her Government, for the reason that if this encouragement began to bring a resumption of normal conditions to that country there would be a typical German disposition displayed to resist the severest of the treaty conditions.

FRENCH SENATE AS HOST

HIS TRIBUTE TO FRANCE

Says She Has Earned Brotherhood of World by Resistance of German Peril.

MAKES A DEEP IMPRESSION

His Words Go Straight to the Heart of France, Says Henry White.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—President Wilson was the guest of the French Senate at a luncheon today in the Luxembourg Palace. He was greeted by Antonin Dubost, President of the Senate, in an address in which he said the Senate welcomed the President and his ideas. In reply, President Wilson, addressing President Poincaré, as well as M. Dubost, paid glowing tribute to France for her heroic resistance to the foe of the world as the outpost of humanity, declaring that "the peril of France, if it continues, will be the peril of the world, and not only France must organize against the peril, but the world must organize against it."

M. Dubost's address follows in full:

Welcomes Wilson and His Ideas.

"Mr. President: My colleagues and myself thank you for having been so good as to accept our invitation and to give us some hours of your time, which we know to be devoted to the high meditations and the important negotiations upon which the fate of the peoples depends. From your first steps on the land of France and since your entry into Paris the French people has spontaneously given their hearts to you, and they perceived at once in your frank smile and in your so loyal and open physiognomy that you, too, were spontaneously giving yourself to them.

"You are today in an old palace of France, and it is among these grand reminders of past times that, with thoughts rejuvenated by republican ardor, yet with patriotism, the French Senate shapes a history which already counts fifteen centuries. We welcome here, Mr. President, you and your ideas. Nowhere could your splendid ambition to substitute for the periodically broken equilibrium of material forces the definite award of moral forces elicit more enthusiasm than in France, and nowhere more than in the Senate, since the statute of international peace has been first of all and for a long time prepared by some of its most eminent members.

"Our national problem consists, therefore, in combining our European past and our actual material security with the conditions of the new order for which you have given so noble a formula, because this new order will ever have to lean on some force, for which France will, when all is told, stand the most advanced and exposed sentinel. We firmly believe with you, Mr. President, and, allow me to add, sincere and great friend, that a new world order and perhaps a world harmony are possible, in which our French country will at last be liberated from the nightmare of invasion — our country, for which nearly 1,400,000 men of France have just given their lives.

"It is with such a hope that we shall most willingly participate in the sublime cause which you have come to undertake on the devastated soil of old Europe, where hatred and discord still howl after the guns have become silent, and where anarchy causes a vast part of mankind to stagger. The task is a gigantic one, but it is worthy of your country, accustomed to great undertakings, and of ours, the ancient artisan of western civilization. Mr. President, we salute your great heart and your high intelligence with a joyful hope and a fervent acclamation."

Following is President Wilson's reply in full:

France's Long Period of Peril.

"Mr. President of the Senate, Mr. President of the Republic: You have made me feel your welcome in words as generous as they are delightful, and I feel that you have graciously called me your friend. May I not in turn call this company a company of my friends, for everything that you have so finely said, Sir, has been corroborated in every circumstance of our visit to this country. Everywhere we have been welcomed not only, but welcomed in the spirit and with the same thought, until it has seemed as if the spirits of the two countries came together in an unusual and beautiful accord.

"We know the long period of peril through which France has gone. France thought us remote in comprehension and sympathy, and I dare say there were times when we did not comprehend as you comprehended the danger in the presence of which the world stood. There was no time when we did not know how near it was, and I fully understand, Sir, that throughout these trying years, when mankind has waited for the catastrophe, the anxiety of France must have been the deepest and most constant of all, for she did stand at the frontier of freedom. She had carved out her own fortunes through a long period of eager struggle. She had done great things in building up a great, new France. And just across the border, separated from her only by a few fortifications and a little country whose neutrality, it has turned out, the enemy did not respect, lay the shadow cast by the cloud which enveloped Germany—the cloud of intrigue, the cloud of dark purpose, the cloud of sinister design. This shadow lay at the very borders of France.

"And yet it is fine to remember here that for France this was not only a peril but a challenge. France did not tremble. France quietly and in her own way prepared her sons for the struggle that was coming. She never took the initiative or did a single thing that was aggressive. She had prepared herself for defense, not in order to impose her will upon other people. She had prepared herself that no other people might impose its will upon her.

"As I stand with you and as I mix with the delightful people of this country I see this in their thoughts: 'America always was our friend. Now she comprehends, and now she has come to bring us this message, and, understanding, she will always be ready to help.' And while I say, Sir, this danger may prove to be a continuing danger, while it is true that France will always be near at this threat, if we cannot turn it from a threat into a promise, there are many elements that ought to reassure France.

A New, Awakened World.

"There is a new, awakened world. It is not ahead of us, but around us. It knows that its dearest interests are involved in its standing together for a common purpose. It knows that the peril of France, if it continues, will be the peril of the world. It knows that not only France must organize against this peril, but that the world must organize against it.

"So I see in these welcomes not only hospitality, not only kindness, not only hope, but a purpose, a definite, clearly defined purpose, that men, understanding one another must support one another, and that all the sons of freedom are under a common oath to see that freedom never suffers this danger again. That, to my mind, is the impressive element of this welcome. I know how much of it, Sir, and I know how little of it to appropriate to myself.

"I know that I have the very distinguished honor to represent a nation whose heart is in this business, and I am proud to speak for the people whom I represent. But I know that you honor me in a representative capacity. I delight in this welcome, therefore, as if I had brought the people of the United States with me and they could see in your faces what I see in the tokens of welcome and affection.

"The sum of the whole matter is that France has earned and has won the brotherhood of the world. She has stood at the chief post of danger, and the thoughts of mankind and her brothers everywhere, her brothers in freedom, turn to her and centre upon her. If this be true, as I believe it to be, France is fortunate to have suffered. She is fortunate to have proved her mettle as one of the champions of liberty, and she has tied to herself, once and for all, all those who love freedom and truly believe in the progress and rights of man."

Received With Great Ceremony.

President Wilson, accompanied by Premier Clemenceau, drove to the Luxembourg Palace from the Foreign Office, where he had been attending the meeting of the Supreme Council. He was received at the palace with great ceremony. The Republican Guard, in dress uniforms, was drawn up in the Court of Honor. A fanfare of drums and trumpets marked the President's appearance. This was followed by the playing of the American national anthem.

At the entrance of the palace President Wilson was met by M. Dubost, and escorted to the Salon des Conferences, where the covers for the luncheon were laid. This chamber, formerly the throne room of the Bourbon Kings, is one of the most magnificent in Europe, with famous paintings and Gobelin tapestry depicting French history.

The American guests included Secretary of State Lansing, Henry White, General Tasker H. Bliss, Rear Admiral Grayson, Brig. Gen. William W. Harts, Robert Woods Bliss, American Chargé d'Affaires, and President Wilson's two stenographers.

Among the guests, who numbered all told 300, were also all the French Cabinet members, the members of the Senate, Paul Deschanel, the President of the Chamber of Deputies, and Marshal Foch.

First Time Since Napoleon.

The luncheon was one of the most elaborate functions thus far held in connection with the Peace Conference. The throne room of the Bourbon Kings was used for the first time since, a hundred years ago, Napoleon banqueted his Generals returning from battle.

The Republican Guard, in snow-white uniforms and gleaming helmets, lined the marble staircase as President Wilson ascended. The menu was a beautifully engraved work of art, bearing President Wilson's portrait on the cover.

Mr. Wilson's speech was warmly applauded, and as he closed the band of the Republican Guard took up the inspiring strains of "The Marseillaise," with the voice of a tenor from the opera joining in the refrain. The President was so impressed with the demonstration that he wrote a hurried note on his card and sent it to the singer.

The guests then withdrew for coffee in the Salon Victor Hugo, where two brilliant groups formed, one with Marshal Foch in the centre and the other with President Wilson, the Premiers and foreign delegates crowding around.

The two Presidents again received military honors when they departed.

SENATORS DELIGHTED AT WILSON'S SPEECH

"Will Go Straight to Heart of French People Also," Says Henry White.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—Henry White of the American Peace Delegation was enthusiastic this afternoon about the effect of the Senate luncheon to President Wilson. Mr. White speaks French almost as well as he does English, and his long residence in Paris has given him an intimate knowledge of French psychology and character. His comments, therefore, interested me greatly.

"It was most astounding," he said. "The President went straight to the heart of the French Senate, as his remarks will go straight to the heart of the French people. He conveyed to his audience his complete understanding of all that France has been through and all she has stood for. Many Senators whom I know spoke to me afterward in terms which showed the deep impression he made."

The occasion was not only happy, but most significant. The President of the Senate's welcome, not alone to Mr. Wilson but also to his "ideas," was regarded as showing the trend of opinion.

One striking feature of the occasion was the extraordinary work of the official translator of the conference, who is a Frenchman but lives in England and knows both languages perfectly and who also possesses oratorical abilities of a high order. President Wilson spoke extemporaneously. The translator took notes and reproduced the speech with remarkable accuracy. His rendition was full of the peculiar fire which the French appreciate and like. His spirited rendition brought the distinguished audience to its feet.

The whole affair was of happy augury and tended to confirm the optimistic impressions already prevalent.

WHY WILSON LOOKS FOR LEAGUE VICTORY

3 STAGES OF HIS EFFORTS

"Moral Offensive" of Jan. 8, 1918; House's Work in Paris; Allies' Acceptance of Hoover.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—"What are President Wilson's grounds for his faith in a favorable outlook for the League of Nations expressed in his cable to the New York Civic Forum?" After inquiry today in the best informed quarters I am able to present a summary of various phases of the American effort and a forecast of the Peace Conference as it is viewed by those close to the President.

The prologue to the allied conferences: Throughout this period, which can best be divided into three parts, runs one dominating idea, the blending of the individuality of great nations for the accomplishment of great undertakings.

First Phase.—The Spring of 1918 brought with it impending disaster to the allied cause, and purely national interests were forgotten, and a great leader was made Generalissimo of the allied armies. The resources of the United States and the Allies were virtually pooled and placed at his disposal, and during the last few days of September we knew that the terrific war that had plunged the peoples of the world into misery for more than four years was nearing its culmination in victory for the Allies.

During this same time the moral force which had always been behind the cause of the Entente, but which had never received any positive direction, became, under the leadership of President Wilson, not only a weapon against our enemies, but a protection to ourselves.

The peoples of the allied nations refused any longer to be led blindly.

The masses of Russia demanded an interpretation of the war and, not receiving it from the Allies, their leaders sold out to Germany. The British laboring man and the French Socialist began to show signs of impatience. On Jan. 8, 1918, President Wilson began his great "moral offensive," which, we learned, after the armistice had been signed and we were permitted to look into Germany, had caused as great havoc among the political Hindenburgs in Berlin as our armies had at the front. And all the time peoples of the Allies and the people of the United States were being welded together by common sacrifices on the field of battle and by common war aims based on democracy.

House's Paris Mission of 1918.

Second phase—On Oct. 25, 1918, Colonel House arrived in Paris. The press announcement said that he had arrived in France "for consultation with the representatives of the Governments associated with the United States in the war." Germany had stated that she wished to make peace on the principles laid down by President Wilson in his speech of Jan. 8, 1918, and his subsequent addresses. The President had sent his correspondence with Germany to the allied Governments, with the request that they advise him whether they, too, were willing to adopt these principles as the basis for peace. Upon their answer depended the future of the world.

On Nov. 4, ten days after the President's representative had arrived in Paris and seven days after the conferences between Colonel House and the allied Premiers had begun, the answer had been given in unmistakable terms. The allied statesmen recognized the great principles of democracy that had welded together the plain people of the Entente and the United States in a determination to fight to the end for a peace based on those principles—a peace of peoples and not a peace of politicians. All recognize that sacrifices of certain purely national aspirations would have to be made in the interest of the accomplishment of the great undertaking—the stabilization of the world on principles of democracy.

Third Phase.—On Nov. 11, 1918, the armistice terms were accepted by Germany, and hostilities ceased. The war had ended almost as suddenly as it began. Its ending caused nearly as great a convulsion as did its beginning. The popular rejoicings, holidays, and great relief following the removal of the weight long borne, resulted in a species of hysterical panic comparable to that experienced in August, 1914. Pressing problems presented themselves, but until Europe had caught its breath no progress could be made toward their solution.

Agreement on Relief Plan.

Even before the armistice was signed President Wilson had studied the problem of sending relief to the civilian population of the liberated regions of Europe, and on Nov. 26 Herbert C. Hoover arrived in Paris for consultation with Colonel House regarding the most practicable way of organizing this relief. Proposals for allied and American endeavor, properly co-ordinated, were made through Colonel House to the allied Governments early in December. These culminated on Jan. 9, 1919, when the announcement was made in the press that:

The Allies and the United States are in agreement that relief must be furnished, and that the working out of relief of this character on a large scale necessitates unity of direction similar in character to that which has proved so successful in the French and British chief command in the operations of the Allies on land and sea respectively. The allied Governments have advised the President that they desire that the United States Government should take the lead in the organization and administration of this relief.

Under this arrangement between the United States and the Allies a council is being appointed of two representatives of each Government to secure co-ordination of food, finance, and shipping resources in the solution of the problems connected with this relief.

On Jan. 11, 1919, simultaneously with the arrival of the allied peace delegations in Paris, the first meeting of the Supreme Council of Supply and Relief, with Hoover as Director General of Relief, was held. The great humanitarian work had been started, under the auspices of the Allies and the United States, to alleviate the ravages of war and to stem the tide of anarchy resulting from malnutrition, almost amounting to starvation. The significance of this event cannot be overestimated.

During the few days just preceding its opening the delegates conferred concerning the organization of the Peace Conference. Generous representation was accorded the smaller powers, and independent representation was given the great self-governing dominions of the British Empire. Thus the world was brought into conference, and a new democracy, untutored in European politics, was summoned to help in the creation of a new order.

President Poincare's Forecast.

The Forecast.—President Poincaré and Premier Clemenceau yesterday made a forecast. The President of the French Republic, in welcoming the delegates, said:

"Even before the armistice you placed that necessary unity under the aegis of the lofty moral and political truths of which President Wilson has nobly made himself the interpreter, and in the light of these truths you intend to accomplish your mission. You will, in conformity with the fourteenth of the propositions unanimously adopted by the great allied powers, establish a general League of Nations which will be the supreme guarantee against any fresh assaults upon the right of peoples."

Premier Clemenceau said:

"The program of this conference has been laid down by President Wilson. It is no longer a peace of more or less vast territories; no longer a peace of continents; it is a peace of nations that is to be made."

And then the League of Nations was place at the beginning of the agenda of the meetings.

An Inspiring Program.

It is a solemn and inspiring program. It involves the guarantee of territorial integrity; the application of combined economic pressure on nations which may selfishly attempt to disturb the peace of the world; the abolition of secret alliances—in short, the blending of the individuality of the great and small nations of the world in the interests of the peaceful and legitimate development of the nations of the world.

Can this program be realized? The experience of the last few months, as detailed in the foregoing summary, makes the realization of the new order seem entirely practicable.

"We are trusted to do a great thing," the President said on Saturday, "and to do it as promptly as possible."

The people of the world know their Governments can by united effort work wonders. They will be satisfied only if their representatives in the Conference sink their purely national aims so far as they interfere with the establishment of a world federation organized in the interests of keeping the peace. Under stress of war splendid co-operation in the common purpose has been attained. The sentiment of the world demands that this Conference shall work with a world-purpose in view instead of purely national purposes. The delegates know this, and they will never be willing to face their peoples without a scheme of international organization calculated to insure the winning of peace under the principles laid down by President Wilson.

Such are the train of events and the reasoning therefrom upon which rests the optimistic feeling in American circles voiced by President Wilson's cable.

SAYS WILSON PLAN WILL WIN.

Henderson Sure the President Will Achieve a Workable League.

BERNE, Switzerland, Jan. 1.—"President Wilson will achieve a workable and feasible League of Nations and will have the full strength and influence of Great Britain solidly behind him," Arthur Henderson, British Labor Leader, told the Associated Press today.

Mr. Henderson is in Berne to arrange the preliminaries for an international labor conference here on Jan. 27. He said he was disappointed that Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, who had been elected to the committee which was to meet here, had formed another trade union conference.

Mr. Henderson outlined difficulties which he had faced in bringing about a labor conference. The conference was first planned for Paris coincident with the Peace Conference, but the French Government let it be understood that this was not acceptable to them. Lausanne was then chosen, but again came hints from the Swiss French that French Switzerland was not possible as the scene of the conference, although they did not object to its being held in German Switzerland. Berne was then selected as the meeting place.

Germans and Austrians as well as Dutch and Swedish labor leaders, Mr. Henderson understood, will participate, and French and Italian delegates would probably attend. The conference planned, he said, to take up labor questions such as a maximum working day, a uniform wage scale and related matters, and to forward the findings to the Peace Conference in the hope that they would be incorporated in the peace treaty. The conference here, if it was held, would be the first official meeting of allied and enemy labor leaders since the beginning of the war.

ITALIAN PRESS COMPLAINS.

Says Papers of Allied Countries Misstate Italian Aspirations.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Jan. 20.—The Italian press deplores the fact that several American, French and English newspapers have lately published articles concerning Italian aspirations written in an unfriendly spirit and often misstating facts. Some affirm that Italy desires to annex the whole of the Oriental coast of the Adriatic, while, it is pointed out here, everyone should by this time know that Italy only claims a small piece of that coast, which in its greater extension will go to the Jugoslavs. Others say that Fiume is the only port in Croatia and that Croatia gives it its commercial importance, while statistics plainly demonstrate that only 10 per cent. of the commercial movement of that port can be attributed to Croatia. Some newspapers go so far as to believe that Italians persecute the Slavs in Istria, while the only ones who really are persecuted are the Italians. The press urgently calls for more energetic propaganda in Allied countries to make known the real Italian aspirations.

LEAGUE STRUCTURE BECOMING DEFINITE

Plans Forming Would Set Up Virtually a Concert of Great Powers to Guard Small.

BRYAN TREATIES AS A HINT

PARIS, Jan. 20, (Associated Press.)—As the Peace Congress resumed sittings today, marked progress was being made in the business of comparing various plans for the formation of a League of Nations and harmonizing them into a unity of ideas which could be taken up as a concrete proposition.

Much headway in this direction was made last night at the conference at the Murat residence, which was attended by President Wilson, Lord Robert Cecil, the British representative, charged with working out a plan for a League of Nations; Leon Bourgeois, the French proponent of a plan for such an organization, and General Jan Christian Smuts, who has formulated a plan for a league.

Preliminary conversations over the structure of the League of Nations are still in the stage of being discussed in meetings of the Supreme Council, and are not technically before the Peace Congress as a whole, but the fact that the congress has advanced this question to the foremost place in its program is taken as a sign that such progress is being made in the Supreme Council as to warrant the expectation that a definite and somewhat detailed program will soon be evolved.

This program, it is believed, will present the common thought of the leaders of the United States, Great Britain, and France, and, therefore, may furnish a starting point from which all the peace delegates may participate in the work. President Wilson is personally pressing this one feature of the work of the Peace Congress to the virtual exclusion of all others.

With a definite plan formed for erecting a structure for a league, there are about twenty-five working days remaining of the time that President Wilson had allotted to himself for work in France before leaving for home. The question now being asked is whether in this comparatively short time he can bring together in an agreement for a Society of Nations.

Many of the President's closest advisers are reasonably convinced that he can do so. They base their opinion on what appear to be spontaneous developments, on expressions indicating adherence to the League plan by Great Britain, France, and Italy, and on the assumption that with these nations virtually agreed in principle and also as to some details, the remainder of the work, while presenting perplexities, does not present hopeless obstacles, if approached in the spirit of accommodation, and even sacrifice, which virtually all leaders have declared in their public addresses as being necessary to a satisfactory result.

With discussions now past the point where it seems to be agreed that there shall be no super-sovereignty, nor a common police force, and that the question whether a nation shall contribute force in carrying out the decisions of the league shall be left to each nation individually in each instance, the general plan which is being most talked about now embodies an enlargement of the principles contained in the treaties negotiated by William Jennings Bryan. These provide for a delay of a year before declaring war and for investigations by a special commission of all disputes, and for no declaration of war thereafter without giving certain notice.

Such a plan, current discussion in Paris brings out, is intended by those who favor it to establish virtually a concert of power among the principal nations for a preservation of world peace. This would be extended to what would be virtually a guardianship of the smaller nations, applying to them the principles which govern participation in the league by their greater sisters.

By this plan it is apparently purposed to internationalize the guardianship of smaller nations, with the idea that there shall be no domination over them by one nation, economically or financially.

It is proper to state at this juncture that President Wilson, himself, has a reasonably complete plan for the formation of the League of Nations. It may also be stated that he regards highly many features of the plan presented by General Smuts and is working in close harmony with M. Bourgeois and Lord Robert Cecil.

Aside from the attention being paid to the Russian situation, the Society of Nations question is now in an advantageous position and steady development may be expected.

The committee of foreign affairs of the Chamber of Deputies is considering a project presented by several members, to make Versailles the permanent seat of the League of Nations.

NATIONS MUST CO-OPERATE.

League Action Needed to Repair War's Damage, Says Major Astor.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—If the League of Nations is to be a success it must be positive as well as negative, according to a pamphlet issued by Major Waldorf Astor, Parliamentary Secretary of the Ministry of Food, today. Co-operation between the nations, Major Astor says, will be of vital importance in the period of reconstruction, during which all the belligerent nations, with the possible exception of the United States, must expect an economic crisis.

"Co-operation between nations before the war was an exception," the pamphlet says. "It has proved to be the cause of the allied victory and must be the basis of a permanent peace. The League of Nations will not last long if its functions are exerted solely through courts or tribunals for the settlement of disputes. They must make utmost use of every means of uniting nations for achieving common purposes and repelling common dangers.

"All the belligerent nations, with the possible exception of the United States, will now have to face an economic crisis, caused by the general disturbance of markets, the uncertainty of prices, and the breakdown of established Governments over a large part of Europe. The chances for international quarrels in the turmoil of competitive trade will be greater than ever. It is important, therefore, that the League of Nations be equipped with machinery to secure the utmost co-operation between nations in facing these common problems.

"Responsibility for repairing the ravages of war must fall upon the League of Nations. International labor problems confront the league even before the war. Labor and capital realized their interests were international. It will be of fundamental importance that, in restarting industry, the standard of living in civilized countries shall not be rendered unstable by competition of sweated goods and underpaid labor. It probably will be necessary to secure this by international agreements guaranteed by the League of Nations."

FOCH TO WITHDRAW OUR MEN IN BELGIUM

Will Recall British Also to Facilitate Work of Revictualing and Reconstruction.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 20.—To facilitate the revictualing and reconstruction of Belgium, which has been hampered by the railways' being used exclusively for military purposes, Marshal Foch, at the request of the Belgian Government, has decided to withdraw the British and American forces now in Belgium and employ them elsewhere.

The food minister has left for Paris to make arrangements for further measures to relieve the food situation.

FOE IN OUR SECTOR TO SELL TO FRANCE

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

yesterday's army summary of intelligence:

"In the American area the food situation continues to improve."

Our army is attempting to Americanize business methods in this district. As an instance of methods that are peculiar to our administration, take the matter of compelling banks in our area to present semi-monthly statements and check these up with care. This method is, of course, modeled on the United States Bank Examiners' system. We thus avoid a certain degree of interference with German local business and at the same time know what is going on at the banks.

The fiscal situation is most serious in connection with the restoration of German business life. Marks are being issued at a rate of something like a hundred million a day, while the productive business of a large part of the nation stands still. A recent statement of the Rheinish Bank shows 19,100,000,000 marks in notes in circulation, while the Treasury has notes deposited for about 10,000,000,000 marks. Reichsbank Directors say:

"It cannot be denied that the grave danger menacing our entire industry lies in this swollen paper money circulation. While productive industries which alone can bring new values lie dormant the flood of paper notes grows."

Smith's Policy Constructive.

General Smith has his office in Treves, at advanced American headquarters, with branch offices throughout 5,000 square miles which we occupy. He is a mild-mannered man, expert in international law. I had a talk with him the other day, when he told me much of his plans.

"We want to put some American system into the job of rejuvenating industries under us," he said. "Nothing can be gained by hampering these industries; everything is to be gained by giving them a helping hand. Not to mention relieving us of a dangerous situation growing out of idle demobilized soldiers if no work awaits them, to develop these industries will help Germany get ready to pay the money debt she owes the Allies.

"It is the aim of this office to make the administration of civil affairs in the occupied territory a constructive administration, and therefore the sale of our products will be at the same price to all, ally and foe, on exactly the same conditions except that France can have first call, that being nothing but justice. When we get through with the job we hope to have a creditable report to make."

COUNCIL AGAINST GERMAN TRADING

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

In other words, to use a slang expression, Germany would become "cocky" and forget that she had been vanquished.

There is some reason to believe that American sentiment is not entirely crystallized on a plan of action of that character. Opinion differs as to whether Germany actually needs all the things for which she is clamoring, and it is apparent that a widespread view exists that much of the German effort to make the world believe that she is down and out in every way is mere propaganda.

Certainly the French and, to some extent, the British officials do not believe the time has yet arrived to show extreme consideration for a nation which was guilty of atrocious cruelties and whose territory, except Alsace-Lorraine, never suffered from the invasion of a hostile army while the war was on.

American representatives or some of them are not in accord with this conception of the possibilities growing out of the proposal to give a greater measure of relief to Germany. They hold that Germany has been whipped so badly that she is in no condition to be a menace to the world in any way, economically or militarily, for a long time to come.

It was the feeling among the members of the American delegation and some of their expert advisers that no good purpose would be served by leaving a chance or even a possibility of encouraging Bolshevism, which thrives on distress.

So as a result of the efforts of the United States all that has been accomplished is an agreement made at Treves by the allied and German representatives by which the unsurrendered German ships shall be turned over to the Allies for carrying troops and supplies, Germany to get her pay in foodstuffs, principally fats, furnished by the allied Governments up to an amount agreed upon as the price for the use of German vessels for this purpose.

The members of the American delegation, who believe an error has been made in denying to Germany the chance to earn money whereby to pay for food and other supplies she needs, are not entirely discouraged over their failure. They are of the opinion that the British, who are not favorable to lifting the blockade, will change their minds and adopt the American position or some modification of it.

The outcome of the German elections held on Sunday has a direct bearing on the decision not to give additional help to Germany. It is no secret that the prevailing American sentiment here is that the Ebert Government will have a sweeping victory so as to put an end to the danger of Bolshevist control of the former German Empire at this delicate period.

The latest information received in Paris indicates that Ebert's following won handsomely, and have a better control than heretofore. While it cannot be said that the socialistic domination of Germany is highly pleasing to all Americans connected officially with the Peace Conference, it was felt in the delegation pretty generally that the Ebert group afforded the best assurance of the maintenance of law and order, and for that reason their success brings satisfaction.

LABOR'S BIG PART IN PEACE OUTCOME

American Delegates Favor International Legislation to Protect Workers.

LINKED WITH LEAGUE IDEA

Conference, However, Is Understood to be Opposed to State Socialization Projects.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—On the eve of the first meeting which the Supreme Council of the five Great Powers will hold after the formal opening of the Peace Conference, the plenipotentiaries of the United States have in a general way formulated their proposals for a League of Nations.

Their plan contemplates an organization bound by the principle of compulsory arbitration of international disputes and the application of discipline to any nation declining to accept the findings of the arbitral body, but leaves each nation free to determine whether it will join in punitive measures requiring the employment of actual force to compel a recalcitrant Government to obey the arbitration tribunal's mandates.

It is inevitable that radical differences of opinion will appear in the effort of the five Powers to agree upon a working formula for the league, but it is felt that considerable progress has been made by their acceptance of the general principles which make possible this all-powerful society intended to prevent future wars.

The American plan does not provide for an international police fleet, but would leave to each nation the determination of its naval strength, although President Wilson and his colleagues may be found responsive to a suggestion for the limitation of naval building programs if the United States is left free to build as many warships as any other nation.

While the difficulties confronting the chief plenipotentiaries of the five powers in this connection are great, hope of a successful conclusion of their labors is found in Premier Clemenceau's statement at the first meeting of the Peace Conference on Saturday that he had told President Wilson that there was no sacrifice he was not willing to make in order to form a real League of Nations that would live.

The International Labor Question.

The American delegation is prepared to submit to the Peace Conference very comprehensive views on the subject of international legislation on the labor question. At Saturday's session of the conference, M. Clemenceau announced that this and other topics had been made the order of the day for the next meeting and asked all the delegations to present memoranda concerning them. The other topics are the responsibilities of the authors of the war and the punishment of the crimes committed during the war. In comparison with its concern with international labor legislation, the American delegates have only a mild interest in these other questions, one of which inferentially invites suggestions as to the punishment to be imposed upon the ex-Kaiser and the Imperialistic ruling group.

While their attitude on this question has not been defined in any authoritative way, it may be said that a strong opinion exists in American circles here that no action along this line should be taken which would make a martyr of William Hohenzollern and cause a feeling of hatred more intense than that felt at present, which would have the additional disadvantage of being perpetual.

The American delegates are deeply interested in the proposal to incorporate international labor legislation in the peace adjustments. It would not be surprising if they recommended that the International Association for Labor Protection, a semi-official body composed of delegates from national labor organizations, be utilized by the League of Nations as a basis of its labor bureau.

Opposed to State Socialism.

One gathers that the view of Americans here is that there can be no real political peace under threat of economic competition which might destroy the safeguards of labor. It is recognized that the demand for labor in the war-weary nations of Europe, heavily burdened by taxation, may force a slackening of the various national laws for the protection of workers which is likely to spread throughout the world.

There is no doubt that the allied Governments not only recognize the claims of labor, but regard such recognition as one of the most solid foundation stones of the League of Nations. At the same time the Peace Conference, it is understood, intends to avoid the consideration of Socialist demands which look to the socializing of the State. The intention of the conference appears to be to consider only specific labor problems with a view to remedial humanitarian legislation.

There is plenty of material in the way of suggestions for the consideration of the labor question by the conference. The French Chamber of Deputies recently adopted a Peace Conference program for international protection of labor. The British Labor Party has accepted recommendations for the amelioration of international labor conditions, and the British plans for the League of Nations seem to contemplate an international labor council as part of the machinery of the league. Last November the American Federation of Labor proposed that there be incorporated in the peace treaty provisions that no article of commerce made by child labor be transported, that the basic eight-hour day be recognized, that compulsory labor be imposed only as punishment for crime, and that trial by jury be extended to the whole world.

It is obvious that the putting of international labor problems forward in the Peace Conference program is a recognition of the danger of the spread of Bolshevism, which the conference realizes is obtaining a hold on Central Europe on account of conditions affecting the food industry.

DEMAND GERMAN INDEMNITY.

British Empire Producers Want It Commensurate with War Costs.

LONDON, Jan. 20, (via Montreal.)—The British Empire Producers' Organization has written to Premier Lloyd George stating that the affiliated associations of the Empire have sent cablegrams indorsing in the strongest terms the organization's demand that the Central Powers shall pay Great Britain an indemnity commensurate with the cost of the war.

The associations uniting in this plea, it is stated, represent well over $5,000,000,000 of British capital.

'TRUSTWORTHY' ONLY TO JOIN PEACE LEAGUE

Cecil Says Teutons Could Not Be Admitted At Once—British Plan Completed.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—Germany, Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey cannot be admitted to the League of Nations at the present time, but they should be allowed to join as soon as the league was satisfied that they were entitled to be ranked among the trustworthy nations of the world.

This was the opinion expressed tonight by Lord Robert Cecil, who had just turned over to the printer the British plan for the League of Nations which will be submitted to the Peace Congress.

Lord Robert made this statement to The Associated Press:

"The league should be all-embracing—for all trustworthy nations, since it is for the good of humanity."

Asked for a definition of "trustworthy," he replied that in the case of Germany one criterion would be in the establishment of a Government free from military dominance. This would be a guarantee of trustworthiness. It was obvious, he pointed out, that Germany could not be admitted until she had brought order out of the present chaos and the complexion of the new Government was seen.

NEUTRALS EAGER TO HELP FORM LEAGUE

Some of Them Are Aggrieved That the Belligerents Alone Are To Undertake Project.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—The decision that the League of Nations will be outlined and organized by the belligerents alone is understood to be the cause of some dissatisfaction among the neutrals, who are already informally discussing the matter among themselves. Whether any formal action will be taken by the neutrals to voice their protest is not yet known, but some of them are said to feel that it would be neither fair nor dignified that they should be afterward asked to subscribe to a covenant in whose making they had no part.

The neutrals, it is understood, do not ask for participation in the discussion of peace terms, since they took no part in the war, but they contend that a League of Nations is an international institution, independent of the war and that, therefore, no distinction should be made between belligerents and non-belligerents. It is also pointed out that among the neutrals there were several countries where anti-German feelings were as strong as among the Allies, but that owing to geographical position and other factors they were forced to remain neutral.

PEACE IN MARCH HOPED FOR IN PARIS

and that the voice of the British people at the recent general election was strong in favor of that attitude. Hardly any candidate elected to Parliament failed to put on record his sympathy with the theory of the league. The terms in which both Poincaré and Clemenceau yesterday spoke of the league likewise indicated an advance from the attitude which the French Premier was understood to hold after his speech in the chamber on the day Wilson spoke at Manchester.

French Put the League Second.

It is asserted on behalf of the French view that the question of responsibility for the war and its corollaries must take precedence over the question of the League of Nations—that this is the strictly logical view. The League can be founded only on the basis of justice, and justice must be done first of all. The rights of the future, the adherents of this policy say, cannot rest on a sound foundation until the wrongs of the past are righted. Looked at in another way, the French position is that the present association of the United State and the allied powers already in effect constitutes a League of Nations with which Germany is still at war, and that no extension of this League which would permit of the entrance of Germany is possible until she and her allies have purged their crimes and are no longer in a position to attempt their renewal.

It is of interest to note that some Paris papers tonight assert that France can never be secure from the menace of German aggression unless she has a Rhine frontier.

La Liberté, for instance, says:

"The acceptance by France of the League of Nations and the consequences which follow from that principle will be subordinated to the guarantee of a solid frontier."

It is evident from arguments of this kind that the ideal of a League of Nations has a long road to travel before reaching practical realization; but, with America leading the way and Great Britain backing her up heartily, the advocates of the League are far from despairing. In fact, in British quarters it is believed that there has been a distinct gain of ground.

Premiers and Foreign Ministers of the five major powers reopened the discussion of the Russian problem this morning at the Quai d'Orsay.

I used the word reopened because it expressed the basic principle on which they set to work, since it has been wisely suggested that such divergence of view as exist may be due almost entirely to the different character of the information supplied to the statesmen of different countries.

Accordingly they decided to begin this morning by pooling every scrap of information available about Russia, to discuss it thoroughly and weigh report against report, testimony against testimony. It will thus be possible to reach a common conclusion, accepted by all, as to the real state of affairs in Russia. The Allies' greatest hindrance hitherto has been the extraordinarily conflicting nature of the statements made by persons whose good faith was above question.

In the chaotic melting pot that is Russia today considerations of time, place, personal or social position and treatment received affect the individual reports to an astounding degree. What is true in Moscow may be absurd in Petrograd, and what is a dream today may be an assured fact tomorrow.

After making an exhaustive survey of the whole mass of their data the delegates will be able to probe right to the heart of the problem and subsequently to get together on a unanimous policy.

FOE UNDERVALUED BRITISH INFANTRY

German Staff Officer Says Its Resistance Amazed and Grieved High Command.

WRECKED ALL THEIR PLANS

Moreover, the Fighting Qualities of Their Own Troops Had Been Generally Overestimated.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COLOGNE, Jan. 16.—Wellington used to say he had spent his military life in trying to guess what was going on on the other side of the hill. History has to estimate these strategic guesses, and already the time has come when the pioneers of history are beginning to reduce the chaos of the war to order.

I have before me evidence which shows more clearly than anything yet published what was happening on the German side of the hill during those anxious months in the Spring of 1918. The witness is Captain von Schwink, who was a German staff officer for intelligence signalling and flying duties with the 17th German Army during 1918. When General von Below was on the Italian front in 1917, Schwink served with him. When the scene of German activity and German hopes shifted to France von Below was put in command of the 17th Army, and Schwink went with him.

Captain von Schwink began the war as a gunner; then he went into the air service and worked with artillery fighting and bombing squadrons. He received a staff appointment in 1917.

The main idea of the great German offensive of 1918, he says, was to break through to the sea, cutting the British army into two parts, one of which was to be driven back on the Channel ports while the other was to be thrown southward in disorder upon the French. All that happened afterward was in the nature of attempts to repair the plan which had gone awry, or to substitute some other which had not been originally contemplated.

Plan Went Wrong the First Day.

For the plan, according to von Schwink, did go awry from the first day. Even while the Kaiser was sending about ecstatic telegrams, while the British public was reading anxiously of that hurried retreat upon Amiens, the German staff knew that they had failed. So different are facts from imperial desires; so differently things look on the other side of the hill.

For in that great offensive of March 21 the main weight of the attack was to have fallen north of the Somme. The Germans had no intention of massing divisions south of a line drawn from St. Quentin to Amiens, and so the actual results of the severe check to the northern section of the offensive and their great advance in the south were considered by the German staff—I borrow the very guarded phrase—"as somewhat in the nature of a failure."

The attack, in fine, did not succeed as had been expected, except south of St. Quentin. The swift advance there was judged to be of merely minor importance. The Germans had hoped to gain an equal success all along the line.

What shattered their hopes was the stubborn resistance of the British Third Army. "They were much impressed"—or shall we say defeated?—by the fighting qualities of the divisions of that Third Army, and von Schwink singles out the 25th Division for honorable mention. The men of the 25th held up the strength of five German divisions. The great scheme was broken in the fighting of those two days.

It remained to try again. The next attempt may be called another version of the original idea. On March 28 an attack between Oppy and Neuville-St. Vaast was launched in order to extend the southern success. The German Staff were confident that they would recover Vimy Ridge and capture Arras by the weight of the first blow. As is known, they failed completely.

The reasons for the failure which appeared on the German side of the hill were, first, the artillery preparation was not sufficient, because they could not bring up ammunition fast enough; and second, the resistance of the British infantry went beyond all German calculation. The fighting qualities of the British divisions again have their tribute of aggrieved and wondering praise. The 56th were "magnificent," says von Schwink, the 15th and 33d were "good."

Forced to Adopt New Plan.

Again it became necessary to reconsider the situation, and this time more profoundly. The resistance had been so strong, the check so discouraging and the losses so heavy that the German Staff decided to give up altogether the original plan to break through to the sea north of Amiens. They looked for a new scene of action in which they could work with smaller forces and with some chance of success, but still the sea was the lure.

Reading this German history of the campaign of 1918 one finds one's self thinking of some caged beast tearing and biting at the bars that shut him in, unable to understand how hopeless the fight is and yielding only when battered and wounded by his own desperation he sinks exhausted, still in his cage.

Still trying for the sea, the Germans organized the attack of April 9, south of Ypres. This, says Schwink, had Dunkirk and Calais as its objective, and from the opening of the attack it was intended to push right through. Again, it seems, the problems of feeding the guns had not been sufficiently studied and again this branch of the service compromised the retreat. The difficulty of the ground, I am told, prevented the heavy artillery and ammunition being brought up; also certain German divisions in their advance found quantities of wine, put it to its natural use, and got drunk.

Finally and as usual "the resistance of the English troops, especially about Givenchy, led to delay." The disappointing force of British infantry—"cet animal est très méchant; quand on l'attaque il se defend."

It is curious how closely the story of this northern offensive resembles that of the first great attempt to the south. Both begin with a spectacular success which the General Staff consider a failure. In both there follows an attempt to repair the damage and to set the plan on its legs again. The attack of April, 1918, on the Givenchy-Merville front was made to open out the northern salient and give a chance of further advance as originally intended. This also failed and then the German staff threw up the gate in the north and put aside their hopes of the sea.

Von Schwink, who may, perhaps, speak for one school of German military opinion, thinks that this was a serious mistake. His view is that if every man had been thrown into the offensive on the Béthune-Ypres front the Germans would "almost certainly" have reached the Channel ports.

So much for the Germans on the offensive. Of the British offensive Schwink has naturally less of interest to say. The attack of Aug. 8 was a complete surprise, which the British might, perhaps, have guessed.

The attack of the Third Army at the end of August had been anticipated, owing to the signs of traffic by road and rail and the growing size of the ammunition dumps. The attack on the Canal du Nord in the September was expected by the Germans to come somewhere else, and even now Schwink cannot guess why it did not.

In the fighting of the whole campaign of 1918 what most impressed him was the discrepancy between the German Staff's estimate of the fighting value of the British divisions and the actual value. The German General Staff consistently and considerably underestimated the value of the British divisions which had been engaged. To their disgust they found divisions which had been three and four times through the mill, still fighting steadily. To make their disappointment more uncomfortable they had somehow persuaded themselves the British depots were in general empty and such drafts as could be sent would be of no account.

Last and most irritating of all these chapters of disillusion must have been the discovery that, as Schwink put it, "the fighting value of the German divisions was generally overestimated."

It was that queer German arrogance which made the war and turned it into a war against the world. In many a war before this the British infantry have saved their country and other countries than their own by their "backs to the wall."

FLIER TELLS PLANS TO ENCIRCLE GLOBE

Vedrines Landed on Paris Roof as "Stunt" to Advertise Projected Trip.

FEARED POLICE, NOT PERIL

By WALTER DURANTY.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—The nerviest "stunt" in the history of aviation was performed in Paris at 12:45 o'clock this afternoon when the famous French airman, Jules Vedrines, landed in a little old-fashioned Caudron biplane in a cockpit of 30 yards by 12, on the roof of the six-story building of a big dry goods store in the Galerie Lafayette.

I was sitting on the terrace of the Boulevard Café, when the roar of an airplane engine suddenly announced that a machine was flying dangerously low. A second later the plane swooped down, skimming the houses of the rue de la Chaussée Antin—right in the centre of the city—and slid along, seeming about to crash at any minute, toward the Lafayette store.

Running down the street in pursuit, I saw the pilot rise to avoid a huge sky sign on the front of the building, and plunge behind it. The main entrance was closed, but a window-cleaner informed me that the door in a side street was likely to be open. There I found a group of a dozen men, five or six armed with cameras, and jumped to the conclusion that it was a daring cinema stunt.

Before it was possible to get an accurate explanation, there was a rush of rapid steps on the iron staircase, and Vedrines appeared in a civilian Knickerbocker suit, with his airman's helmet and goggles, to be immediately embraced and surrounded by his excited friends.

Posed for Camera Men.

After brief but thorough posing for his photograph, the airman and the rest of the party adjourned to a nearby café, where I was able to question him. He said:

"You have heard all this stuff about a 250,000-franc prize for flying across the Atlantic. Well, I have a much bigger scheme than that if I can get proper backing. My idea is to fly around the world. I should begin with a tour of Africa, then go east to India. From India I should fly via the Straits Settlements to Australia—there is a pretty big jump thereabout, but I believe I could manage it. Back from Australia I should fly by the same way and on to Japan, then via Siberia across the Behring Strait to Alaska and down the coast to San Francisco.

"The transcontinental trip to New York would be easy, and the same from New York to Newfoundland. Thence I should fly to Iceland; from Iceland to Ireland and England, and so home again across the Channel. I have worked out the whole scheme carefully, and reckon it would take three or four months, allowing for stoppages—or perhaps less. But it is perfectly feasible, given the nerve and sufficient backing. Of course it would cost a good deal of money, but it should be worth it, either from a business or national viewpoint."

I gathered that Vedrines had risked his neck this morning as a sort of gigantic advertisement of his projected flight, and I suggested:

"Why don't you apply to the French Government?"

May Be Fined for Feat.

The airman grinned broadly and replied:

"What do you think they would say to me at the War Office if I went in and asked them for a couple of million francs to undertake a scheme of this kind? Why, don't you know they'll take 16 francs fine off me as it is for breaking regulations by landing in the city precincts? Anyhow, I've been able to do it without police interference. I meant to start at daybreak, but it was so terribly foggy that I was forced to wait until now.

"About noon, when the fog showed no signs of lifting, I began to think there was a squad of policemen hidden behind the viaduct at Issy le Moulineaux, whence I started, putting up an artificial fog screen like those we used to have in batties, to prevent my getting away. Then the sun broke through the clouds. I jumped at the chance, and three minutes later I was safe and sound on the Lafayette roof.

"There was one nervous moment when I ran into a fogbank over the Eiffel Tower and felt sure I should never find the way to propel by. But luckily I ran out of it over the river and landed without a scratch or a shadow of difficulty."

The most amazing part of the performance was that it was accomplished on an old pre-war model with an 80-horsepower revolving Rhone engine, now hopelessly out of date. The wing stretch of the upper plane was slightly over 11 yards, thus giving the pilot the narrowest possible margin for a successful landing.

But it must be remembered that Vedrine's record during the war, which won him the Military Medal and War Cross with several stars, was not confined to bringing down boches in combat. For eighteen months he was employed on the less spectacular but even more hazardous work of landing secret agents behind the German lines. It was this, he told me, that gave him the idea of landing on a narrow roof so as to draw the attention of the public to his program, which was hardly needed in virtue of his pre-war exploits as a cross-country flier.

Escaped a German Trap.

"On one occasion the boches had got wind of my plans and run a barbed wire across the field where I was supposed to land near the Belgian frontier," he said. "It was midnight, but luckily there was a bright moon, and just as I was about to ground the plane I spotted the glint of metal wires. I lifted the plane for a moment, but it was too late. There was a space of perhaps 25 yards square where the landing was possible, and I just plumped down thereupon.

"One wire ran across the meadow, almost touching my screw. It was the work of a moment to cut it, and as I jumped back into my seat I saw figures runnning up some hundred yards on the right. They shouted, but we had a clear space to get away. My pilot twirled the screw, and somehow scrambled into the machine, just as the boches fired for the first time. I drove right ahead, and jumped the next wire an inch or so to clear. Then I wheeled and gave those boches a round from my machine gun so as to teach them hospitality for the future.

"We got home all right, but my secret agent retired from that game for good. He said the trenches might be muddier, but it was a more peaceful life."

In answer to my question, Vedrines declared he had practised for two or three days landing in a space 20 yards square, and had found it comparatively easy.

"I've been horribly nervous, though," he added. "I couldn't sleep a wink last night. I was not nervous about the stunt itself, of course, but I was so afraid that those darned police would get wind of it and stop the whole business."

If nerve be the principal asset for flying across the Atlantic, to say nothing of a trip around the world, Jules Vedrines is certainly qualified.

BERLIN PROTEST TO SOVIET.

Note Accuses Bolshevist Government of Supporting Spartacides.

BERNE, Jan. 20.—The German Government has sent a note to the Russian Bolshevist Government protesting against the support given the Spartacides by the Bolsheviki.

The German Government declares it is in position of "irrefutable proofs" of the attitude of the Bolsheviki and says that the revolutionists who intended "to overcome the German people" were paid with money officially supplied by the Russian authorities. Russian official representatives in Germany, it is said, took an active part in the revolutionary movement.

The note says that the German Government will take vigorous measures against the Russians who aided the insurgents and are still supporting them.

ALLEGED RED NOTE TO THE PRESIDENT

CHARGES BREACH OF FAITH

Says American Government Is Not Carrying Out Its Benevolent Promises to Russia.

An alleged note from the Russian Soviet Government to President Wilson is being circulated anonymously in this city, in which the American Government is accused of failing to carry out benevolent promises to Russia and of aiding counter-revolutionaries by means of the expeditions to Archangel and Vladivostok.

There is nothing in the form in which the note is being circulated to indicate its genuineness or to lift it above the character of Bolshevist propaganda in this country. The only word of explanation outside of the text of the alleged note is this:

"On Oct. 24, 1918, the following note was handed in by the People's Commissary for Foreign Affairs Tchitcherin to the Norwegian Attaché in Moscow, Mr. Christiansen, for transmission to President Wilson."

The note begins by reviewing expressions of sympathy and good intentions toward Russia in various addresses by President Wilson and asserts that, instead of aiding Russia, the various moves of the United States have been in the way of attempts to thwart and coerce the existing Russian Government.

The note proposes that President Wilson adopt as the basis of the League of Nations the repudiation by all nations of their national debts, or such parts of them as can be traced to military expenses. After asserting that American capitalists are preparing to exploit China and Siberia, and if necessary, to fight Japan for the opportunity to make profits in these fields, the alleged note continues:

"Knowing this, you will have to agree with us that the factories, mines, and banks must not be left in the hands of private persons, who have always made use of the vast means of production created by the masses of the people to export products and capital to foreign countries in order to reap super-profits in return for the benefits forced on them, their struggle for spoils resulting in imperialistic wars.

"We propose, therefore, Mr. President, that the League of Nations be based on the expropriations of the capitalists of all countries. In your country, Mr. President, the banks and the industries are in the hands of such a small group of capitalists that, as your personal friend, Colonel Robins, assured us, the arrest of twenty heads of capitalistic cliques and the transfer of the control, which by characteristic capitalistic methods they have come to possess, into the hands of the masses of the world is all that would be required to destroy the principal source of new wars.

"If you will agree to this, Mr. President—if the sources of future wars will thus be destroyed, then there can be no doubt that it would be easy to remove all economic barriers, and that all peoples, controlling their means of production, will be vitally interested in exchanging the things they do not need for the things they need. It will then be a question of an exchange of products between nations, each of which produces what it can best produce, and the League of Nations will be a league of mutual aid of the toiling masses. It will then be easy to reduce the armed forces to the limit necessary for the maintenance of internal safety.

"We know very well that the selfish capitalist class will attempt to create this internal menace, just as the Russian landlords and capitalists are now attempting, with the aid of American, English, and French armed forces, to take the factories from the workers and the land from the peasants. But if the American workers, inspired by your idea of a League of Nations, will crush the resistance of the American capitalist as we have crushed the resistance of the Russian capitalists, then neither the German nor any other capitalists will be a serious menace to the victorious working class, and it will then suffice, if every member of the Commonwealth, working six hours in the factory, spends two hours daily for several months in learning the use of arms, so that the whole people will know how to overcome the internal menace.

"And so, Mr. President, though we have had experience with your promises we nevertheless accept as a basis your proposals about peace and about a League of Nations. We have tried to develop them in order to avoid results which would contradict your promises, as was the case with your promise of assistance to Russia. We have tried to formulate with precision your proposals on the League of Nations in order that the League of Nations should not turn out to be a league of capitalists against the nations.

"Should you not agree with us, we have no objection to an 'open discussion of your peace terms,' as the first point of your peace program demands. If you will accept our proposals as a basis we will easily agree on the details.

"But there is another possibility. We have had dealings with the President of the Archangel attack and the Siberian invasion, and we have also had dealings with the President of the League of Nations peace program. Is not the first of these—the real President—actually directing the policies of the American capitalist Government? Is not the American Government rather a government of the American corporations, of the American industrial, commercial and railroad trusts, of the American banks—in short, a government of the American capitalists? And is it not possible that the proposals of this Government about the creation of a League of Nations will result in new chains for the peoples, in the organization of an international trust for the exploitation of the workers and the suppression of weak nations?"

SAW BIG RED ARMY MOVING OFF TO WAR

Swiss Professor Tells of Vast Preparations and of Bolshevist Officers' Boastings.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Jan. 20.—A Swiss professor, M. Philippe Jeanneret, who has just arrived here from Russia after successfully passing through Bolshevist lines, has a remarkable tale to tell of the offensive of Trotzky's armies which are now on the march to invade Poland and Germany. M. Jeanneret is able from personal observation to give reliable information concerning the strength and composition of the Bolshevist forces and the plans of their leaders.

"On my journey from Kazan to Moscow," he reports, "I traveled in company of several Bolshevist staff officers. Like most of Trotzky's military henchmen, they were Letts. However, they treated me very politely and readily answered my questions.

"Trains full of soldiers and loaded with guns, airplanes, and ammunition passed us in uninterrupted succession. I expressed astonishment at this vast display of military power. They replied that the Bolshevist Government entertained great plans of revolutionary conquest, and that it was raising an immense army to carry them out.

"'We have a million men today,' they declared, and in six months' time we shall have more than doubled our strength. The Hungarians will soon join us, for Hungary is ripe for a proletarian revolution. From Budapest the red flag will be carried into Austria.

"'We are now on the march to support the Bolsheviki in Berlin. As soon as our armies cross the German frontier the greater part of Germany, and certainly all of Prussia, will rally around the banners of Bolshevism. Then we shall have millions of trained German soldiers at our disposal and experience no difficulty in the organization of an army of 5,000,000 men with which to invade and overwhelm Western Europe.

"'The Germans will eagerly seize upon the opportunity thus offered them to drive the Allies from their territory and escape from the crushing peace terms they would otherwise be forced to accept, for they still refuse to admit they have been fairly vanquished on the field of battle. For them an alliance with us will be immediate revanche, and even former Pan Germans and Junkers will fight in our ranks with enthusiasm against the British and French.

"'We have plenty of money and are confident we can realise our aims, for Europe is in a state of absolute disorganization and confusion, and our armies will not long encounter serious opposition.'

"Bolshevist officers certainly intended to impress me by their boasting, but the warlike preparations, which I witnessed from the train on the trip to Moscow, bore out many of their statements."

BOLSHEVIKI SLOW UP AT POLISH FRONTIER

Advance of Terrorists Continues To Be Marked by Murder and Rapine.

WARSAW, Jan. 18, (Associated Press.)—Bolshevist troops have slackened their advance at the Polish frontier. The Germans are delaying their evacuation of Grodno for several days, although General Falkenhayn has retired to Suwalki and General Hoffman has gone to Koenigsberg.

Polish leaders allege that the Germans are selling arms to the Bolsheviki under the pretense of aiding the "Society for Provisioning Ukraine." In Lithuania and Ukraine the Bolsheviki are issuing proclamations that they have come to restore order. Dispatches state, however, that Bolshevist soldiers have been seen carrying banners inscribed with the words "Long Live the Red Terror" and "Death to Nonworkers."

Men have been arrested at Vilna and other places and have been released later, it is said, on payment of sums ranging from 50 to 50,000 rubles, the size of the ransom being in proportion to the terror of the victim and his power to pay. The Bolsheviki are especially bitter against the Poles, it being reported that the declaration of a holy war against Poland by the Moscow Government makes it the "right and duty of every Bolshevik to kill the Poles as enemies of mankind." There are fewer burning houses that formerly, but it is charged that, where houses are spared, their inmates are slain. "We have saved the nest, but destroyed the birds," is a remark attributed to one Bolshevist leader.

Miss Shebeko, a sister of a member of the Imperial Council, succeeded in escaping from Mohilev and has reached Warsaw. She says that she and two aged aunts were driven from their home, which was turned over to peasants. They were allowed one tiny room, from which the lock of the door had been removed. A few bits of furniture were given them with the admonition: "You must understand that this belongs to the nation." They considered themselves fortunate, as many of their neighbors were massacred. Two brothers living in Serdowski, she said, were tortured to death and their wives and little children were mutilated.

An officer of the Polish Legion who went to visit Serdowski is alleged to have been murdered because he wore epaulets, which are forbidden by the Bolsheviki. Miss Shebeko says that this murder aroused the indignation of certain Jewish members of the local soviet. She says the sentence was finally approved when it was learned that the officer knew how to read and write. One of the speakers at the hearing was reported to have declared: "There will be perfect equity in the world only when nobody knows how to read and write."

Miss Shebeko says that many well-bred women in Russia have committed suicide through fear of outrage. Many of those escaping from the country are disguised in old clothes and hide the marks of refinement on their hands and faces with dirt.

BERNE, Jan. 20.—The German military command in announcing the capture of Mitau by the Bolsheviki said that the advancing Russians also had occupied Bohelant, Schaulan, Tukkum, and Goldutz, in the region west and southwest of Riga.

GERMAN VOTE SHOWS SOCIALIST STRENGTH

Fehrenbach, former President of the Reichstag, and Dietrich, Haass, and Wirth, members of that body.

In Württemberg Mathias Erzberger, Friedrich von Payer, former Vice Chancellor; Adolph Gröber, and Herr Kehl were elected.

National Liberals Submerged.

The first results are too incomplete to permit of any opinion being expressed as to the significance of the election, but the old National Liberty Party has virtually disappeared in Baden and Württemberg, where the Centrists, Majority Socialists, and German Democrats have been successful.

The Grand Duke of Hesse had himself inscribed on the lists under his old title, showing, says the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger, "that Louis of Brabant, as he is called by the present Government, does not recognize his deposition."

Somewhat of a sensation was caused in Berlin on Sunday, when the nuns from the Catholic Lyceum in Lindenstrasse marched to the polling booths in a group.

For the purpose of the election Germany was divided into 38 districts, which theoretically would elect 433 representatives to the National Assembly. However, as elections were not held in Alsace-Lorraine, the number was reduced by twelve from this cause, and it was still further reduced by the fact that as Posen is occupied by Polish troops elections there were impossible.

Electors were permitted to strike out a name or names on a ballot, but could not insert others to replace them. The voting, under the German scheme, is based on proportional representation, so that each party elects representatives in proportion to the vote cast.

RIOTERS TRY TO SEIZE BERLIN BALLOT BOXES

Beaten in Fighting, Copenhagen Hears—Several Killed in Hamburg Demonstrations.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Rioting occurred in Berlin last night after the Spartacides had attempted to destroy the ballot boxes used in Sunday's election, an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen says.

The Spartacides were repulsed everywhere. Fighting took place, it is reported, in Wilhelmstrasse and Hedemannstrasse and at the Hallesche Tor. The Soartacides also made an attempt to storm the office of the Vorwärts.

Disorders in Hamburg, in which several persons were killed and others wounded, are reported in dispatches by way of Zurich. The disorders were incident to demonstrations in connection with the demand for the release of sailors who had been imprisoned by the Government as the outcome of previous disturbances.

Demonstrants from the Lohberg coal mines forced an entrance into the polling booths at Dinslaken, Rhenish Prussia, and seized the ballot boxes and the registers of electors.

BERLINERS EAGER TO CAST BALLOTS

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Jan. 19. (Via Copenhagen.)—Never has Berlin's population displayed such intense interest in any election as in today's. When at 9 o'clock the polling places opened queues a block long were already waiting and increasing constantly.

In the early morning women decidedly predominated, while as the day wore on men came in larger numbers.

Though the whole performance of voting could be accomplished in the average time of 15 seconds, some voters had to wait an hour or more before they got inside the polling places. The principal change there was that one of the election officials in each case was a woman. The voters received an envelope within which he placed his ticket and this he himself deposited in a large tin box.

Despite this expeditious method it seemed that many voters of the more populous districts would have to be turned away.

There was hardly any electioneering near the polling places, and the voters awaiting their turns were singularly taciturn concerning their intentions. At one place, Schoenberg, a woman of 80 years appeared at 9:30 o'clock with a ticket in her trembling hand.

"You may laugh at an old fool like me," she said to the waiting voters in quite a cheerful tone, "but I am so glad I have lived to see this day of woman's emancipation in Germany. I shall die happy now after casting my first and probably my last vote."

She did not have to wait for her turn, but was ushered in at once.

Housewives, pleading that it was necessary for them to go home to prepare dinner, often received precedence. But male voters were inexorable toward young and pretty women.

"If you insist on the same rights, you can't claim extra privileges," they were told; "and, besides, we can't afford to lose time."

At every polling box were posted from two to ten soldiers. Besides, the various parties had men watching, who seemed determined not to brook any interference with the voting.

At the headquarters of the various parties, quite an American activity prevailed. Indeed, the campaigning continued even today, airplanes still throwing millions of flying leaves which, because of the great height, only became visible long after the airplane disappeared, and looked like immense flocks of birds descending on the city, which has been snowed under by continuous paper showers for three days.

Between bill posters of the various parties regular wars were carried on. They slapped their highly-colored bills on anything—windows, wagons, street cars, and the walls of houses.

Hardly had the Deutsche Demokratische bill poster disappeared around the corner when the Deutsche Volkspartei's paste agent came along, covering over the whole row of the Democratic Citizens' posters yet wet from the brush, and supplanting them with a poster representing a man walking with his family to the polling place with another poster bearing in large black letters the Prussian command: "Go at once and vote for Kahl," meaning the Deutsche Volkspartei's ticket headed by Kahl. This in turn was supplanted by a red-hooded Prussian eagle with a red ticket in his beak to be deposited in the ballot box for the Socialist party. It was quite evident that the three Volksparteis spent most of their campaign money in this fashion.

At former German elections the results usually would be made known on the same day, but the complicated new election system will probably require several days for the counting.

RHINELAND VOTING QUIET.

But American Wireless Picks Up Reports of Many Riots Elsewhere.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COBLENZ, Jan. 19.—Election day passed quietly in the Rhineland.

The people took the selection of candidates for the National Assembly very soberly and seriously. It appears that a large number went to the polls, including many women. The polls were open from noon to 8 P. M., so that at the hour this is written, 7 P. M., it is impossible to give any results, although the victory of the Centrist party in Coblenz is taken as assured.

The Social Democrats will probably be a poor second. Royalists are voting the Centrist ticket. The Centrist slate will probably be victorious in all occupied Germany, the Rhineland and Westphalia being strongholds of the Catholic party.

In Coblenz more women than men voted. Our wireless has picked up reports of election riots in many places in the interior of Germany.

VOTED UNDER MACHINE GUNS.

Troops Guard Count in Berlin—Fear Holding Assembly Elsewhere.

BERLIN, Jan. 19, (Associated Press.)—The election passed without any serious disturbances in Berlin, but rumors that the Spartacides intended to interfere with the counting of the ballots resulted in all polling places being occupied by soldiers when the voting ended. There was some shooting around the Vorwärts and other newspaper buildings late in the evening, but it was not of a serious character.

It is estimated that no less than seven divisions of troops were placed at the disposal of the Government for the purpose of protecting the polling places. A machine-gun squad was in position within a hundred feet of each voting place, while strong military police patrols were also on guard.

Indications are that a very heavy vote was cast. In some districts in Berlin 90 per cent. of the registered voters had cast their ballots before 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

The Majority Socialists are reported to have distributed 30,000,000 campaign dodgers. The entire apparatus of the Government was set in motion for their campaign, which was easily the most effective of any carried on.

In addition to having the strategic advantage of governmental control, the Scheidemann party was more adept at campaigning than the bourgeois factions, to whom the game under present conditions was somewhat new. The Independent Socialists confined their attempts at vote-getting to public meetings.

The German Democratic Party carried on an active house-to-house canvass. The Conservatives, Clericals, and National Liberals proved themselves comparative tyros in campaigning methods, relying chiefly on the party newspaper organs.

The municipal government of Greater Berlin has protested to the Ebert Cabinet against the proposal to convene the National Assembly elsewhere than in Berlin.

FRAMING NEW CONSTITUTION.

German Republic's Cabinet to be Responsible to Reichstag.

LONDON, Jan. 20, (via Montreal.)—Details of the proposed new constitution for Germany drawn recently at a conference of widely known authorities on constitutional law, including Hugo Preuss, State Secretary of the Interior in the Ebert Government, are given in an official wireless dispatch sent out from Berlin and picked up here.

According to this draft the President will represent the nation, but declarations of war or conclusions of peace are to rest with the Reichstag. Treaties with foreign States are to require the Reichstag's assent. As soon as a League of Nations, an object of which is the exclusion of secret treaties, has been formed, all treaties with the League, it is provided, shall require the assent of the Reichstag.

Something to remember about Real Estate Mortgages

THE trend of real estate development away from a certain locality may have a serious effect upon property carrying mortgages that are included among trust securities.

It is the aim of the Mercantile to watch such tendencies and see that the mortgages are reduced to a point where the amount invested bears as low a proportion to the value of the property as when the investment was originally made.

The opportunities of the Mercantile for securing early and reliable information on realty matters are numerous—plainly they are greater than with an individual trustee.

The officers of the Mercantile invite inquiry concerning any branch of trust administration.

NAMES 36 TO STUDY POST-WAR PROBLEMS

ELKUS MAY BE CHAIRMAN

Board Will Consider Food, Labor, and Tax Conditions and Military Training.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 20.—Governor Smith, in a special message to the Legislature tonight, named his reconstruction committee which will attempt to solve the post-war problems facing the State. The committee comprises thirty-six members, and includes some of the most influential men and women in the State. There are five women members. Abram I. Elkus of New York, who heads the list, undoubtedly will be chosen Chairman, as Governor Smith said tonight he would be pleased with his selection.

In his message the Governor outlined the duties and powers of the commission. The members will serve without compensation, but the Governor asks the Legislature to appropriate $75,000 for payment of necessary clerical assistance.

Among the chief problems put up to the commission tonight by Governor Smith are, the immediate examination of the State military training laws; housing conditions of the State; taxation; food problems with a view to increasing the productive and distributive facilities of the State and lowering the cost of foodstuffs; employment; public health and the necessity of speeding up public works to meet unemployment conditions.

The commission is empowered to create for its own use advisory bodies and local branches wherever such are found useful. The Governor requests all social and civic organizations to place at the disposal of the commission any information or recommendations concerning problems under consideration. The services of any State department or of experts on the Faculty of any State university are placed at the disposal of the commission by Governor Smith.

The commission is asked, as one of its first duties, to examine the laws passed as emergency measures, the appropriations made for the work required by those statutes and the expenditures made under them. Examination of the State military training laws, with especial reference to the proposed national laws for universal military training, will be taken up by the committee immediately after its organization which will probably be effected this week. On this point, the Governor said in his measure:

"The commission must weigh the facts and determine whether it will be necessary for the youth of the State to undergo special military training as a State service, in addition to the national training, which Federal legislation purposes. On the basis of such careful investigation and consideration I desire the commission to recommend amendments that may be needed or any other action which the commission may deem suitable."

To Study Food Problems.

Food of every kind should be made available at decreased prices, the Governor contends in commissioning the board to study these problems, " with a view to capitalizing for permanent use the lessons the war has brought home to us and increase the productive and distributive facilities of the State in cooperation with State and local agencies organized for similar purposes."

Co-ordination of State resources with Federal, municipal, and private resources is most important, the Governor urges, in the solution of the employment problem. The public is requested to apprise the commission of unemployment that may come to its attention. The commission also is committed to dealing with any labor crisis which may arise during the period of readjustment.

The Federal proposal, as embodied in what is known as the "Soldiers' Settlement Act," will be considered by the commission, as will the suggestion of Secretary of Labor Wilson, that necessary public works be speeded up to meet unemployment conditions.

In concluding his message the Governor said:

"More than all I enjoin upon the commission such speed as may be consistent with thoroughness, in order that situations demanding immediate relief be remedied as soon as possible. The commission is directed to utilize all available material in the possession of special agencies or State Departments to this end. I shall rely upon the commission for advice and counsel in all of the matters mentioned, and shall hope to receive early reports of progress and recommendations for action."

BERNSTORFF'S LAMENT OVER COLONEL HOUSE

'No More Honest Pacifist Ever Existed'—Opposed Blockade, Ex-Ambassador Says.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Jan. 20, (via Copenhagen.)—The Tageblatt, publishing an appreciation of Colonel House by ex-Ambassador von Bernstorff, based apparently on the false report of Colonel House's death, who is personally acquainted with the Colonel, says he was the eyes and ears of President Wilson, and Bernstorff knew through his own experience how well Colonel House kept President Wilson informed on the European situation. Even his first trip to Berlin was undertaken in the interest of peace, as Bernstorff can testify from a personal conversation with Colonel House. In the Winter of 1916 and 1917, when President Wilson proclaimed his program of peace without victory, Colonel House was the President's earnest collaborator. "No more honest pacifist ever existed," says Count von Bernstorff. "He was just the man to fight for Wilson's peace program. He hated war because he considered it contrary to human ideals. He considered the war profiteers a most despicable lot, and never bought any munition stocks.

"He told me repeatedly he had just as energetically protested in London against the British blockade as the U-boat war, and couldn't believe either method would lead to a decision. The result would be nameless hatred, neutralising all efforts for peace. I, as a German, must admit that House was quite correct in much he said in this respect.

"The war psychosis spoiled many honest people's judgment, but I can't believe that House looked at the peace problem from a different point of view previously. He was too matter-of-fact, too passionless. We may, therefore, assume that he stood for peace, justice, and an international league till the last moment.

"The supreme cause of conciliation among nations loses in House its stanchest champion. I deeply deplore that I did not see this dear friend once more, and that he did not live to see the perfection of his grand ideas."

Colonel House Takes a Drive.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—Colonel E. M. House, who was confined to his bed last week, was so improved today that he was able to take an automobile drive. He expects to resume his duties in connection with the American Peace Delegation within a few days.

COBLENZ SITUATION BETTER

Coal and Food Outlook Improves—Unemployment Is Being Solved.

COBLENZ, Jan. 19, (Associated Press.)—Efforts to reduce the coal shortage in the Coblenz region continue, and it is believed that the unemployment soon will be solved.

The food situation is improving slowly. It is announced that on Feb. 1 the weekly meat ration will be increased from 100 to 200 grammes, with a special issue only to the sick and day laborers in mines and on railways.

Arrangements are in prospect, according to reports here, by which the American Army of Occupation eventually will be taken home by way of the Rhine to Rotterdam or some German port for embarkation. The plans for troop transportation on the Rhine call for a large number of barges, and also for the use of all available river steamers.

Meanwhile efforts are under way to perfect a plan to bring American army supplies up the Rhine to Coblenz from Rotterdam, thus obviating the long rail haul across France.

SCHWAB VISITS THIRD ARMY.

Steel Man, at Coblenz, Says He Is Only on Pleasure Trip.

COBLENZ, Jan. 20.—Charles M. Schwab, former Director of America's shipbuilding program, visited the American sector yesterday.

Mr. Schwab said there was nothing official about his trip, it being a recreation. He remarked upon the order throughout the Third Army sector. Despite it being Election Day, our military police found no disorder anywhere.

COBLENZ, Jan. 19, (Associated Press.)—American engineers who have inspected the coal mines in the Lens region of Northern France estimate that it will be two years before the mines are again in full operation, according to Charles M. Schwab, who has arrived in Coblenz after visiting Belgium and the battlefields of France. The engineers told Mr. Schwab that many mines were flooded and that conditions in the region were generally bad.

Mr. Schwab, who was on his way to Paris, was compelled to spend last night in Coblenz because his automobile broke down. As all the hotels had been taken over by the army, he had to apply to the billeting officer for accommodations.

SEEK JOBS FOR SOLDIERS.

N. Y. War Camp Service Working with U. S. Employment Forces.

The administrative heads of the New York War Camp Community Service met yesterday to devise plans for co-operating with the United States Employment Service in finding jobs for discharged soldiers and sailors. After considering the results of a month's survey of the field, the demand, and the types of men who could be supplied, it was decided that the war camp will assume the responsibility for placing men with firms employing from ten to 500 men, while the Federal service will handle opportunities with firms employing more than 500 persons. Special committees of business men and employers fitted to give vocational advice will serve at each reemployment headquarters as its committee.

The W. C. C. S. investigators have discovered that most of the men want better jobs than they had before, and every effort is being made to help them get them. Every employer in the city will be informed of the men waiting reemployment and given opportunity to select from the weekly lists the men he needs.

PEACE CONFERENCE DUEL THREATENED

Paris Journalist Challenges a Colleague Over Publicity Dispute.

PRESS DECISION PLEASES

But One Paper Complains That the First Day's Treatment of Writers Was Comic.

By WALTER DURANTY.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—It looks as if the Peace Conference were about to be sullied by bloodshed. A well-known French journalist, St. Blanchard of the Journal, has challenged to a duel Gustave Tery of L'Oeuvre. The cause bell is the severity of Tery's comments on St. Blanchard's attitude as one of the three French press representatives on the Interallied Press Committee, by whose efforts the admission of the press to the full sittings of the conference was obtained.

Tery disclaims warlike intentions, but asserts that he will meet his adversary on the battleground of the court-martial which will soon try Senator Humbert, the former director of the Journal, on the charge of communication with the enemy. He adds viciously:

"St. Blanchard will doubtless be there anyhow, to explain how he came to sign the famous article about Hearst in the Journal, which led to the discovery of Bolo's conspiracy."

L'Humanité—like L'Oeuvre, an Opposition newspaper—criticises the lack of energy on the part of St. Blanchard and his two colleagues at the press meeting, and terms them "partisans of the censorship."

But the agreement of the authorities to admit the press representatives gives general satisfaction to the French press. One writer, however, in the Petit Parisien complains about the quality of the accommodation yesterday in the Foreign Office conference chamber, saying:

"It would perhaps be preferable to give the newspapermen a place from which it would be possible to see and hear something. The way they treated us yesterday was a joke—funny, perhaps, but hardly worth repetition. At the same time, considering that the conference is being held in Paris, we might suggest that the documents handed out to French journalists be written in French instead of English."

15 YEARS FOR SEDITION.

Brooklyn Dentist Sentenced for His Seditious Speech.

Morris Zucker, a dentist, of 468 Saratoga Avenue, Brooklyn, who was convicted last week of making seditious utterances in a speech in the Brownsville Labor Lyceum on Nov. 28 last, was sentenced by Federal Judge Garvin in Brooklyn yesterday to serve fifteen years in the Federal penitentiary at Baltimore on each of four counts in the indictment against him, the sentences to run concurrently. In passing sentence Judge Garvin said:

"Today there is nothing more important to the country than that its citizens be loyal, and disloyalty to the United States will not be tolerated. It developed during the trial that on the evening the words were uttered you were warned and despite that warning you made the address which resulted in your conviction on this charge. The court would be remise in its duty if it failed at this time to take such steps as will prevent your repeating the offense for some time to come."

Zucker is 54 years old. His wife, with an infant, was in court when he was sentenced and became hysterical.

The others in the list are the chaplain referred to above and the men who live in New York City or State. Their names, adresses, and the specific acts for which they have been cited are:

Chaplain Coleman F. O'Flaherty, 28th Infantry (deceased). For extraordinary heroism in action near Very on Oct. 3. He displayed conspicuous gallantry in administering to the wounded under terrific fire, exposing himself at all times, to reach their side and give them aid. In the performance of this heroic work he was killed. Next of kin, Miss Mary O'Flaherty, cousin, Mitchell, S. D.

Lieut. Earl C. Schermerhorn, 328th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Cornay, between Oct. 9 and 10. After successfully driving off the enemy his attacking force was counter-attacked and surrounded. The officers in charge decided to surrender to the greatly superior numbers, but Lieutenant Schermerhorn, refusing to do so, made his way to our lines through deadly enemy fire, although severely wounded while doing so. Next of kin, Mrs. Jennie S. Schermerhorn, Box 147, Fishers Island, N. Y.

Sergt. Harry Grover O'Connor, Headquarters Detachment, 78th Division. For extraordinary heroism in action near Saint Juvin on Oct. 15. He volunteered and went from his division headquarters to one of the regiments in line to obtain much-needed information and arrange for liaison. He covered the distance of six kilometers through shell fire three times before the unit was found, and while returning with the information was seriously wounded by a shell, which mortally wounded two companions. He gave water and first aid to the two men and dragged himself down the road until he met a soldier, whom he sent for an ambulance. After reaching the hospital and having his wounds dressed, he left the hospital without the knowledge of the attendants and delivered the information to his division headquarters in person. Home address, Thomas O'Connor, father, Wayland, N. Y.

Capt. Christopher W. Ford, Air Service, 103d Aero Pursuit Squadron. For repeated acts of extraordinary heroism in action near Rheims on March 27, and near Armentieres on May 21. Near Rheims on March 27 he, while on a patrol with two other pilots, led his formation in an attack on eight enemy planes. After 20 minutes of fighting the American formation shot down three German machines, of which one was destroyed by this officer. Near Armentieres on May 21 he again led a patrol of six planes in attacking twenty enemy aircraft. The attack resulted in 10 individual combats. Captain Ford shot down one hostile plane and, with his patrol routed the others. Home address, Mrs. Harriet Chuff, aunt, 462 West 131st Street, New York City, N. Y.

Private First Class Frank Lomonnco, Co. K, 315th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action in the Meuse-Verdun offensive on Nov. 5. In the performance of his duties as runner he made repeated journeys across areas swept by machine-gun fire, but he never hesitated in the execution of his mission. On the firing line he was of most valuable assistance in destroying a counter-attack. Home address, Peter Lomonoco, father, 87 Knickerbocker Av., Brooklyn, N. Y.

BOARD OVERRULES M'ADOO ORDER

ly prescribed that all rates under Federal control must be just and reasonable, and thus foreclosed the contention that any person, place, or commodity could be deprived of just and reasonable rates because of the way or conditions growing out of it. Nothing in the record indicates that it is necessary that the complainants must be deprived of just and reasonable rates and rate relationships in order to effectuate any of the purposes of Federal control.

"The submission herein was made prior to the signing of the armistice with the enemies of the United States. The Federal Control act, we recall, is by Section 16 thereof . . . expressly declared to be emergency legislation enacted to meet conditions growing out of war.

"If, under the doctrine of judicial notice, we are to take notice of matters which are, or ought to be, generally known within the limits of our jurisdiction as equivalent to proof, and of equal force with and as standing for the same thing as evidence, we must consider the contemporaneous effect of war upon general conditions. We must notice that, as stated by the President to the Congress, with the signing of the armistice, 'the war thus comes to an end.' We must notice that with suddenness and as of one accord the nation has turned from the active waging of war to the demobilization of military forces and the return of industries to their accustomed channels. No more than is necessary should war conditions be permitted to deprive any individual or locality of that equality of opportunity in respect to transportation which is insured alike by our fundamental economic policy and by the law.

"From a consideration of all the facts and circumstances of record, as to the present rates charged for the transportation of lumber and other forest products, from Humboldt Bay points to destinations in Eastern defined territory, Colorado common points and East, we find and conclude, as to defendants not under Federal control, that while not discriminatory within the meaning of Section 2 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, such rates are, and in the future will be, unreasonable, in violation of Section 1 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, and subject complainants and the Humboldt Bay points to undue and unreasonable prejudice and disadvantage, in violation of Section 3 of the Act to Regulate Commerce, to the extent that they exceed the rates contemporaneously in effect from California coast group points to the same destinations.

"We also find and conclude, as to the defendant carriers under Federal control and as to the Director General of Railroads, that the present rates maintained over Federally controlled railroads or in connection with such of the defendants as are not under Federal control, are, and for the future will be, unjust and unreasonable in violation of Section 10 of the Federal Control act, to the extent that they exceed the rates now in effect, or which may hereafter be maintained, from California coast group points to the same destination."

When the answer of Director General McAdoo was filed in the case before the Interstate Commerce Commission, Mr. McAdoo admitted the exercise of his powers and the making of General Order 28, and averred that all rates in force and complained of were established pursuant to that order.

The Director General claimed in his answer, the decision of the commission rendered continued, "that the lawfulness of these rates can be determined alone by the provisions of the Federal Control act, and denied that any of the rates violate the provisions of that act.

"Upon argument, one of counsel for the Director General stated: 'I desire to say that so far as it is within my power to do so, I stand entirely upon the Federal Control Act, and I shall contend that there no longer exists any such ground of challenge to a rate as discrimination, or that the shippers have been subjected to undue prejudice and disadvantage. Furthermore, I shall contend that the commission is without power or jurisdiction to at this time adjudicate this case, in view of the rate instituted by the President in General Order No. 28.'"

The opinion quotes further from the contentions made by counsel of the Railroad Administration during argument of this case before the Interstate Commerce Commission, and then says:

"The Director General has put all these lines under a uniform and co-ordinated national control, and they are not competitive. If the Director General is to be considered as having initiated the whole of these rates, in the absence of a contrary showing the rates considered as established by him from the California coast group and from other sections of the Pacific coast to these Eastern destinations may be taken as showing his estimate of the cost and value of these services, and as competent and cogent evidence as to the absolute and relative justness and reasonableness of the rates now charged from the Humboldt Bay group, transportation conditions being taken into account.

"If the Director General is to be considered as initiating the whole of these rates, then when he made them from the Oregon line to the Mexican border he was under obligation to see that they were themselves reasonable and just, and under a corelative obligation to establish rates from the Humboldt Bay points which were relatively reasonable and just, as compared with the controlling rates from the zone blanketed, contiguous and competitive area. Tested by this standard, the present lumber rates from Humboldt Bay points to the destinations in question do not conform to the requirement of the Federal Control act that all rates shall be just and reasonable."

The defendant railroads named in the case include virtually all the great lines in the federally controlled rail system from coast to coast, and the order issued by the Commission under its decision today notifies and requires all these defendant railroads "to cease and desist on or before May 15, 1919," thereafter from publishing, demanding, or collecting their present lumber rates as covered by the decision, and requires the defendant lines by May 15, to file new rates in accordance with the terms of the decision.

BIG DIAMOND FOUND IN SOUTH AFRICA

Blue-White Gem Weighing 388¼ Carats Yielded by the Jaegersfontein Mine.

MAY BE WORTH $87,000

Famous Diamonds, Including the 3,025-Carat Cullinan Stone, Came from Same Field.

LONDON, Jan. 19, (via Montreal.)—A soft blue-white diamond weighing 388¼ carats has been found at the Jaegersfontein Mine, Orange River Colony. This promises to become one of the diamond fields' historic gems.

Diamonds of soft or pale blue-white lustre have today the highest market value. The diamond weighing 388¼ carats, in its rough state, found at the Jaegersfontein Mine, is the largest stone unearthed there since the Cullinan diamond was discovered in 1905. This in its rough state weighed 3,025 carats, or 11-3 pounds. It was presented to King Edward by the Transvaal Government. Amsterdam diamond cutters made nine large stones and several smaller ones from it. The largest still weighs 516½ carats and is said to be the most valuable and brilliant diamond in human possession today.

In 1893 the same mine gave forth a stone weighing 973 carats, which was cut into ten stones, each weighing from 38 to 13 carats.

Among authenticated diamonds of great value is the Orloff, weighing 195 carats and cut in rose form. Its origin is doubtful. It was purchased from an Indian traveler in 1772 for $450,000, a title, and an annuity of $4,000, for Empress Catherine of Russia, and up to the time of the Russian revolution of March, 1917, was in the Czar's Imperial Treasury.

The Koh-i-noor, weighing 102¾ carats, belongs to the British royal family and originally came from India, where there is a tradition that it once weighed 794 carats. It had passed down the centuries through a long line of Indian Princes until the British carried it off from Punjab in 1849.

The Regent or Pitt diamond in the Paris Louvre weighs 136 carats. It is a blue-white stone valued at $2,500,000.

The Hope diamond, weighing only 44½ carats, is a blue stone valued at $125,000. Other historic or valuable stones are the Victoria, 180 carats, owned by the Nizam of Hyderabad; the De Beers, weighing 225 carats; and the Tiffany, 125. There is also the Great Mogul, cut in cone form to 270 carats.

GIBBONS DEPLORES NATIONAL PROHIBITION

Says It Means Invasion of the Home and Strikes at Sacramental Practice.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 20.—Cardinal Gibbons foresees in the enforcement of the new prohibition laws the invasion of the sacred precincts of the home by Government agents. He said today that it was very strange that men should enact legislation which struck at the very fundamentals of the Christian religion.

"I have always been in favor of strict regulation of the manufacture and sale of liquor instead of absolute prohibition," said the Cardinal, "because a strict regulation the liberation of individuals is preserved, whereas by prohibition we face legislation which in the long run cannot be carried out.

"If an early result of prohibition will be the secret and illicit manufacture and sale of bad liquor whereby the Government will be deprived of a large revenue, besides being put to enormous expense in the employment of agents in enforcing the law. Moreover, in the carrying out of the law I see also an invasion of the home, which up to now all men have agreed is a sacred, holy place. These agents may enter our homes with the violence of burglars and the immunity of officers of the law.

"To me it is very strange that after 2,000 years men should pass legislation which strikes at the very fundamentals of the Christian religion. Will not the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of wines affect those who profess the Christian religion? We have 20,000 Catholic clergymen in the United States who every day offer the sacrament of the mass. How can they perform this duty if they cannot obtain wine?

"I know I will be replied to that wine is permitted for sacramental purposes. I cannot see how this will be if the manufacture, sale, and importation of wine is prohibited.

"The law of prohibition strikes the individual liberty of worship. We permit the restricted sale of poisons, guns, &c., although the bad use of these is frequently fatal.

"Why not permit the use of wine and liquor under proper regulations?"

ALBANY MAY RATIFY.

Legislature Likely to Act on Prohibition Amendment Next Week.

ALBANY, Jan. 20.—Ratification by the New York Legislature of the Federal Prohibition Amendment may be expected next week, in the opinion of legislative leaders. It was said tonight that the campaign of the "wets" will not be sufficiently strong to prevent New York from lining up with the more than three-quarters of the States that already have made national prohibition a certainty.

Adoption of the resolution in the Assembly appears to be assured. In the Senate, where a fierce battle was expected, caucus action by the Republicans will insure the success of the "drys," it was admitted by leaders tonight. All but two or three Republican Senators were known to be committed to ratification, and the fight was to be waged over the proposition to make the resolution the subject of caucus action. This has now been determined upon, which virtually means that wet Republicans will be bound to vote with the "dry" majority.

A hearing on the ratification resolution will take place tomorrow afternoon.

CARSON CITY, Nev., Jan. 20.—The Nevada Assembly passed the Prohibition Amendment today by a vote of 33 to 3.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 20.—The temporary injunction issued by Superior Judge James M. Troutt last week at the request of the vineyardists to prevent Governor William D. Stephens certifying to the President of the United States the result of the vote of the California Legislature on the Sheppard bone-dry amendment, today was ordered by Judge Troutt to continue in effect until he and Judge George E. Crothers could determine the merits of the petition.

INDICT O'LEARY'S MAN FOR TREASON

J. W. Robinson, Once Private Secretary, Charged with Carrying Messages to Germans.

HELPS TO INVOLVE OTHERS

Once Locked Up, It Is Charged, for Making Violent Speeches on Street Corners Here.

Jay Willard Robinson, for a time private secretary and general factotum for Jeremiah A. O'Leary, was indicted yesterday by the Federal Grand Jury for treason. According to the authorities, the indictment helps to enmesh further Hermann Wessels and Albert Paul Fricke, also under indictment for treason; O'Leary, under indictment for violation of the Espionage act; Mme. Maria K. de Victorica, under surveillance at Ellis Island for the same offence, and John T. Ryan, another associate of O'Leary, who is a fugitive from justice.

Robinson is an American of English descent and was born in a small town in one of the Dakotas in 1888. His mother came to this city when he was less than 6 years old. He went through the public schools, and then became a stenographer and worked for a while for Bull, O'Leary's publication, which the Government suppressed. Later he served O'Leary alone and went about with him sometimes speaking on street corners in opposition to this country entering the war and denouncing Colonel Roosevelt and other well-known Americans. He was so violent that on one occasion the police locked him up for a night.

Either while he went about with O'Leary or with others under Government suspicion, according to the indictment, he became acquainted with all of those who eventually became notorious as pro-German or anti-English agitators. He carried messages between them, it is charged, and frequently received letters containing inclosures for those of the conspirators who did not dare receive mail directly. These letters, according to the indictment, were addressed to him at 53 Beauvoir Avenue, Summit, N. J. Robinson's labors were so well performed that it was resolved to send him to Rotterdam with messages for German agents there and have him bring back others to conspirators here.

Federal Prosecutor George Winship Taylor, who has been gathering information of Robinson's labors for more than six months, failed to get many particulars of the meetings preceding the sailing of Robinson.

Sailed from Halifax.

Robinson sailed from Halifax on the steamship American, an oil tanker, bound for Rotterdam, on March 24, 1917, about a fortnight before this country entered the great war. It is alleged in the indictment that he carried with him "secret information which it was his intention to communicate to the Imperial German Government, its officials, agents, and representatives." Then the character of these communications was described in the indictment as being "secret messages on paper containing secret and invisible writing," which Robinson well knew were messages and information from Maria K. de Victorica, otherwise called Maria Victorica, Marie de Vassiere, Maria von Kretschmann, Clarke, and Mary; and Herman Wessels, otherwise known as Carl Roediger, Carl Rediger, Haro Schroeder, von Schroeder, H. Schmidt, C. Stamm, Dillon, and Hudson."

These persons, it is alleged, were well known to Robinson as secret agents for and spies of the German Government "in the prosecution of its war." It is further alleged that messages were also conveyed by Robinson from John T. Ryan and Jeremiah A. O'Leary, who were conspiring with the others to aid Germany.

A verbal message, it is charged, was also given to Robinson to convey to the German agents which was in substance a report from Mme. de Victorica and Wessels concerning their activities here and asking for further instructions, and there was besides this verbal message which was given to Robinson by Ryan and O'Leary in directing him to make inquiries: "As to the attitude of the Imperial German Government on the question of the freedom of Ireland and what aid the Imperial German Government would be willing to render to secure that end."

While the indictment contains no information concerning the answer received through Robinson to this Irish question, Mr. Taylor said that the word brought by Robinson was that Germany pledged herself to bring up at the peace table the question of Ireland's freedom.

Made One Trip Only.

Robinson sailed from Rotterdam on June 6, 1917, on the steamship Ryndam bringing with him various messengers from the conspirators abroad. The indictment says that he did not go abroad again and the agents in Rotterdam and in other neutral points sought for a messenger who could carry messages for them. They selected Benjamin E. Benson, an American citizen, long a resident of Stockholm, and offered him good pay and all needed protection if he would serve them in this way. Mr. Benson said he would consider it and consulted the American Legation at Stockholm. At their suggestion he accepted the offer and on May 1, 1918, Mr. Benson received from the German agents four soft white collars, three white handkerchiefs, and one white tie, all of them containing dry invisible ink. To obtain the fluid ink the articles had only to be soaked in water and the liquid used for writing. Minute directions were also forwarded to him how to use the invisible ink together with 20,000 kronen as his pay.

When Robinson arrived here on June 20, 1917, with all of the messages he had received for the conspirators, he registered at the Hotel Navarre as R. J. Young. Thereafter he began meeting with O'Leary, Mme. de Victorica or her agents, with Wessels and others, and then, speaking further of his activities, the indictment reads:

"Said Jay Willard Robinson, on Aug. 17, 1917, on Broadway near Thirty-seventh Street, made a public speech in which he urged and advised a large crowd of people to oppose the sending of troops by the United States to France, the said Robinson intending thereby to assist the Imperial German Government in the prosecution of its war against the United States."

Delivered Messages at Beach.

It is also alleged that Robinson met Mme. de Victorica and O'Leary at Long Beach, where certain messages in the German interests were delivered to them. One of the letters received by Robinson at his home in New Jersey for delivery from the German agents was in invisible ink, which was deciphered after use of chemicals. It was in German, and a translation quoted in the indictment reads, in part:

"Please examine all pages of the letter sheets for secret writing. Confirm my letter No. 7 of October, sent in several copies. You and Dillon have now a free hand to take up your business activity in South America in full scope and to invest capital in the big war industries, in ship yards, &c., according to your best judgment. The plans for the obtaining of mercury in the West were especially recommended to me by persons who were well informed. In view of the gigantic ship building program of the United States, capital must preferably be invested in the ship yards there.

"The firm there is, however, for definite reasons, not to be revealed to the local banks as a shareholder in the shipbuilding companies. Your Irish friends will certainly not allow this opportunity to purchase advantageous speculative values for themselves to escape them. So much the more easily can these friends play the man of straw in this case for my firm there. Remittances are on the way. Furthermore, adequate credit has been opened for you with the South American branch firms."

The letter then advises that they get in touch with various parts of South America, and says that Brazil is a good field, but that Mexico was so disrupted as to be useless.

"You must leave no stone unturned," it said, "to secure good neutral or, better, American (no German American) cloak and to communicate to me at the very first opportunity."

It was said yesterday that Robinson, who got into touch with the German agents abroad merely as a messenger for the other conspirators here, had evidently sought to do business with them on his own account and for money solely without thought for Ireland or anything else save his own pocket. Robinson, who is in the Tombs charged with conspiring to violate the espionage act, will probably be arraigned to plead tomorrow.

LIFE SENTENCE FOR PERJURY

Sittenberg Gets Record Penalty for False Murder Confession.

A life sentence for perjury was imposed yesterday by Justice Weeks in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court upon Leo Sittenberg, alias "James Regan" and "James Burns," the Sing Sing convict, who confessed to a murder he had not committed, and whose strange mental attitude in court had furnished a psychological study that baffled medical men and lawyers. When Elizabeth Baksa was on trial in General Sessions on the charge of murdering Mrs. Helen Hamel in her home at 507 West Twenty-third Street, of which she was acquitted by a jury, Sittenberg wrote from Sing Sing prison to Judge Rosalsky asserting that the girl was innocent and that if permission was given he would appear and give the name of the murderer.

The convict, who is 29 years old, told of a series of crimes he had committed within eleven years. It was found that he had been convicted of at least four felonies, which defines him as a habitual criminal, and therefore the life sentence by the court was mandatory. Court Clerk William Penney said this sentence was a record for New York County, where a life sentence had never before been imposed except for a capital crime.

Postmaster General Burleson's recent rules, was issued tonight by the West Virginia Public Service Commission. The new schedule is suspended for 120 days, under the order.

RENO, Nev., Jan. 20.—The Nevada Railroad Commission, in an opinion and order released today, declares that Postmaster General Burleson did not comply with the Nevada Railroad Commission law in ordering telephone companies in this State to make a charge for installation of new telephones and ordered all companies operating in Nevada to disregard the Postmaster General's orders in this respect.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 20.—The State Corporation Commission issued an order annulling all the charges, rates, rules, and regulations which the Mountain State Telephone and Telegraph Company had promulgated effective tomorrow, on orders from the Postmaster General, whose authority to make rates and regulations for intrastate business is questioned by the commission. The order annuls also the order of last August prescribing charges for installing telephones. The commission stated today that the order is intended to pave the way for the refusal by patrons to pay the higher rates or to comply with the new regulations, so that the question of the Postmaster General's authority may be brought into court.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 20.—Protest against the schedule of telephone rates which becomes effective tomorrow will not be made by the Connecticut Public Utilities Commission. Chairman R. T. Higgins said that some action bearing upon the new rates had been considered but none will be taken.

BOSTON, Jan. 20.—The substitution of the new Federal telephone rates at midnight tonight, will bring the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company into conflict with the Public Service Commission of Massachusetts, which has ordered that company not to establish the new rates in this State until the commission has finished an inquiry begun on Jan. 17 and adjourned to Jan. 30. It was stated tonight that if the company disregarded this order, the matter would be taken into the courts and an injunction sought.

At the offices of the New England Company it was said tonight that so far as was known there, the new rates would become effective on the stroke of 12.

City Rates Not Affected.

The New York Telephone Company had made all preparations yesterday for the revised telephone rates throughout the country, which went into effect last midnight. The changes, however, it was announced, do not affect the present tariffs now in force in the New York City zones.

COMMERCIAL CABLE APPEALS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Appeals from Federal Court decrees dismissing proceedings instituted by the Commercial Cable Company and the Commercial Pacific Cable Company to enjoin Postmaster General Burleson from taking over their marine cables and merging them with those controlled by the Western Union Telegraph Company were filed today in the Supreme Court.

Because the suits, if permitted to take their normal course, would not be reached for argument for more than a year after being appealed, court officials expect a request will be made to have consideration expedited and a date fixed for hearing the arguments some time this term.

At the offices of the Commercial Cable Company it was said last night that the appeals taken in Washington yesterday were those which it was announced would be made immediately after Federal Judge Learned Hand had dismissed the injunction suits against Postmaster General Burleson in this city. The briefs in the appeals were prepared by Charles Evans Hughes and William W. Cook, who appeared for the Mackay interests in the original suits, and, it was said, they reiterated the company's main contention that seizure of the cables was unlawful since a state of war exists only in theory.

William J. Deegan, Secretary of the Mackay Companies, and Edward Reynolds, General Manager of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company, left last night for Washington, where they will appear today before the House Committee on Roads and Post Offices, of which Congressman John A. Moon is Chairman. It was said that Mr. Reynolds in his testimony will present some strong and new reasons why the Government should not attempt ownership of the land wires of the nation.

LLOYD GEORGE ON THE AISNE

He Also Visits Rheims and the Field of the Second Marne Battle.

By G. H. PERRIS.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—Premier Lloyd George and his daughter Megan yesterday made a tour through parts of the battlefield of the Marne and Aisne. Motoring out in the morning by way of Meaux and the main eastward highroad of Northern France, they passed through Château-Thierry and saw that, although life had been fully resumed in that beautiful old town, the heavy damage by cannon and lesser engines of war had not yet been repaired.

From this point to Dormans they followed the lovely windings of the Marne Valley, passing the points where the Americans first showed their full quality and high tide marked the last German advance.

Their car then turned northeastward through the vineyards and woods of the Mountain of Rheims, where British troops fought gallantly in the early Summer. The martyr city, as the French call it, was reached in the early afternoon. Only a hurried examination of the ruined streets and cathedral was possible, but Mr. Lloyd George saw enough to realize the courage of those who were about to begin the rebuilding of Rheims.

The return journey was made by the more northerly road running through Fismes and Soissons and thence through the Forest of Villers-Cotterets. Unfortunately, after the morning frost the temperature had risen, and the Aisne Valley was hidden in mist, but by the roadside in the little country towns and on the courtlier avenues of Soissons there were many and various traces left of the havoc of war after the Allies had done their best to clear up the fields of their effort.

And so, having made over 200 miles, in part by roads still unmended, the Prime Minister came back to Paris unobserved, as he had left it, with a new store of memories to add to those of many other such pilgrimages.

Dutch Agreements Up for Approval.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 20.—The Government has laid before the Second Chamber of the Dutch Parliament for approval conventions concluded between Holland and France, Italy, Great Britain, and the United States. To France, Italy, and Great Britain Holland grants certain credits against their treasury bills. Under the agreement with the American Government Holland will make deposits in American banks with a view to stabilizing exchange.

JOIN INDEPENDENTS IN HEARST PROTEST

Four More Societies and 75 Individuals Offer Aid in Welcoming Soldiers.

INDORSE GARDEN SPEAKERS

Citizens' Committee Also Deprecates Effort to Break Up Protest Gathering.

The Independent Citizens' Committee, organized as a protest against the membership of William Randolph Hearst on the Mayor's Committee of Welcome to Homecoming Troops, yesterday passed a resolution indorsing the remarks made by the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning and all the other speakers who assailed the publisher at the mass meeting in Madison Square Garden on Friday night. The resolution follows:

The Executive Committee indorses the sentiments expressed by the speakers at the meeting held in Madison Square Garden last Friday night. The committee deprecates the apparently organized but unsuccessful effort to break up the meeting. In spite of this effort the meeting accomplished its purpose, no speaker was prevented from finishing his speech and the resolution offered at the close expressing sympathy with the objects of the meeting was adopted overwhelmingly by a rising vote, only a small number of persons here and there in the hall remaining seated.

Four other societies and seventy-five citizens who have offered to aid in the work of welcoming the homecoming soldiers also were given out by the Executive Committee of the Independent organization yesterday. Extracts from the letters of the societies follow:

Military Order of Foreign Wars of the United States, New York Commandery: "This order is entirely in accord with your committee. We should be glad to help you in your work of welcome to the returning soldiers, sailors, and marines."

The Athenaeum Club: "We accept with much pleasure the honor of being represented on the committee to welcome the returning soldiers, sailors, and marines of the United States forces, and will co-operate with the committee for the success of the welcome to our boys."

The Beethoven Society: "It gives us great pleasure to be among those societies adding in any way to the welcome of our brave boys on their homecoming and wishing the society all success in the worthy undertaking."

St. Anthony Club: "The committee was in entire accord and sympathy with your object, and it was regretted that your letter was not received in time to take any action. If any further occasion should arise, however, in which we might be of assistance, please notify us and the matter will be given careful consideration."

Letters also had been received, it was announced, from many persons offering their support to the independent welcome. The names of seventy-five persons whose names were tabulated yesterday are:

WIRZ CASE IS CITED AGAINST EX-KAISER

Bourgeois Considers Andersonville Hanging a Precedent for Bringing Him to Trial.

PARIS, Jan. 2.—Long discussions concerning the responsibility of ex-Emperor William and other prominent Germans for crime committed in the prosecution of the war appear in the newspapers. The Matin says that, as regards the crimes committed against France, the facts already have been established by a careful inquiry which has virtually been completed. It says that several eminent jurists unanimously hold that William Hohenzollern can be prosecuted under Article 58 of The Hague Convention, which lays down rules for warfare on land. The jurists are of the opinion that the punishment must be inflicted upon those who issued the orders rather than on the subordinates who carried them out.

The Journal calls attention to the fact that there is available to the Peace Conference a Committee on Juridical Consultations, to which the opinions of the delegates regarding the responsibility of William Hohenzollern will prossibly be referred. This having been done, the committee could present plans for a formal inquiry to the conference, which, if it agreed with the committee, could issue a formal indictment.

To obtain the release of the former Emperor, the paper adds, a demand can be made on Holland by the nations about to form a League of Nations. The demand will not be for the extradition of the former Emperor, but for his surrender. The paper says it is the opinion of leading jurists that Holland, which will also form a part of the league, cannot evade the duty of surrendering the former Emperor to the other nations in the league in order that he may be brought to trial.

Leon Bourgeois, former Premier, and French authority on the League of Nations, in a statement to the Matin, cites as a precedent for the punishment of Germans of all degrees convicted of violation of the laws of war the case of Henry Wirz, who was tried by court-martial and executed after the civil war for cruelties suffered by Northern prisoners in the camp he commanded at Andersonville, Ga.

The case of Henry Wirz, the Confederate Superintendent at Andersonville Prison, has been often brought forward as a precedent to govern cases of Germans charged with cruelty to prisoners of war. British and American jurists have cited it repeatedly, but probably M. Bourgeois is the first Frenchman to draw attention to it.

Wirz, a Germas by birth, was convicted by a special military court, in session from August to October, 1865, of "maliciously, willfully, and traitorously conspiring to injure the health and destroy the lives" of Union soldiers at Andersonville, and of "murder in violation of the laws of war," and was hanged Nov. 10, 1865.

EXTRA PAY FOR SOLDIERS.

Senate Votes for 30 Days' Allowance to Discharged Men.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—With amendments authorizing the bestowal of thirty days' pay and five cents a mile traveling expenses home upon discharged officers and enlisted men, the Senate today passed and sent to conference the House bill to permit soldiers to retain their uniforms. A provision for bonuses of thirty days' pay is attached to the war revenue bill, now in conference.

The Senate also passed the War Department bill authorizing the resumption of enlistments in the regular army.

1,526 ON CRUISER HERE FROM FRANCE

Transports with 4,600 More Troops Due in Port Today After Stormy Crossing.

NEW YORK FIGHTERS HOME

Wounded Tell of Argonne Battle, Where Eddie Grant of Giants Was Killed by Germans.

Although several transports were on the list of those due to arrive yesterday, only one of them managed to make port, and that was the United States armored cruiser Pueblo, which docked at Pier 2, Hoboken, in the afternoon with 1,526 officers and enlisted men. The executive officers of the warship reported that she had left Brest on Jan. 7, and under normal weather conditions would have reached New York at least two days ago. The northwest gale blew so hard and kicked up such a big sea while the Pueblo was in Brest harbor waiting for her complement of troops that two extra anchors had to be lowered in order to hold her from drifting.

The police boat Patrol was on duty as usual with the welcoming committee and band on board and a number of Knights of Columbus, Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., and Salvation Army workers, carrying chocolates, cigarettes, and other things that American soldiers are fond of, and these they tossed to the deck of the warship when they got close alongside. The afterdeck of a cruiser is open and nearer to the water than that of the ordinary troop transport, and so it was much easier to throw things on board from the Patrol.

The troops on the Pueblo included a number of casual companies, and also the 53d ammunition train, made up of men from California and Texas, with Major Charles Hines in command. They have been in service since Sept. 12 last.

Private Chester A. Poling of 5,618 Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn, who was shot in the right arm in the Argonne forest on Oct. 12, had a lucky escape from losing his life. Four men, he said, had been sent on foot to carry a message at different times from headquarters to the front lines and all were killed. He was the fifth, he added, and got through, but the enemy nearly finished him on his return trip.

Sergeant John F. Burns of Riverdale, N. Y., a member of Co. I, 307th Infantry, said he was in the Argonne early in October, when Eddie Grant, the ex-Giant ball player, was killed close beside him. The Sergeant added that he sneaked back at night with two of the men from the company and got Grant's body, which they buried in a little cemetery a mile in the rear, known as Dead Man's Hill. Just before he was wounded in the left leg with shrapnel on Nov. 5, he said, the Germans were retreating so rapidly that his regiment had to use motor trucks to catch up to them.

Private Edward A. Kirchert, 140 Taylor Street, Brooklyn, of Company B, 308th Infantry, was with the Lost Battalion in the Argonne. He said that an epidemic of influenza started and the isolated victims, of course, had no medical attention. This resulted in a heavy mortality list, while the only water that could be obtained was from muddy shell holes. A small creek some little distance away was under the cover of a German battery and could not be approached.

The American naval transport George Washington will dock at Hoboken early today with 3,103 troops, as well as 21 officers and 350 men of the United States Navy. The Italian liner Giuseppe Verdi will arrive at her pier in Jersey City later in the day with 429 officers and men from the United States Navy bases in the Mediterranean, and the United States transport De Kalb will also dock in Hoboken with 691 troops on board.

The French liner Rochambeau, bound from Bordeaux to New York with 833 American soldiers, chiefly from Minnesota and Iowa, and 600 civilian passengers, put into Halifax yesterday, according to a telegram received by the agents of the company at 17 State Street, to take on coal. The vessel left Bordeaux at 11 P. M. on Jan. 9, and was delayed by heavy weather. The agents said last night that the Rochambeau would arrive in New York on Thursday or Friday.

The Norwegian freighter Tyr, twenty-three days out from Cardiff, and the Danish steamship Reykjavik, from Iceland, both bound for New York, were also compelled to put into Halifax yesterday to replenish their coal. Several reports were received of steamships bound for New York and Boston being forced through the same cause to call at St. Michaels in the Azores. Captains of incoming vessels report that the weather in the Atlantic during the past month has been the worst in ten years.

Colonel Harry Cutler, Chairman of the Jewish Welfare Board, announced yesterday that fifty transport workers are now being recruited at the offices, 149 Fifth Avenue, and will be placed on troopships to entertain Jewish soldiers returning from France. He said the War Department requested that each transport should carry six welfare workers, including one from the Jewish board.

Wanamaker Aids Police Reserves.

Deputy Police Commissioner Rodman Wanamaker wrote yesterday to Chief Inspector Dailly, asking for reports from commanding officers of precincts concerning complaints he had received from members of the Police Reserves of a lack of courtesy toward them by members of the regular force. "At parades or places of assemblage," the letter said, "policemen give no consideration to police reserve shields. This treatment is having bad effect on the reserves. It makes them feel they are not wanted by the police or the department." Mr. Wanamaker asked that, wherever possible, a room in the station house be assigned to the reserves. Records of the department show there were 10,000 reserves in August, and that 1,000 have dropped out. There is dissatisfaction at the delay of uniforms, although $375,000 for that purpose was collected at the police field days at Sheepshead Bay.

Grolier Club to Show Early Books.

The Grolier Club on Thursday night will hold a private view of its exhibition of early printed liturgical books, open to the public thereafter until March. In some 150 books shown, over 100 are upon vellum, and many are illuminated. Besides a Psalter printed at Mayence in 1459, by Fust & Schoeffer, the successors of Gutenberg, there are a Missal, by Jean du Pre, the first Parisian printer, a Breviary, printed at Venice in 1479, and an undated Book of Hours, printed by Caxton about 1477, possibly the first in England.

LET NEW YORK STATE STAND FOR LIBERTY!

A public hearing will be held at Albany today on the National Prohibition Amendment. The New York State Legislature will later vote on acceptance or rejection.

If New York State votes to reject the amendment, the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor will continue to mean something. If New York votes to accept this amendment, then the Statue should be taken down. Her torch will be dimmed forever.

America has grown powerful with "Liberty" as our National slogan. Are we now to substitute "Verboten"? A letter or telegram to your legislator at Albany telling him how you feel about it will be of benefit. The enemies of liberty are as active and arrogant in America today as were the Junkers in Prussia a short while ago.

No cause is lost while there is a man left to fight for it. Liberty has always needed defenders. She has always had them. No public question is settled until it is settled right. Get in touch with your legislator at once.

DRAMA

By John Corbin

The Tragic Lover.

Marquis de Priola	Leo Ditrichstein
Pierre Morain	Brandon Tynan
Brabaconne	Orlando Daly
Dr. Savieres	Walter Howe
Francesco	Adrian H. Rosley
First Gentleman	Harold Seton
Second Gentleman	Gustav Bowhan
Mme. de Valleroi	Jane Gray
Mme. Le Chesne	Lily Cahill
Mme. Savieres	Katherine Emmet
Femme de Chambre	Josephine Hamner

Having been so long the great lover, Leo Ditrichstein bids fair to become the eternal lover. His portraits of the erotic male are always artistically finished and sometimes they touch upon greatness. This is one of the times. "The Marquis de Priola" is, essentially, tragedy; but it is as perfect in its kind as "The Concert" was in comedy, and Mr. Ditrichstein's work in the title rôle will, in all probability, take rank with his work as the hero of Hermann Bahr's amiable satire. Not since Mansfield's Chevrial has our stage seen a portrait of the aging libertine as deeply psychologised, as subtle, and finished in detail and as effective theatrically.

The effect of Lavedan's play is, in fact, better than theatric; in the true sense of the word it is dramatic. Though a study of character in an extreme development, probability is not sacrificed in order to achieve any situation, truth to nature in order to exploit the virtuosity of an actor. The character which "The Concert" held up so truthfully to our genial ridicule is here presented with equal sincerity as if for clinical inspection. That the result is gripping, enthralling and ultimately shattering to nerves and emotions comes less from the skill of an accomplished technician than from the physical, psychological and even moral truth with which the portrait is rendered.

The measure of Lavedan's psychology is nowhere more evident than in the fact that he makes the mainspring of Priola's intriguing not physical but mental. His ape and toady, Brabaconne, is, if you will, l'homme moyen sensuel—and cuts a ridiculous figure enough. Priola's love of feminine conquest is founded in vanity; and it is fed by a deep cruelty, even malignancy, toward the objects of his chase—and also by a fundamental cynicism, which is the cruelty of the mind. He vaunts the fact that he has lived through the world like a torch, lighting his path with the glory of lives in conflagration and leaving a wake of black destruction. And his ultimate defeat is not physical merely, though he lies prostrate before us, a helpless paralytic; primarily, it is the defeat of whatever he possesses of mind and of heart.

His dramatic antagonist is a young man whom he has befriended from childhood and educated as his ward. It is Priola's evident purpose to bequeath him his fortune and his century-old name, of which he is proud as the name of a race of triumphant libertines. The play begins with his effort to initiate Pierre into a life of pleasure, and with his philosophy of a cynical contempt for women. Pierre admires Priola, is deeply grateful to him, even loves him; but as a pupil he is reluctant, troubled.

As a couple of Priola's intrigues develop in action, Pierre is abashed, dismayed, revolted. His remonstrance against a peculiarly cynical and malignant mode of feminine conquest throws Priola into a rage which brings on a slight stroke of paralysis. And then Pierre finds, by chance, that his own mother was among his protector's victims.

When Priola is confronted with this discovery his rage mounts again, until he overwhelms the lad with the fact that he also is a Priola, his son—and then falls, a hopeless physical wreck. Yet through it all one somehow feels that his defeat comes not so much from his own worn body and polluted blood as from the contempt of the son of whom he is somehow proud, and whom he even loves.

In the details of his performance, Mr. Ditrichstein is amazingly subtle. During the course of the play he makes love to, and triumphs over, three radically different women; and he does so in three manners, three moods, which are wholly distinct. His simulation of the first, slight paralytic stroke is almost incredibly lifelike. His arm is affected only momentarily, speedily resuming its functions; yet to the end it is never quite the same. It seems positively to have shrunk, and it carries always in its slight swing and droop, and in the inertness of the fingers, a reminder of the fate that hangs over Priola. The final access of rage and the resultant apoplectic shock have no touch of exaggeration, no trace of mere theatricism; yet they chill one to the bone. And never for a moment was the pride of the man, and whatever else he had of human dignity, obscured in theatric externals

As Pierre, Brandon Tynan is obviously miscast, being a decade or two too old and otherwise unlike the idealistic, impassioned boy which the situation requires. But otherwise the casting is admirable. As Priola's admiring toady, Orlando Daly is deliciously droll and diverting.

Of the two main objects of Priola's intrigues, Jane Grey has the part of a light and empty worldling whose motives are as vain as Priola's. Her scenes with Mr. Ditrichstein are character comedy of the first water, and Miss Grey carries them with consummate subtlety, force and humor. Lily Cahill plays the wife who has divorced Priola and remarried, and whom he is endeavoring to lure again into his net. It is a very finely drawn character, with touches of intense and fateful passion, and also of fine dignity. Miss Cahill touches every phase of it with unerring skill and great depth of emotion. As the third of the feminine trio, Katherine Emmet is wholly adequate.

The play is perhaps not a masterpiece; but it is as sound morally as it is technically; and, in addition to its never-failing dramatic interest, it is full of modish wit and character comedy.

ANNA CASE IN SONGS.

Miss Anna Case, soprano, gave a song recital at Carnegie Hall last evening. There was a large audience, much applause, encores, ushers bearing bouquets down three aisles at once, and all the other marks of a highly successful concert.

Miss Case's program was stretched over a wide range of music. An old Norwegian boat song and an old Swedish folksong were furthest removed from the American numbers which closed the program. Some old French chansons were down, and a modern "Chanson Douce," by Mme. Ohrstrom-Renard, "manuscript dedicated to Miss Case." There were two other French songs by Chauvet and one by Nerini. Grieg's "Prinsessen" was sung in Norwegian, and Beethoven's "Faithful Johnnie" in English.

The other English numbers were "Dreams," by Horsman; "To You," John Rodenbeck; "In the Dawn of an Indian Sky," Ward Stephens; "O Mother, My Love," Roland Farley, and "Robin, Robin, Sing Me a Song," by Charles Gilbert Spross, who played all of Miss Case's accompaniments.

OPERA

By James Gibbons Huneker

"Le Coq d'Or" Revived.

There was a double bill at the Metropolitan Opera House last night: "Le Coq d'Or" (deferred several weeks) and "Cavalleria Rusticana"—we print them in the order of their relative artistic importance, although this order was reversed in the performance. Here is the cast of Rimsky-Korsakoff's opera-pantomime, which was sung in French and mimed in the universal language of gestures, attitudes, and dancing:

The Princess	Mabel Garrison—Rosina Galli
The King	Adamo Didur—Adolph Bolm
Amelfa	Sophie Braslau—Queenie Smith
The Astrologer	Ralph Diaz—Giuseppe Bonfiglio
The Prince	Pietro Audisio—Armando Agnini
The General	Louis D'Angelo—Ottokar Bartik
A Knight	Vincenzo Reschiglian—Vincenzo Ioucelli
The Golden Cock	Marie Sundelius
Conductor, Pierre Monteux.
Production under the direction of Adolph Bolm.

The anniversary of the production in New York of this unique work occurs early next Spring. To our way of thinking it was an artistic event of the first magnitude, and it is a pity that "The Golden Cock" is not long enough to be presented alone, as its proximity is dangerous to compositions of lesser calibre. Last season it was harnessed to a harmless operetta, last night to a running mate equally ill-chosen. Why can't the orchestra play as a prelude one of the Russian's suites, "Scheherazade," for example? Mr. Monteux has proved himself particularly happy in the interpretation of Rimsky-Korsakoff. The obviously passionate music of Mascagni does not go well with the Russian's fantasy. You can't hitch a brass-band wagon to this blazing star of the north.

"The Golden Cock" is delightful. Enjoy it as a fairy tale, forget its hints of political satire, and you will enjoy it at its best. No doubt the key to Plato's "Republic," More's "Utopia," Rabelais, or Swift's "Gulliver" is easy to find, but sensible readers prefer these books purely as literature. Why dig deep into "The Isle of Penguins" or "The Revolt of the Angels" for occult meanings? The subtle ironic prose of Anatole France should suffice. As well consider "Alice in Wonderland" as a veiled attack on modern civilization, (which, by the way, it is.) It may not be difficult to discover in the Rimsky-Korsakoff opera political innuendo, and as appropriate now as during the second decade of the nineteenth century when the Decembrist outbreak occurred in Russia. During old King Dodon, the protagonist of the pantomime, might be any ruler anywhere on the globe, who, when his country is threatened by an aggressive enemy, adopts a policy of "dolce far niente." The libretto is rich in tempting satire on the fatuity of unpreparedness and the supine pose of the pacifist. However, the story may be comprehended by children quite as well as by politicians and other equinoctial persons. And, again, it may be viewed as a parody on grand opera, Wagner and "Salome" in particular.

We have been told the history of "The Golden Cock"; of its failure as opera, and its subsequent recrudescence as pantomime with singing. Composed in 1907, shortly before the composer's death, the opera was forbidden at Petrograd because of the implied satire lurking in Pushkin's fairy-tale, turned into a libretto by Bielsky. Whether or not this book is a political allegory need not concern us; suffice to say that the difficulties of the rôles made the opera well-nigh impossible. Michael Fokine, the brains of the original Russian Ballet, conceived the happy idea of transforming the work into a composite of pantomime, dancing and singing. As in the Greek play he placed the chorus on either side of the stage, on terraced seats from which the principals and chorus sang, while below the actors mimed and danced. Surrounded by bizarre scenery and floated on an orchestral stream of pertinent and lovely music, "The Golden Cock" created at London in 1914 a marked impression. At Paris the protests of the Rimsky-Korsakoff family prevented more than a few performances, but as there was no copyright law in England to protect their interests the composition was heard and admired at Drury Lane Theatre.

The score is not unlike in oriental coloring the Suite "Scheherazade," and that is high praise. Moods, shifting, picturesque, fluid and passionate, and daring rhythms; the music is saturated with extravagant humor. The vocal parts are grateful despite their difficulty. The leading motive assigned to that bird of ill-omen, the Golden Cock, was evidently suggested by the call of the Valkyries. The music accompanying the giants, dwarfs, and queer animals is characteristically ludicrous. All the primary rainbow gamut with their complementary tones are in the joyous symphonic mimicry by the Russian Berlioz. The three scenes and the costumes were designed by Willy Pogany, and the scenery painted by P. Dodd Ackermann. Striking, barbarically beautiful, the second scene is positively blood-curdling. Mr. Setti's chorus, garbed like the solo singers in maroon-tinted mediaeval drapery, was all that it should have been. So well drilled was the ensemble that if you looked only at the mimes you seemed to hear them singing. Rosina Galli and Adolph Bolm, respectively, mimed the Queen and King, though their voices issued from the throats of Mabel Garrison and Adamo Didur. Marie Barrientos originated the rôle of the Queen last year. Miss Garrison replaced her several times.

Mr. Didur delivered the music of the King with unctuous humor, mock pathos, and expressiveness. Louis d'Angelo was the General—last season it was Basil Ruysdael—admirably mimed by Ottokar Bartik. Marie Sundelius sang the trying music of the Golden Cock with rare skill. The rooster itself is a splendid stage property, a master work of Technical Director Siedle. Rafaelo Diaz as the vocal end of the Astrologer deserves praise. He poured out with prodigality his voice; a high C he compassed with ease. The other end of the sketch on the stage below was Giuseppe Bonfiglio. Cunning little Queenie Smith was the Amelfa, her vocal counterpart Sophie Braslau of the luscious contralto. If there is such a thing as spiritual dislocation, then it was embodied in the extraordinary pantomime of Adolph Bolm, with its delicious burlesque, its broad humor, and ironic underlining. Like a toy awakened from its wooden slumber, this king of shreds and patches touches your funny bone, yet enlists your sympathy. He was a glorious and pathetic fool and true to royal type.

As for Rosina Galli, she was a vision of fantastic loveliness; she evoked Sheba's queen, who was called Belkis, and, according to legend, stirred the neurasthenic Solomon into pessimistic admiration; she also teases the timid hermit St. Antony in Flaubert's magnificent prose-epic. Galli's dancing was dazzling, though not in the key of conventional ballet pirouettes. She was eloquent, disdainful, provocative, enchanting, she sang with her toes and with as much virtuosity as her lyric alter ego, Miss Garrison.

There is mock wailing by a cynical chorus after the King's death, and the scene fades into the vast inane. But the Astrologer, old Father-I-Told-You-So, is the fatal chorus before the curtain who blandly assures the audience that the Queen and himself are the only living persons in the play; the others a delirious dream, pale spectres, nothing more. But in action these same spectres were far from pallid. Both in London and Paris as well as in New York, "Le Coq d'Or," was conducted by Pierre Monteux, and to him is due praise for his important share in the production. It is a redoubtable task to synchronize the singing, miming, and dancing with the orchestra.

Thanks to the unerring baton of Monteux hardly a slip was noticeable in the complex mechanism of the score. A brilliant audience in happy moode enjoyed the Russian piece, also enjoyed "Cavalleria Rusticana" with such interpreters as Crimi, Montesanto, Claudia Muzio, and Flora Perini. Roberto Moranzoni conducted. Recalls were numerous.

FRENCH IN RUSSIAN TRAGEDY

With a cast so ably selected as to leave in each movement the impression of an all-star performance, the French company of Director Jacques Copeau produced at the Théatre du Vieux Colombier last night M. Copeau and Jean Croué's dramatic adaptation of Dostoievski's sombre novel, Les Freres Karamazov (The Karamazov Brothers). The play, which was given by the same company and with virtually the same cast last season, was one of the best performances of the year, and was repeatedly produced then. The splendid performance last night and the large and tensely held audience that attended it until after midnight, would give promise of a similar reception now.

The story of the three Karamazov brothers, sons of a gross and profligate father, the evil genius of whose life runs darkly through every movement of the play, is one of heaviest Russian tragedy unrelieved, reaching its gloomy climax through murder, suicide, and madness born of blood-guiltiness actual and morbidly imagined.

Director Copeau appeared as Ivan Feodorovitch Karamazov, the morbidly meditative Hamlet-like son; Robert Bogaert, as Dimitri, the dissolute eldest son, willing to do, but wrongly convicted of, his father's murder; Jean Sarment, the only one of the brothers in whom was a trace of softer religious human kindness; Charles Dullin, as the shrewd, subnormal natural son and valet, and Louis Jouvet, as the father, the impersonification of all that was gross and vile and forever drunk with sin. It were hard to seek an improvement on the portrayal of any one of these rôles last night; while Valentine Tessier, as the very human and feminine adventuress Grouchenka, and Lucienne Bogaert as Katherina, the beloved of the two elder brothers Karamazov, played their parts with splendid fire and tragic skill.

Schumann Club in Song Recital.

The Schumann Club gave an unusual concert of music for women's chorus, led by Percy Rector Stephens, last evening in Aeolian Hall. Twenty-one songs, from the old Italian masters to Grieg's airs of Norway, old Scotch melodies, French, both old and new, were translated and transcribed by Deems-Taylor. A popular feature with the audience was the club's last group in English, including "ballad concert" favorites of other days.

When the enamel goes—good-bye teeth

But "Acid-Mouth" gradually weakens the enamel, and cavities are formed. Germs enter and swiftly destroy the inner pulp.

"Acid-Mouth" is believed to be the cause of 95% of all tooth troubles. Which would mean that your chances to escape "Acid-Mouth" are only 1 in 20. But you can check it by the twice-daily use of Pebeco Tooth Paste.

Pebeco counteracts "Acid-Mouth," whitens and polishes the teeth, and promotes the health of the whole mouth.

"SOLUTIONS" OF THE RAILWAY PROBLEM.

The railway problem is difficult enough without making it worse, but some who are offering solutions do just that thing by proposing all sorts of novelties, of all degrees of merit, but with one sure demerit, that nobody knows certainly how the novelties would work. Take, for example, the suggestions of Mr. VICTOR MORAWETZ to the Senate Interstate Committee. He proposes the reorganization of all railways into "ten or fifteen" regional systems, under the administration of a Federal board with a member sitting in the President's Cabinet. This board should appoint regional boards of regulation and one central board of regulation. The Federal board should regulate all rates, and all security issues which are to be exchanged for the present securities. The new issues are to be proportioned to the "estimated true "operating income of the property, "so that the amount of interest and "dividends guaranteed by the Gov-"ernment shall in no case exceed 65 "per cent. of the estimated operating "income of the company, and that "the interest on the debentures shall "not exceed 40 per cent." It is not necessary to go further into the carefully elaborated details, which show that Mr. MORAWETZ has given much thought to his plan, to reach with regret the conclusion that it is labor lost. A problem which is too large and intricate as it stands cannot be solved by a leap in the dark without taking unnecessary chances. It is better to proceed along familiar lines, with the correction of demonstrated mistakes.

The cornerstone of Mr. MORAWETZ's plan is the guarantee of profits on an untried basis of earnings. The only guarantee the railways require is that of a fair opportunity to earn profits. It would be simpler and easier merely to allow an increase of earnings to cover the realized deficiencies of the existing methods of regulation. The Interstate Commission's error has been the same as Mr. MORAWETZ's. It tried to do too much and failed in doing what it might have done. The Commission thought that it had a mission to work out its idea of social reforms in putting a stop to excess of profits extorted from victimized trade by railway profiteers. The social reforms are still in the future, but the supplying of railway facilities below cost by railways victimized by regulators is a shining object lesson in economic revolution. There is no objection to reform which reforms, but reform which convulses without reforming comes too high unless it teaches its lesson.

The railways have a claim to be guaranteed against loss by regulation, but no claim to a guarantee of profits. If they earn no profits they should not get any, but nearly all the present trouble comes from a denial of profits because of a theory that profits are excessive, although rates under regulation were certified to be reasonable. The idea that rates are calculated in relation to dividends, instead of tons carried, has survived the fixing of rates according to reason, and is at the basis of the prejudice against the railways. Rates should not be raised in relation to watered capital, nor was it done even when the watering of capital was a scandal. Neither should rates be reduced to relation with bankrupted railway capital, but the latter method has been followed by the Interstate Commission to an extent which will be corrected when the results are appreciated. No profits should be guaranteed to the railways. The profits allowed to them should depend upon the country's need for railways and the returns that will satisfy the owners of capital. That relation is beyond the control of the calculators, except by the method which they have taken—that of reducing the supply of railway facilities below the demand. What is called the depreciation of railway credit may be more correctly described as the diversion of capital to more profitable uses. When railways are allowed to earn more profit, and when other capital earns less profit, railway credit will revive, and railways will be able to do what they can do better than Government. Mr. MORAWETZ proposes that in exchange for its guarantee of profits Government should take control of operating officials. That is another wrong relation. Operating officials should be appointed by those who have a direct interest in their fitness and capacity. Governments are often careless about those matters, particularly when there are politicians to be rewarded or encouraged. They are careless about profits, too; it is always easy to levy taxes.

Another defect common to Mr. MORAWETZ's plan and others is that they are merely examples of ingenuity wasted rather than of grappling with basic problems. No rearrangement of capital will settle the problem of the long and short haul, or of fixing rates with reference to weak and strong roads. All regional plans leave unsettled the relation of interstate to intrastate rates. Evasion is not settlement. Regulation could be settlement if the right regulators were appointed, meaning regulators who thought more of results than of profits, more of service than of rates, more of prevention of misconduct than of cheapness which is more costly than extravagance. It is no time to go backward with regulation. The right way out is through, with the wisdom taught by experience.

WITHOUT ACRIMONY.

From the prospectus issued by the friends of Mr. GILLETT's candidacy for Speaker the fact or theory is distilled, if the word may be used in an amended and a transmogrified nation, that "no "personal acrimony has developed so "far in the contest, nor is any ex-"pected or to be permitted." May good temper and good feeling prevail till the Republicans make their choice and after it! Still, acrimony, not to say contumely, personal-political, has a way of not asking for permission.

Not at least from the Gillettians shall offense come. They content themselves with saying that Mr. MANN's "chief claim" to the Speakership is that he is "entitled to it by "his services as Republican floor "leader." In short, a candidate by order and form only. The arguments against him, the Gillettians cry, avoiding acrimony by this impersonal ascription, are that he is a reactionary, "merely a parliamentarian rather than a statesman." He looks back to "Czarism," to the bad, bold days of absolutism and Uncle JOE CANNON, his sponge-holder in the fight. No more gavel-monarchs, dictators, hunker seniors! So Mr. MANN is an obscurantist. Mr. GILLETT is liberal and progressive. "GILLETT's war record "is 100 per cent. American, while Mr. "MANN's falls far below that figure." That is far from acrimonious. It is an understatement.

Many canny Republican hunters of fat Chairmanships and committee places cling to Mr. MANN. If Mr. MANN is bowled out by the liberals, another deep-revolving Cook County statesman, Representative MARTIN B. MADDEN, stands ready to take his place. Mr. GILLETT and Mr. MANN seem likely to kill each other off. Mr. GILLETT is sure of the Chairmanship of a great committee. Mr. MANN's affectionate interest in live stock and garden truck indicates him as the man of men to be Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture.

WILLIAM GORHAM RICE.

Certain Democratic politicians who consent to civil service reform only on condition that friends whom they can trust are in charge of its machinery are hot to prevent the reappointment of Mr. WILLIAM GORHAM RICE, Democratic member of the State Civil Service Commission.

Mr. RICE's term ends on Feb. 1. Appointed by Governor WHITMAN on account of his "eminent fitness," he has been an eminently fit Commissioner for nearly four years. To Democrats hungry and thirsty for the spoils, to the City Hall statesmen who yearn to have the doings of our Municipal Civil Service Commission inspected or winked at by friendly eyes in the State Commission, to everybody yearning for favoritism and more exemptions, Mr. RICE is an uncongenial official.

Mr. RICE studied Democracy under GROVER CLEVELAND, a Governor whose career Governor SMITH may be presumed to have followed pretty carefully. Judging from his appointments so far, politicians and politicasters, seeking the rule of the unfit, seem to have mighty little effect on Governor SMITH.

WEBB LAW COMBINATIONS.

Having recently sought to promote trade with South America by reducing freight rates and releasing ships to carry 170,000 tons of goods waiting for them at this port, our Government now plans an educational campaign in the southern countries to show why the new export combinations permitted by the Webb law will serve their interests. Explanations are needed there because German agents, before the armistice, were asking importers and the public to believe that the new combinations, or selling associations, were formed to monopolize their markets and exact high prices. It can easily be proved that the combinations' work will be beneficial to southern importers and consumers because reduction of selling expenses permits reduction of prices and clears the way for successful competition with similar European associations. The new legalized co-operation of our exporters should be heartily welcomed in South America, and not regarded with hostility or distrust.

There are now nearly sixty of the Webb law combinations, whose plans have been filed with and approved by the Federal Trade Commission. Critics in the southern countries should know that this commission will supervise their work, permitting neither injustice nor violations of the statute. Among those formed within the last few weeks are several of great strength. The Copper Export Association, including nearly all producers, with JOHN D. RYAN at the head of it, expects to sell abroad this year more than 1,000,000,000 pounds of the metal. It is estimated by the War Industries Board that Great Britain, France, and Italy will need 860,000,000 pounds. Ten independent steel companies have made the North American Steel Products Corporation. The greatest company in this industry is not included because it has an export agency. Four national associations have united in forming the Textile Alliance Export Corporation, which will sell cotton and woolen goods. Another combination, it is expected, will represent producers of bituminous coal. In all probability, within three months every exporting industry will have a co-operative selling agency. All these associations will strive to keep and even to increase the additional trade which has been gained during the war. They will help buyers abroad as well as producers at home.

TENDER GERMAN CONSCIENCES.

Deep is the horror of the tender-souled Berlin press at the unlawful tumultuous killing of LIEBKNECHT and ROSA LUXEMBURG. "What will they "think of us in the rest of the "world?" asks Vorwärts, which, through all the multiform innumerable cruelties and crimes done by the Germans in the war, was as placid as a Hausfrau knitting. "Why must they justify the name of Hun?" it asks plaintively.

Edifying, if rather late, is this faint tick-tock of the German conscience, run down so long; and how curiously German! It is unfortunate, of course, and the enemies of Germany have said so, that these two torchbearers of class-supremacy by means of rapine and murder, the Bolshevist gospel, perished summarily and not by due process of law; but nobody blames the Germans for that or fails to allow for the furious justified hatred which this man and this woman had earned. What is singular to the foreigner is the tremendous pother over these lynchings, which, compared with the habitual proceedings of Germany toward her foes, are as a sheep-shearing to the Massacre of the Innocents.

Looking into the German mind, one understands a little the sorrow of Vorwärts and its brethren. Two Germans have been killed. From Armenians to Ukrainians, how many millions of how many races have fallen by the fire and sword of Germany and her accomplices! This killing of Germans in Germany is another thing. It is the business of Germans to kill, not to be killed, and the population shouldn't be decreased unnecessarily. Besides, the brisk German business of massacre was done by order. The General Staff, the Kaiser, all Olympus of the old régime, commanded. Cheerfully and joyfully was the command obeyed. But to slay Germans without order and all the formalities—how dreadful! What will the world think?

Air, earth, and sea drip with the guilt of Germany. She is afraid that a domestic murder or two will hurt her reputation. Did ECCELINO DA ROMANO toward his end torment his soul because in youth he had robbed a bird's nest?

LET THE STARS ALONE.

Since Mr. MARCONI's reputation is based on the accomplishment of what many people had declared impossible, no one will hastily scoff at his suggestion that it may be possible to communicate by wireless with the stars. But there are grave difficulties in the way. Mr. MARCONI himself suggests one of them when he says that messages sent ten years ago have not even reached some of the nearest stars. Conversation with more distant heavenly bodies would have a rather academic interest if after sending a message you had to leave directions to your grandchildren for the receipt of the answer a century later. Establishment of an interstellar news service is not yet feasible.

The inventor does not think that the difficulty of language is insurmountable. Like Professor PERCIVAL LOWELL in his projected methods for communicating with the Martians, he would use mathematics as a universal language; but his system would be easier. Professor LOWELL suggested the erection on waste lands of Asia of huge works depicting, say, the Pythagorean proposition; the Martian, it was presumed, would view them, and would thereupon construct on his own planet geometrical ideographs representing the Martian equivalent of "Yes, yes—how true that is!" With this beginning, communication could gradually be improved.

This theory had obvious drawbacks. On cloudy days the figures might be invisible to the Martian, and suggestions that they be illuminated were impracticable on account of the enormous power that would have been required. And the idea failed to take into account the possible reaction of the hypothetical minds on a planet which is supposed to be some millions of years ahead of ours; what if, instead of commenting on the truth of the proposition, the Martians merely observed to each other, "A quaint delusion, that!" and let it pass unanswered? Much labor would have been wasted to no purpose except the improvement of real estate in the waste lands of Asia.

Mr. MARCONI's method of communication would be less expensive, but even if it could be done one doubts if it would be desirable. Quite possibly there are even yet more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of in our philosophy, and it would be better to find them out in our own slow, blundering way rather than have knowledge for which we are unprepared precipitated on us by superior intelligences. Mr. MARCONI, being gifted with the experimental mind, would welcome this. "As many of "the planets," he says, "are much "older than ours, the beings who live "there ought to have information for "us of enormous value." So he would start with a simple message such as "two plus two is four," and would go on repeating it—two taps, pause, two taps, longer pause, four taps—until Mars or some other planet wirelessed back "an answer signifying yes." Even the question of getting an agreement on what signifies "yes" is a little difficult, unless the Martians are acquainted with the formulae of spirit rapping. But suppose, for the sake of argument, that you have a signal which means yes; and then you cheerfully wireless to Mars, "Two plus two is four," and Mars answers "No, you're wrong." What are you going to do about it? JOSIAH ROYCE once told his students that if he met an angel who told him that on the superior plane of angelic intelligence two plus two equaled five, "I'd know what kind of an angel he was." But this is imputing too much finality to human knowledge. If Mars is a million years ahead of us, it is far from impossible that Mars has found out that two plus two is really eighty-six, and would regard argument with our mundane mathematicians as no more serious an occupation than inciting a kitten to chase its own tail.

Already Mr. MARCONI has often received "strong signals out of the "ether which might conceivably have "proceeded from the stars." Perhaps the Martians, or the far-distant and warmth-loving dwellers on Sirius or Aldebaran, are trying to correct our terrestrial mathematics—trying to persuade Mr. MARCONI, for example, that the dispute between his people and the Jugoslavs as to which is in the majority in Dalmatia is a futile thing, since to the superterrestrial intelligence it is possible to conceive of both being in a majority. But this sort of pedagogical mediation by the dwellers on the stars would soon become annoying. We may be all wrong about two and two equaling four, but to find it out too suddenly would give a jolt to all the processes of human thinking. Our knowledge of the universe is a poor thing, but our own.

A RESPONSIBILITY.

The French Government has invited an exhibition of paintings and sculpture to be held in the galleries of the Luxembourg next Spring. The committee formed to select the exhibitors is headed by WILLIAM A. COFFIN, President, and includes among its members artists of widely varying tendencies. Their mission is important. We are complimented by a nation that has believed in art for many centuries, that has used art in its dress, in its furnishings, in its playthings, in its business, as well as in its architecture and painting. Its professional men and business men have collected art as a matter of course; its manufacturers have collected art as a matter of commercial necessity. France is wise in questions of art.

The American committee has then the responsibility of showing France that we have among us artists who think as seriously of art as it is thought of in France; who are as scrupulous in their technical skill and as intelligent in their methods as their brothers in France. It has the responsibility of representing the scholarship, the ideals, the training of American artists as they should be represented to a foreign people. There need be no difficulties, given a right spirit of collaboration. Our exhibitions during the past decade have shown what beautiful and nobly honest work is done in our studios, and the exhibitions might easily be surpassed by a judicious ransacking of those studios. The names of the members of the committee offer assurance of discrimination and fervor and industry in the performance of their task. It is a good committee and it should be.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Question of Net Revenues. As the object of a tax, especially in these days when the Government needs so much money and one great source of income is soon to be cut off, is to bring in funds, the theatre managers, if they were wise, would use as their chief argument against the doubling of their present impost the fact, or probability, that the increase will result in a decrease of the Government's receipts. That will be the case if, as the managers say, and they speak as from knowledge, under the new plan 60 per cent. of the theatres would have to close their doors.

Any arithmetician can figure out that 20 per cent. levied on 40 per cent. of the theatres would bring in only four-fifths as much as would 10 per cent. levied on all of them. This computation, however, is a little shaky, even admitting that the managers are good prophets and know as much about their own business as they claim to know. For, obviously, it is the weak and poorly patronized theatres that would be ruined by the new tax, if any were. The amount of injury suffered by the others would be problematical, and presumably some of them would not suffer appreciably or even at all.

But, with all the uncertainties considered, it is practically certain that the 20 per cent. tax would bring in little or nothing more than comes from the one now in force, and there is something more than a chance that the net amount would be less. In either case, the creation of so much popular discontent as would follow the enforced closing of the cheaper theatres would seem to be injudicious from both the political and the financial standpoints.

Perhaps Glad to Kill Off Theatres. In this discussion of the theatre ticket tax there arises an impulse to ask why it should be necessary, in time of peace, to double the percentage demanded when the war was on and it was expected to continue for months and perhaps for several years. In the proposal to make this particular increase some will glimpse a survival of the old antagonism to the stage, and everybody and everything connected with it. With people in whom that feeling exists the plea as to closing 60 per cent. of the playhouses will have no effect, or rather it will have the effect of proving the proposal a commendable one. "To close all the theatres would be a good thing!" one almost hears these people saying. They are not many, of course, as compared with the whole population, but they are fairly numerous in the back counties, and the back counties are pretty well represented in Congress.

The deepest mystery in the whole tax situation is the persistent refusal of the revenue hunters to exploit again the large possibilities that lie in compelling the addition of a stamp on every bank check. That is a tax which costs next to nothing to collect, it is widely distributed among the very people who can best afford to pay it, and they are deprived by it of no present enjoyment. It has, too, the advantage of having worked well in the past, and of having excited few complaints and no protests. And nobody now is claiming that he would be ruined or seriously hurt by its revival.

A Landing Quite Birdlike. There is much importance in the news that a French aviator has succeeded in making a landing on the roof of a building in Paris. The space at his command was only 52x75 feet. That is about the size of an ordinary back yard, and minute, indeed, in comparison with the space hitherto supposed to be necessary to make an airplane's descent fairly safe.

Of course, aviators have landed many times before on expanses no larger and less smooth than this roof, but it has always been under compulsion and with the expectation—not infrequently realized—of a disastrous crash. In the case reported, a more or less serious accident seems to have been narrowly escaped, and the machine used was damaged. As a beginning, however, the achievement was full of promise that in time the aviators will be able to imitate the birds in alighting anywhere, just as the birdmen do now as regards flying in any sort of weather. The birds, however, can end a swift flight by alighting on a twig or a telegraph wire, and before the airplane can do anything even approaching that its wings will have to be so constructed as to be capable of adjustments now quite impossible.

The daring Frenchman is sure to have imitators, but attempts at roof landing will have to be carefully guarded if they are not to be about as dangerous to other people as to the aviator who makes them. Should he overrun his narrow mark, not only would he almost certainly be killed himself, but he would be more than likely to kill somebody else.

Rising from limited spaces, especially if they be well elevated, is easier and safer than landing on them. It has been done several times ashore and is becoming almost common practice for the naval fliers.

Public Opinion and Prohibition.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your leading editorial article on "The Ban Upon Drink," in your issue of yesterday, contains the following statement which does not appear to me to be a correct one, viz: "public opinion puts strong drink under statutory ban in this year 1919."

If I correctly understand the facts, the "public" has not been permitted to express its "opinion" as to the proposed prohibition amendment, which, as your article correctly states, "is light-heartedly and with amazing speed ratified by one Legislature after another," said proposed amendment not having been submitted to a popular vote in a single State.

Whether or not the proposed amendment would have been approved by "public opinion" if submitted to the public for an expression of it need not be here discussed, but the fact remains that the action of legislators unauthorized by, and unindorsed by, their constituents cannot properly be termed an expression of "public opinion."

ROYAL VISIT.

THE OLD REGIME.

The banners breast the boulevard,
  The crowds stretch gray and dim;
The royal guest nods lightly toward
  The folk that cheer for him.

The King sets out his troops to show,
  The envoy speaks him fair;
His eye, it never wavers from
  The soldiers marching there.

Oh, it's gold lace and blue lace
  And troops in brave array;
But it's your heart and my heart
  Must bleed for it some day.

The hostess-Queen is fair tonight,
  Her pearls burn great and dim;
The visitor bows low upon
  The hand she proffers him.

The Kings' old, crafty counselors
  Sit at the banquet late,
Their secret compact safely signed
  And sealed with seals of State.

Oh, it's one year or two years,
  Or twenty years or ten,
Till in the murk of No Man's Land
  We'll pay—we common men.

THE NEW DAY.

The folk outsurge the boulevard;
  Without a crown or sword,
A plain man greets the crowds today—
  They wait a plain man's word.

The hoarse and harrowed peoples wait;
  For they and theirs—the dead—
Have all the savings of their hope
  With him deposited.

A democrat, a democrat
  Rides with the Kings today:
And can it be the people's turn,
  And must the rulers pay!

HOOVER ASSAILED IN FOOD BILL FIGHT

Gore Quotes Witness's Charge That Fund Will Buy Surplus Stocks of Packers.

ALLEGED AGREEMENT TOLD

Food Administrator Is Said to Have Made Arrangements to Stabilize Market.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—In the Senate debate today on the bill to appropriate $100,000,000 to feed starving populations of Europe, urged by the President, Senator Gore of Oklahoma adverted to evidence given before the Agricultural Committee earlier in the day that Food Administrator Hoover has entered into an agreement with the packers of the country to help unload their surplus stocks upon Europe. Senator Gore said that, according to the witness before the committee, the $100,000,000 was to be used for that purpose.

The witness quoted by Senator Gore was D. W. Taliaferro, Vice President and General Manager of the Hammond-Standish Company of Detroit, an independent concern. Mr. Taliaferro told the committee that Mr. Hoover met some forty packers in conference in Washington last October, and that he agreed to handle foreign orders for meat so as to enable them to get rid of a surplus of stock and stabilize their market. The packers, Mr. Taliaferro said, had been shipping salted meats to England during the war, but they had been unable to dispose of huge quantities of fresh meats.

Owing to the co-operation of the Food Administration, Mr. Taliaferro asserted, the packers were able to maintain a price of 17.5 cents a pound for salted meats.

"Packers Relying on Hoover."

"The Packers have found themselves loaded up with stocks to an extent that, if they are not able to dispose of them, many of them will be badly hurt, said Mr. Taliaferro. "Under the agreement made with Mr. Hoover, however, they expect to come out safely. He agreed to dispose of their stocks for them by sending them to Europe. The $100,000,000 appropriation idea is part of that scheme and the packers are relying on Mr. Hoover to carry it out for them."

In alluding to Mr. Taliaferro's evidence, Mr. Gore said the witness had "innocently told us that this $100,000,000—or a large part of it—was to be used in stabilizing the price of packing house products so the packers could dispose of their stocks and obviate a loss."

Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania assailed Mr. Hoover as being unfit to handle the $100,000,000 appropriation. He offered an amendment to the bill to provide that the money be put in the hands of a commission of three, and also that, so far as possible, it be spent in America and not in buying food products abroad.

"I think the taxpayers of the United States will be greatly astonished," said Senator Penrose, "when they read in the morning papers that the Department of Agriculture is now at work framing a bill soon to be presented to Congress appropriating $1,250,000,000 to be used by the Food Administration in purchasing from the farmers the 1919 wheat crop at $2.26 a bushel. This remarkable situation created by Mr. Hoover while he was in charge of the Food Administration carries its own lesson as to the wisdom of the economic methods adopted by the Government during the war.

Believes in a Fair Price.

"I do not believe in price fixing, but I believe in a fair price if the price is fixed. According to figures submitted to the Senate, the American Government is likely to be responsible for $1,250,000,000 worth of wheat at the guaranteed price and it may be that if wheat keeps going down, by reason of foreign competition, which is coming into the world market, the price may go still further down.

"We are to expend this $100,000,000 for reasons which to my mind have in no way been made clear except the time-worn argument that they are required on account of the war. I think the Government might be relieved very consistently and properly of the enormous stores which they are compelled to take into their hands."

Senator Penrose asked Senator Martin, Democratic floor leader, who is handling the bill in the Senate, if he knew "whether Mr. Hoover is an American citizen and ever voted in this country in his life."

"I do not propose to be drawn into such an irrelevant discussion as that," replied Mr. Martin. "I do not know anything about Mr. Hoover's citizenship. I have no doubt that he is a citizen of America, but I have not been a detective upon his tracks."

"He abused the high office which he holds by advising the American people to support the Democratic Party in the last election and in that way, in my opinion, insulted every Republican in the country," said Senator Penrose. "I do not believe he is a citizen of the United States. He has spent the greater part of his life in England. May be he was born there.

Doubts About Hoover.

"It is bad enough to have a man called upon to administer the enormous funds which he has already administered, who has taken no oath of office and whose allegiance even is in doubt in the opinion of many. But besides that there is doubt as to whether he is not at bottom really an Englishman and not an American."

Senator Lewis of Illinois urged the passage of the bill as a measure advocated by President Wilson. Not to pass it, he said, would show a lack of confidence in him.

"President Wilson is on the ground," said Mr. Lewis. "He knows why he asks this measure. He sees compensation to his country, bodily or spiritually. This appropriation is the first thing asked as an instrument to harmonize the frictions flashing through the Peace Conference.

"If the Senate defeats the measure, the world will say the first thing asked by Wilson as an auxiliary and aid to his plans was denied by his Congress. This will be proof of the antagonistic Senate charged in the European press as existing here against the President. After that shall happen no speeches, no editorials, no assemblages in this country pledging support will be of any influence at the peace table or in all Europe.

"The President will have been started on his way to obstruction and opposition to every proposition calling for ratification of the Senate. Then the little nations he summoned up by his call to revolt against Kings and stand for democracy will be told by the imperial press of Europe and conspiring leaders that the act of the Senate meant the refusal to acknowledge or aid them. By this discouragement they will be inveigled back to the subserviency to Kings or to be apostles of anarchy.

"If this last shall follow, the first assault will be on our soldiers and the renewal of the war in Austrian and Russian border countries, likewise the Balkans, as was the method when the war renewed in Russia by the Reds and Bolsheviki against the soldiers of France, Britain, and America.

Preservation of Americans.

"A defeat of this bill would dishonor the President and make doubtful the session of the Peace Conference. It calls up disorder and anarchy among 50,000,000 distracted people and beckons murder to slaughter the sons of American mothers. To pass this measure is the preservation of Americans, not charity to foreigners."

Vote on the bill is expected tomorrow. Senator Martin expects that it will pass.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Debate on the Administration bill appropriating $100,000,000 for food relief in Europe and the Near East covered a wide range in the Senate today and again prevented a final vote on the measure. Passage of the bill is conceded by both advocates and opponents, and Democratic leaders were hopeful tonight that this would be accomplished before adjournment tomorrow.

Senator Penrose offered an amendment requiring that the relief fund be used to purchase supplies in the United States. Senator Martin criticised this proposal "as a profiteering stipulation on a charitable fund," and Mr. Penrose finally modified it to read that wheat to be given free to the people of Europe should be purchased in this country as far as possible. The amendment then was adopted.

Calling attention to reports that the Department of Agriculture was preparing a bill to appropriate $1,250,000,000 to fulfill the Government's obligation to purchase wheat of the 1919 crop at the guaranteed price of $2.26, Senator Penrose declared this was a "remarkable situation" brought about by Mr. Hoover's administration. Democratic Leader Martin pointed out that Senator Penrose had voted to fix the price at $2.50.

SHERMAN ASSAILS VAIL.

Says He Wants to Unload Wire Lines on the Government.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Senator Sherman of Illinois, Republican, asserted in the Senate today that Theodore N. Vail, personal adviser on wire control to Postmaster General Burleson, favored Government ownership of telegraph and telephone lines in order that the property of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, of which Mr. Vail is President, could be "unloaded" on the Government.

"Theodore N. Vail is an assistant to Mr. Burleson and is interested in unloading the American Telephone and Telegraph Company on the Government and Mr. Burleson knows it," Senator Sherman said. "Mr. Vail is a Bolshevist in disguise. He believes in Government ownership of telegraph and telephone lines because that is the best method of unloading the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

FOR ROOSEVELT MEETINGS.

President Cables Approval of Memorial Services on Feb. 9.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—President Wilson has cabled Secretary Tumulty his approval of the proposal to hold Roosevelt memorial meetings throughout the country on February 9, simultaneously with the joint memorial services in Congress. The message follows:

"I sincerely approve of the suggestion for simultaneous meetings to commemorate the life and services of Mr. Roosevelt. I think it would be a most suitable way to show the esteem in which the country held him."

PLAN ROOSEVELT MEMORIAL

Republican Club to Honor "Departed Friend and Leader."

In resolutions eulogizing Theodore Roosevelt, the Republican Club at its regular monthly meeting last night provided for a special memorial meeting to pay tribute to the life and services "of our departed friend and leader." President Bonynge appointed former Senator N. A. Elsberg, William H. Van Benscoten, and Thomas C. Desmond a committee to prepare for the memorial, which probably will be held on Feb. 9.

"Over and beyond all else," read the resolution, "was the belief in the man himself, in his fearlessness and the honesty of his intentions and his spotless integrity, the realization that through him—in the purity and beauty of his family life, in the emphasis he placed on spiritual against material values, in his hatred of hypocrisy and cant and the genuine democracy of his point of view, in the breadth of his sympathies and his abhorrence of injustice, and above all in his passionate ardor for his country and for undivided allegiance to it and to the ideals of ordered liberty for which it stands—there spoke the noblest aspirations of his countrymen, so that in the best sense he was the typical American."

COLONEL AND PROHIBITION.

Brewers Say Roosevelt Never Approved "Invasion of Homes."

A denial that Theodore Roosevelt favered the national prohibition amendment was issued yesterday by William H. Hirst, attorney for the New York State Brewers' Association, in answer to a statement made the day before by the Anti-Saloon League, which sought to show that the late ex-President was in sympathy with its propaganda. Mr. Hirst asserted that he had "responsible and disinterested information" that Colonel Roosevelt before his death did not look favorably upon the amendment and had only awaited an opportune time to say so.

The lawyer drew a distinction between the Colonel's written approval of the fight on "alcoholism and the saloon" in a letter recently made public by the Anti-Saloon League and approval of interference with private rights in the homes of the nation, which he insisted Colonel Roosevelt never would have indorsed. His statement concluded:

"Mr. Roosevelt's letter nowhere approves the invasion of the home by the Federal Government to the extent of taking away the right of a glass of beer or wine at a meal. The great mass of the American people assumed that the national prohibition amendment was only aimed at the saloon and the liquor traffic. In this they are in error, because it reaches to the very fireside and stops the private manufacture and use of beer and wine. The enforcement acts now announced by the Anti-Saloon League will make it a penal offense to have either of these beverages even in the home except upon doctor's prescription for medicinal use, and then under most intermeddlesome conditions."

MAY BANISH HAPSBURG.

Government Threatens It If Monarchist Movements Continue.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—The Austrian Government has informed ex-Emperor Charles, who is reported to be ill, that unless the monarchist movements at home and abroad cease, his presence in the capital will not be tolerated, according to a Vienna dispatch received here.

It is generally known in Vienna that the Emperor was forced to abdicate, but that he reserves his personal rights to the throne.

COLUMBIA ADOPTS NEW ENTRANCE TEST

Psychological Examination Will Take the Place of the Old Style Written One.

TO MEASURE INTELLIGENCE

Student's Learning Will Be Determined by His School Record—Tests to be Changed Each Year.

The Faculty of Columbia College, the undergraduate department of Columbia University, at a meeting yesterday afternoon voted to abolish the old-style examination for admission and substitute psychology tests to measure the student's intelligence, rather than his learning. The tests will be similar to those applied to applicants for the Students' Army Training Corps, and will be used for the academic year beginning next September. Professor A. L. Jones, head of the Department of Admissions of the university, said that the action of the Faculty was in step with the progress of the times.

"These tests," he added, "are a development of those formulated a dozen and more years ago in France by Alfred Binet for the discovery of mentally retarded children. Much constructive work has been done in this country, particularly at the Leland Stanford Junior University, Harvard, and other institutions. It has been found that many preparatory and high school students can be coached to pass college entrance examinations whose intelligence does not class them as good material for further education.

"In our requirements for admission to Columbia College are included the applicant's health record, his character and promise of development, and his school record, and these will be embraced in the new requirements. The most radical departure will be the entire doing away with the old-style examinations that were given to establish the applicant's knowledge of the subjects required for admission to college. This will be covered by his school record, and the psychological tests will demonstrate whether he is qualified to continue his schooling."

Dean Herbert E. Hawkes of Columbia College explained that the tests were being prepared by Professor E. L. Thorndyke of Teachers College of Columbia, and that they would be changed each year, although, he said, the psychologists say there is not much likelihood of an applicant being able to cram up on a set of tests, even if they were at his disposal.

"We expect these tests to show us whether it will be worth our while to try to educate a student, and whether it will be worth his while," Dean Hawkes said.

RODMAN PROUD OF NAVY.

Rear Admiral Hugh Rodman of the United States Navy, and Captain Alfred F. B. Carpenter, who commanded the British cruiser Vindictive in the blockade of Zeebrugge, were guests of honor last night at the forty-sixth dinner of the Economic Club at the Hotel Astor. Henry Morgenthau, former Ambassador to Turkey, presided. Captain Carpenter told the story of the "Zeebrugge Affair," and Rear Admiral Rodman, who was in command of our Sixth Battle Squadron, while attached to the Grand Fleet, spoke of the cordial relations between the American and British naval men and officers.

Captain Carpenter said that there was one bit of insidious German propaganda that he also desired to refute, and that was that there was discord between the American and the British naval contingents. "If any man tells you that," he declared, "I refer you to Admiral Rodman."

Rear Admiral Rodman replied that it was not too much to say that ties of brotherly love had bound the personnel of the two navies.

"When I say that I sometimes commanded a force with British Admirals under me, and sometimes they commanded me, and that no thought of jealousy, no thought of nationality, no thought of misunderstanding ever arose, you will understand how extremely close and brotherly were our relations," he said.

"While we are prone to give full credit to our allies for all they did, both before and after we entered the war, we are often inclined to forget ourselves and the part which our navy accomplished—a very commendable trait. Yet we are entitled to our full share of credit, in more ways than one, for our efforts in helping to bring about the final victory. Taking a retrospective view, had we to do it over again, we would not change one iota, which is the strongest proof that the work was well done.

"And now, let me add that, though my comrades in the British navy were born under a different flag, though we are by geographical boundary different nations, yet I am convinced that the same blood flows through our veins, that we have the same ideals, the same love of righteousness and liberty. Should the time ever come again, in the future, as it has done in this war, there is no question in my mind but that we will stand together through thick and thin, fight together, and win together."

PROTEST THEATRE TAX.

Merchants' Association Sees Loss of Revenue in Increase to 20%.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Merchants' Association yesterday, it was decided to protest against the tax of 20 per cent. on tickets to places of amusement proposed in the pending revenue bill. The present tax is 10 per cent. The action was taken after the Theatre Managers' Association had asked support in the fight it is making. The Merchants' Association includes twenty-five theatrical enterprises.

Experts had reported on the probable effect of the 20 per cent. tax for the association's guidance. After discussion it was voted to send the following telegram to the conference committee in whose hands the bill now is:

"The Merchants' Association of New York respectfully protests against the proposed increase of tax on amusement admissions from the present 10 per cent. basis to the proposed 20 per cent. basis, because experts representing us have studied the probable effect and are convinced that such an increase would greatly decrease attendance and, therefore, decrease the actual revenue to be derived by the Government from that source."

Theatrical managers estimated yesterday that 5,000,000 persons the country over had gone on record against the increased tax. Among the letters sent to Washington was one from Thomas D. Green, President of the Hotel Association of New York, in which he said:

"With reference to the proposed doubling of the theatre ticket tax, as a hotel proprietor I realize the vast financial loss which would fall not only upon the theatrical managers and employes of the country, but upon the hotel men, the restaurant men, real estate owners, and hundreds of others who at first glance would seem to have no direct affiliation with the amusement world."

It was said by the Managers' Committee after a meeting yesterday that the 20 per cent. tax would mean the immediate cancellation of plans under way for about seventy-five new productions. The throwing out of employment of 10,000 to 15,000 people would follow, it was declared, and the proposed construction of a dozen new theatres in various parts of the country would be abandoned.

The Actors' Equity Association has addressed a letter to its members asking each to send a telegram to the conference committee.

ART MUSEUM HAS $244,499 DEFICIT

An Increase of $85,056 Over Last Year, and City Appropriation Cut $58,000.

HURT BY WAR CONDITIONS

Museum Has Lost 1,533 Members and Must Have Funds to Continue Work on Present Scale.

There was a good attendance at the forty-ninth annual meeting of the Corporation of the Metropolitan Museum of Art yesterday afternoon. The report which was printed was not read. There was a short address by President Robert W. De Forest, followed by tea. An innovation at the meeting was the visit of Trustees and members to the newest installations among the collections, with the curators of the different departments as guides. The exhibition in which there was the most lively interest was that of the work done by manufacturers and designers from studies made of the art treasures of the museum. Something of the work done in this line and its possibilities were described at the meeting by the newest comer on the museum staff, Richard F. Bach, Associate in Industrial Arts, whose work is to act as a sort of middleman between the outside workers and the museum, to enable the former to make the most of the opportunities the museum affords.

This year, the one before the Museum will celebrate its golden jubilee, it announces itself the poorest it has ever been in funds for its running expenses. There is a deficit each year which the Trustees among themselves manage to cover. It is $244,499.69 this year, an increase of $85,056.84 over last year when the annual deficit, though considered large, was only $159,442.85. The Museum has been seriously affected by war conditions, which have lessened the attendance and cut down the membership. This had been increasing rapidly, but with the demands upon the people for war funds Museum membership was one of the things on which they retrenched—1,533 annual members ceased their support, meaning a loss to the Museum of $10,990. This year the Museum faces increased difficulty, as the appropriation from the city, which has not been increased as the Museum has grown larger and its cost for running expenses greater, has been cut for the coming year to $175,000 from the $233,-000 given annually, a loss of $58,000. The Trustees in their report, speaking of financial conditions, say:

"The situation is a serious one. The income from memberships, admissions and sales of publications may increase with the new year and the return of the public to its pre-war avocations, but with the appropriation from the city cut, unless the necessary funds are provided for the continuance of the work in its present scale, the budget must be met in a radical manner, entails hitherto reserved for the [illegible] of works of art must be diverted [illegible] the payment of running expenses [illegible] must be a curtailment of activities [illegible] and a retrenchment of expenditure [illegible] in the sweep of forward [illegible] contemplated the museum [illegible] would be lamentable [illegible] rendered to the city by [illegible] of the museum collections [illegible] various branches, for the enjoyment of the people, their education and practical profit, is incalculable, and the city can ill afford to retrench along such lines. The educational advantages offered to the people by the museum are second to none."

The Museum reports 1,534 acquisitions this year, 379 of the number by gift. It has had 635,497 visitors during the year, a decrease of 41,176 over last year; but with a large increase of visitors who have come for practical work in the Museum. 9,770 have attended its lectures, 15,655 children have attended the study hours and 26,655 students, designers and manufacturers have worked in its galleries, study rooms and library. There have been 27,271 children who have visited the Museum in classes from the schools.

In bequests and payment of bequests the last year the Museum has received in cash, securities, and real estate from the Isaac D. Fletcher estate $2,632,113; payment in full of the bequest of Marie S. Grandidier, $47,000, and cash on account of bequest of Hugo Reisinger, $12,-821. One of the acquisitions of the Museum which fills one of the gaps in its collections is an important triptych ascribed to Segna di Buonaventura; a Florentine cassone front of unusual decorative beauty has been purchased, and the Museum was fortunate in securing two portraits by Ingres, which were part of the collection of Degas, the painter. These have not yet been brought to this country on account of the difficulty of transportation. They will be the only portraits of the artists on public exhibition when they reach the Museum, all others in this country being in private collections.

The acquisition by purchase of the George S. Palmer collection of sixty-six pieces of English and American furniture of remarkable beauty and skilled workmanship is one of the purchases of importance made by the Museum this year. The collection, with others in the possession of the Museum, including the Bolles collection of Mrs. Russell Sage, gives the museum an unsurpassed representation of American furniture. A recent purchase, not yet shown, is the Wentworth-Gardner house from Portsmouth, N. H., dating back to 1760, the woodwork of the finest New England type. It will form an important part of the American wing which the Museum has in contemplation.

The Museum has had thirty-seven of its staff and employes who have entered the Government employ in army or navy, and of that number two have won the golden star. With the death of Joseph H. Choate only one of the original incorporators of the Museum remains alive, Theodore Weston, and he was present at the meeting yesterday.

PROCLAIMED KING, MANUEL RESENTS IT

LONDON, Jan. 20.—A royalist revolution has broken out in Portugal, according to a wireless dispatch from Lisbon. Paiva Conceiro has placed himself at the head of a royalist revolt at Oporto, Braga, and Viscus, and has proclaimed former King Manuel King of Portugal.

Government troops are on their way to suppress the conspiracy.

The wireless dispatch adds that former King Manuel has sent a telegram to the Portuguese Government reproving the attempt in his behalf.

Lacking definite information on the subject two influences may have contributed to bring about the royalist revolution: the antagonism that has been growing against successive republican administrations on account of their virtual dictatorship, and the feeling that these Governments, although bound to England by treaty, had not contributed sufficiently to the allied cause in measure to the country's resources or commensurate with what Portugal might have gained at the Peace Peace Congress.

Dom Manuel succeeded to the throne on the assassination of his father, King Carlos, and his elder brother, Prince Luiz Philip, Feb. 1, 1908. He fled to England when the republic was proclaimed on Oct. 5, 1910, with Dr. Theophilo Braga as provisional President. The first elected President was Dr. Manoel de Arriaga (Aug. 24, 1911, to May 27, 1915); the second, who was elected for the remainder of the term of the first, was Dr. Braga (May 29 to Oct. 5, 1915); the third was Dr. Bernardino Machado, who held office from Oct. 5, 1915, to Dec. 8, 1917, when a revolution threw him out.

This revolution was led by Dr. Sidonio Paes, who, on Dec. 12, 1917, was appointed Premier by the Revolutionary Junto, and, on Dec. 28, 1917, made acting President. Paes was finally elected President by a minority vote last Summer. On Dec. 14, 1918, he was assassinated. Three days later Admiral Canto of Castro was elected to fill his place.

HINT AT PUBLIC CONTROL

Want New Agency to Operate the System to the End That Proper Service Be Given.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 20.—Leslie Jay Tompkins, Professor of Law in New York University, and former First Assistant District Attorney of New York County, and Edwin M. Otterbourg of Otterbourg, Steindler & Houston, 200 Fifth Avenue, today petitioned Attorney General Charles D. Newton to take immediate steps to have forfeited the charters of the companies making up the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system. They asserted that eighty-three or more charters have been granted by the State, which now have been merged into one controlling company; that the companies "have been exploited and financed to death;" "that the public is suffering from lack of service, and that inadequate and inefficient management has endangered the lives of the traveling public."

The petition recites that it is the duty of the Attorney General to bring an action to terminate the existence of the corporations comprising the B. R. T. system, after which "their property shall be turned over to a new agency, either private or governmental, or partly both, whose duty it shall be to furnish safe and adequate service."

Attorney General Newton conferred tonight with his First Deputy, Jerome L. Cheney, former up-State Public Service Commissioner, upon the application.

"Until I look this matter over very carefully," said Mr. Newton, "I do not care to say what course I shall take."

The Attorney General also had a conference with Mr. Tompkins, who declared that responsibility could be fixed at no point, "for the moment one company is accused it takes refuge in the assertion that the duty belongs to another company. The authority of the State through its duly constituted Public Service Commission has been swept aside and disregarded until it has become a public scandal. Inadequate and inefficient management has endangered the lives, health, and comfort of the traveling public."

Lindley M. Garrison, receiver for the B. R. T., said last evening that he knew nothing about the proceeding instituted at Albany and could give no opinion about its merits until he had seen the papers.

The petitioners assert that more than eighty-three companies have been chartered to operate surface, elevated, and subway lines in Brooklyn, but these companies have been leased or merged or consolidated by holding companies until they have ceased to function and do business. The petitioners also allege that the original companies have become constituent elements of a combination which absolutely controls them, has absorbed their corporate functions, and dictates the extent, manner, and terms of the entire business of each. Therefore, in the view of the petitioners, the companies of original charter have forfeited their privileges and powers by failure to exercise them.

The petitioners assert that there is ample legal authority for the step suggested. "What we need," says the petition, "is not new law, but the enforcement of the present law. An investigation by the Attorney General should easily convince him of the necessity for action. That the consent of the Supreme Court for such an action can be obtained is not doubted for a moment. The Attorney General need only to apply to any of our Justices in Kings County, who are so conversant with the conditions that they lose no opportunity to criticise and condemn them when properly brought before their judicial tribunals."

The petition asserts that to forfeit the charters of these companies does not mean a forfeiture of their property rights. "It means, in the language of the petition, that "they shall be declared legally dead, and, so far as the State of New York is concerned, shall cease having power to operate the roads. The Attorney General, having obtained permission of the Supreme Court to bring such an action, the question, as to whether the companies have so failed to exercise their charters as to make them liable to forfeiture can be determined in an action triable before an ordinary jury."

BOY PRINCE'S DEATH SUDDEN

LONDON, Jan. 20, (via Montreal.)—The death of Prince John, youngest son of King George, came so quickly and unexpectedly Saturday night that there was no time for the nurses who were with him to summon the King and Queen Mary to his bedside before he expired.

In recent years the delicate health of Prince John made it necessary that he always have an attendant. Consequently he was never seen on public occasions with the other members of the royal family, but lived in comparative privacy at Frogmore House, Windsor, or at Sandringham Palace.

The London newspapers point out sympathetically how the King and Queen have sought unceasingly during the wartime to bury the tragedy of their youngest son's delicate health in the silence of their hearts, never hinting to the nation the nature of the personal anxieties weighing upon them. Public sympathy was expressed for the royal couple yesterday in all the churches.

CHAMPION RALLIES IN FINAL ROUND

DUNDEE HAS EARLY LEAD

Large Crowd Swarms Through the Turnstiles, but Soldiers Maintain Order in Big Armory.

Benny Leonard, the lightweight champion, boxed a fast eight-round draw with Johnny Dundee at the Sportsmen's Club in the First Regiment Armory in Newark last night. It was the fast rally which the champion made in the last four rounds which brought him up on even terms with the shifty little Italian. Dundee forced the fighting early in the bout. The armory was jammed with a large crowd, which cheered the fast work of the boxers until the rafters rattled.

Calling on every ring trick at his command, Leonard gave a great exhibition of his boxing skill in the eighth round, when he cut loose and tried to knock Dundee out. With perfect precision, Leonard smashed Dundee's jaw with rights and lefts and shot his head back several times. Leonard, coming in close, kept the Italian's head bobbing with stiff, well directed upper-cuts.

With remarkable gameness, Dundee met the onrush of the champion and not one of Benny's blows made him dizzy. He took all that Leonard had and boldly came in for more. Dundee was as fast as a cat in the early rounds and was the aggressor. He shot lefts on Benny's jaw and hammered his body when they came at close quarters.

Leonard was content to stay on the defensive, and permitted Johnny to force the action. Leonard parried the Italian's blows skillfully, and although Dundee worked like a beaver, he did little damage to Leonard.

Irving Margolies, former amateur champion at 115 pounds, knocked out Freddie Reese, Leonard's sparring partner, in the fourth round of their bout, scheduled for six rounds. The contest was the most interesting of the four preliminaries.

The crowd began straggling into the big armory at 6 o'clock, many of the spectators having forsaken their evening meals. For these there were vendors going through the armory with the ever-palatable "hot dog." The building filled up slowly, but by the time the first bout was put on, promptly at 8:30 o'clock, the building was pretty well filled.

Spectators with coupons were ushered to their chairs by uniformed members of the regiment. Outside there was small confusion with the big crowd striving in steady streams to force an entrance.

By the time the second bout was put on the building was taxed to its capacity. The Armory Band kept the impatient crowd appeased with popular selections. Occupants of the gallery enjoyed themselves immensely before the bouts throwing nickels to fruit vendors.

For diversion some zealous and venturesome "fans" indulged in the pleasant occupation of "going over the top." These attempts at rushing the guardians of the aisles were unsuccessful. Newark policemen and the soldiers discouraged the rushes.

Many women occupied prominent vantage points in the big arena. In a ringside chair was John S. Smith, Chairman of the New Jersey Boxing Commission. Commissioner Smith declared Leonard weighed in in the afternoon at the Washington Hotel. The titleholder tipped the beam wearing a bathrobe and pair of shoes, at 136¼ pounds. Dundee weighed 130 pounds.

Dundee was the first to enter the ring, preceded down the aisle by Lieutenant Freddie Welsh, former Champion. Dundee took his seat in the corner of the ring amid a wild acclaim. The walls of the Armory shook with the outburst of cheers which greeted the Italian. Leonard followed a minute later and also received a great ovation. The greeting to the title holder was not as voluminous as that accorded Dundee.

The usual raft of introductions followed the appearance of the boxers in the main attraction. The crowd was good natured and took the delay with tolerance.

Fight by Rounds.

Dundee started the second with a whirlwind rush and landed with his left on Leonard's chest. The Italian then sprang after the champion, lashing out eagerly with left and right which missed their mark. Leonard tried keeping Dundee at arm's length with his left but Dundee rushed past the arm and rushed Leonard to the ropes, landing a left to the head as he went in. Leonard evaded many of Dundee's blows, shortly before the bell. It was Dundee's round. He forced the fighting.

Leonard kept Dundee at bay with a left jab early in the fourth round. Dundee soon came in against the blows and cuffed his opponent with left hooks and right swings to the face and jaw. Dundee followed this up by rushing Leonard to the ropes, landing lightly with right and left to the face. Dundee's attack was furious and Leonard was carried before it. The champion was kept too busy blocking Dundee's blows to attempt an offensive. Dundee's round.

The fifth started slowly, but Dundee soon started forcing. Leonard met his attack with a left to the face and shook Dundee with a right to the jaw. Dundee retreated for a moment but returned. He was again met with a heavy bombardment and sent reeling to the ropes with a stiff right to the jaw. Leonard cut Dundee's right eye with a left hook and pounded Dundee badly to the belli. Leonard's round. Dundee was tiring.

Leonard started the seventh with a succession of right and left uppercuts to the face. The champion became eager to finish his opponent and lost many opportunities to score effectively. Leonard caught Dundee with a right to the jaw as the Italian came in. The blow was glancing. Dundee returned with a left to the stomach, but was the recipient of a number of stiff left-hand jabs. These made Dundee miss frequently to the bell. Leonard's round.

HUNT FOR CHAIRMAN BEGINS IN EARNEST

Ruppert, Navin, Veeck, and Baker Start Search for Successor to August Herrmann.

LEAGUES WILL CO-OPERATE

Chairman of National Commission in New Tangle Over Signing of Minor League Agreement.

President Ban Johnson of the American League announced yesterday that he had appointed Col. Jacob Ruppert of the Yankees and Frank J. Navin of Detroit members of the joint committee which is to make a search for a candidate to succeed August Herrmann as Chairman of the National Commission. The National League members of the committee are William Veeck of Chicago, and William F. Baker of Philadelphia. The organization will get busy immediately and attempt to solve the commission problem.

The attempt of the National League to oust Herrmann has dissolved itself into a political wrangle, in which Herrmann and Ban Johnson have the upper hand thus far. With the launching of the new committee the chairmanship has for a time been taken out of the hands of Johnson and Heydler. The National League has taken a decided stand against Herrmann and it means to go through with the campaign to place a neutral man at the head of the game.

It is now certain that Herrmann disappointed his fellow-club owners in the National League last week when he failed to resign. Herrmann was repudiated by the American League in the Scott Perry case, when Johnson's organization broke all the precepts of organized baseball by going over the commission's head and taking the Perry dispute into the civil courts. Then Herrmann was repudiated by his own league, and, much to every one's surprise, he still insisted on retaining the chairmanship.

The responsibility of naming the new chairman rests with the committee just appointed. It is believed that Messrs. Ruppert and Navin will co-operate with the National League Committee and that it will only be a question of a few weeks before a new man will be in Herrmann's position.

Herrmann's latest move in relation to the minor leagues has not met the approval of Johnson and Heydler, the other two members of the commission. Herrmann, it seems, last Saturday signed the tentative agreement which the minors had drawn up. Johnson and Heydler have refused to sign it, both saying they saw no reason for any sort of a compact between the minors and the majors in view of the fact that the minors had voluntarily accepted their independence. The major leagues understood the action of the minors as indicating that there was no necessity for an agreement and for that reason they abrogated the national agreement, which was drawn up in 1903. Now it seems they want another agreement, similar to the one which has been cancelled.

The tentative agreement which Johnson and Heydler have laid on the table, and which Herrmann stamped with his approval, is meant by the minors to govern matters of territory, reservations and contracts, until such time as the minors draw up another permanent agreement and submit it for the approval of the commission in Cincinnati.

Schedule of Twelve Games Is Arranged for Basket Ball Teams This Season.

Twelve games are on the schedule of the Intercollegiate Basket Ball League, announced yesterday by Ralph Morgan, secretary of the organization. No championship is to be awarded, for the reason that only four of the six teams in the association will play a complete schedule. The two others, Cornell and Dartmouth, will play only irregularly, if at all. Cornell will have four games; it is understood, two with Columbia and two with Pennsylvania, and Dartmouth may not put a team on the floor at all.

The league season opens Saturday night when the University of Pennsylvania five plays Columbia in New York, and the final game will be played March 14, when Pennsylvania meets Princeton, at Princeton. The only traditional date that has survived the war is that of the Yale-Princeton game, at Princeton, which will be held, as for many years past, Feb. 22. Pennsylvania has given way to Princeton as the opponent of the Columbia five on Feb. 12, Columbia's alumni day. Because there will be no formal mid-year examinations in any of the colleges the season will go through without a break.

The schedule follows:

Dickerson Defeats Bigelow.

Sydney Dickerson defeated Charles Bigelow last night at Doyle's Academy in the opening game of the Straight Rail Billiard Tournament, by a score of 150 to 80, in forty innings. Dickerson made a high run of 22, while Bigelow's highest was 14. In the Amateur Pocket Billiard Tournament of the A. A. B. A., Edward Kirby gained the decision over Benjamin Howe by the score of 100 to 42. Kirby, in making a high run of 29 in last night's game heads the list for high runs in this tournament. Howe's best effort was 10.

BAKER SIGNS WITH UPLAND.

Home Run Hitter Deserts Yankees for Delaware County League.

TRAPPE, Md., Jan. 20.—It is pretty certain that Frank Baker will not play third base for the Yankees this Summer, for it was reported today that he had signed a contract to play with the Upland Club of the Delaware County League. The home run slugger played with Upland during the season of 1915, after he left the Athletics, joining the Yanks in 1916.

Baker had a good season last year and led the club in hitting. He announced at the end of the season, however, that he was through with major league baseball. He has consented to play in the Delaware County League, because it will not take him away from his farm, except for a few days a week.

Manager Huggins of the Yankees visited Baker here a few weeks ago and had a long talk with the player. At that time, Huggins expected to persuade Baker to play with the Yanks again. His contract expired last year.

It is understood here that the Upland Club has also made a flattering offer to Babe Ruth of the Boston Red Sox. Ruth announced recently that if he played with Boston next Summer he would have to be tempted with a large increase over last year's contract.

PRO GOLFERS SEEK DATES.

Association Plans to Hold Championship Meet in August.

Two more competitions were added to the list at an Executive Committee meeting of the metropolitan section of the Professional Golfers' Association, held in this city last night. It was decided to ask the Metropolitan Golf Association to set aside the last week in August for the professional championship tournament, on the same lines as the one held at Siwanoy in 1916. Professionals from various sections of the country, who had previously qualified in their own localities, competed at match play, and Jim Barnes won, defeating Jock Hutchison after thirty-six holes.

It was also decided to request the M. G. A. to set aside a date between July 20 and July 30 in order that professionals from this section may compete at thirty-six-hole medal play to qualify for the main event. From this time on the association is planning to keep on the bulletin board at its rooms, 366 Fifth Avenue, a list of all club vacancies.

Exhibition Games for Giants.

The Giants booked four exhibition games yesterday. McGraw's club, on its way north from Florida, will play Jack Dunn's team in Baltimore on April 12 and 13, and will play two games with Washington on April 19 and 20.

The Essex Made Good

Thousands Praise the New Car

Won't You Ride In It?

This has been a notable week in automobile history.

It marks the introduction of the new light weight, moderate priced, high quality car that has been expected for almost two years. The Essex made its first showing in hundreds of cities last Thursday. Thousands have been to see and ride in it.

The great words you have heard spoken for the Essex are the voluntary expressions of its admirers.

The Essex is being advertised by those thousands who now know its qualities. That is why we urge you to come and see and ride in the car that has made such favorable impression.

Praised Because It Is Light, Low Priced, Economical, Elegant and Enduring

People talk of its beauty and the elegance of its appointment. They compare these qualities with those of fine, large and costly cars. Its lightness and economy of operation are noted and are compared with similar advantages that are exclusive to light cheap cars.

The Essex was built to meet the demand for a car that would give comfortable and enduring service, that possessed the qualities that appeal to one's good taste, that would meet every performance requirement and still was neither large, high priced nor expensive to operate.

It is the manner in which it fulfills all these demands that is exciting so much interest just now.

All dealers were instructed to let the Essex speak for itself.

We wanted to begin advertising the Essex as soon as we had seen it. We knew it would be months before it would be ready for delivery, but we wanted everyone to know what kind of a car they might expect.

But the Essex builders have been manufacturing fine cars for years. Their factory is one of the largest in the industry. They know that no words of praise can equal in their influence the impression that the car itself can make. So they said we should not advertise the Essex until there was an Essex for the people to see and ride in.

Now the People Are Advertising It

That is the only thing about the Essex we want to call your attention to in this newspaper.

If you will come see the car and ride in it we know what you will do. You will join the thousands who are saying things in more convincing words than we can print. Your endorsement will go farther than anything we can say.

The appeal of the Essex is resistless. Everyone admires it. It is making friends of all who stop to note its appearance or who will ride in it over the rough roads we pick out to reveal its comfort and sturdiness. We don't need to promise marvelous performance qualities. When you ride in the Essex you will know how it accelerates and pulls under load and how it glides over the roughest roads with a smoothness that you have thought possible only in much larger and costlier cars.

You will know how economical it is and can see the provisions that have been made to keep it free from rattles and squeaks.

Aren't you interested in seeing them?

Trimmings Going Well.

One of the local trimming manufacturers who returned from the West during the latter part of last week says that conditions were never more favorable for dress trimmings. When the season first opened it was thought that there would be comparatively few calls for fringes. But, as it happened, there has been a big sale for these goods in all colors. In almost every section of the country both large and small stores are buying very heavily. Many repeat orders have been received, especially from the Pacific Coast. On the new evening gowns floral trimmings in applique effects and bunches of grapes are being used quite extensively.

Broad Silk Neckwear Also Sells.

Although men's knitted silk neckwear is being bought more extensively this season by the retail stores, it appears that in some cases broad silks are more in demand. One manufacturer said yesterday that out of $7,000 worth of neckwear sold by him last week only $90 represented knitted goods. For the Spring season black and white stripes are again being introduced. They are shown in alternate stripes and with black backgrounds with small white stripes running through the solid color. Both in and outside of the city these goods have met with much favor.

Orders for House Dresses.

Salesmen representing manufacturers of women's house dresses who are now showing the new lines in the South and West are receiving some good sized orders for Spring delivery. Outside of the city there is very little discussion in regard to the price of the merchandise. In fact, the orders that are now being placed are as large, and in some cases larger, than those received last year. In the local trade the buying has started a little earlier and is said to be quite heavy.

Knit Goods Prices Not Binding.

Wallace J. Ross, Secretary of the Knit Goods Manufacturers of the United States, calls attention to the fact that no official or binding action has been taken with regard to prices for the next heavyweight season. The manufacturers who took part in the conference with the jobbers on Friday last acted merely in their individual capacity and simply made a recommendation. This will be discussed by the association at a meeting to be held this week, when action may be taken. Meanwhile, selling agents in this city were busy yesterday showing their goods to would-be buyers, who, while seeming confident of obtaining guarantees against reductions of price, did not do much purchasing, according to accounts.

Hosiery Conditions Unsettled.

Conditions are still very unsettled in the hosiery trade. One of the firms said yesterday that many cancellations are being received from retailers who are under the impression that merchandise of this kind can be bought cheaper later on. Heavy goods are moving very slowly; in fact, much difficulty is had in selling them at all. Despite these conditions, there is a very optimistic feeling regarding the outlook for the future. It is said that during the next two months the retailers will have to come in the market for the light weight goods, especially in women's silk hosiery.

An Investment Opportunity of Unusual Merit

THE finest eating apples produced in America are grown in the famous apple orchards of Washington and Oregon. This surpassing fruit brings the highest prices, not only in the markets of the United States but also in South America and Europe, to which markets thousands of car-loads were exported every year prior to the war. An apple orchard in bearing in the Northwest is a veritable bonanza and thousands of prosperous people throughout this section are living in luxury through having invested their money in this thriving and immensely profitable industry

A Thriving Young Orchard with a Certain Future

Due to the disturbed conditions brought about by the war, the owners of one of the most promising young apple orchards in the Northwest are compelled to seek outside capital to finance their venture. This orchard consists of about 450 acres of prime land, all of which acreage is in apples of the most popular eating varieties. The trees are just coming into bearing and under an ordinary yield their crop should run next year between fifty and sixty thousand boxes, with a yield in 1920 of approximately one hundred thousand boxes. The last crop of this orchard was sold at an average price of $1.38 per box f. o. b. cars at orchard.

Two Ways to Invest

One hundred thousand dollars is required for the maintenance and improvement of the orchard. This investment can be made in one of two ways:—

(1) As a straight investment of $100,000 to be secured by a first mortgage. A liberal return will be made by the owners for this money and your investment is amply protected.

(2) A stock interest in the company amounting to $70,000, the residue to be furnished by the present owners. The investor will receive first preferred stock, together with a liberal bonus of common stock which will practically secure him control of the company.

Safety and Good Profits

This is a real proposition, in that it is based on a staple commercial product that will pay liberal profits for a long period with a low cost of upkeep. We would emphasize the fact that this orchard is right up to date in every respect and the trees are in prime condition. Authorities declare that it is one of the most promising young orchards in the finest apple-growing section of the Northwest. Address—G. C. Sherman.

HARBOR MEN DENY SEEKING EXTRA PAY

Heads of Unions Tell Labor Board They Want Actual and Not Basic Eight-Hour Day.

CALL OVERTIME 'A PENALTY'

Stand By Demand for Time and a Half for Sundays, Even as Part of a Six-Day Week.

Officials of five of the unions comprising the affiliation of marine workers in the port of New York told the sub-committee of the National War Labor Board at the hearing in City Hall yesterday that the principal demand, by unanimous vote of 16,000 members, was the actual eight-hour day, and not the basic eight-hour day with overtime charges.

Thomas L. Delahunty, President of the Marine Affiliation, and General Manager of the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Organization, denied under cross examination that it was the intention of the workers to seek a change from a twelve-hour to and eight-hour day so that overtime would be piled up. It was possible for the boat owners and the railroads to put the eight-hour day day plan into effect on most of their boats, he said, and the demand for time and one-half above eight hours was "only a penalty" to force the operators to adopt the new system.

"It is for the boat owners to show that they cannot put the eight-hour day into operation on their boats," interposed Frank P. Walsh, counsel for the unions. "It is for them to show that the system will mean a financial loss to them. The workers ask the actual eight-hour day, not the basic eight-hour day, and the demand for overtime at one-half more than the rate for the first eight-hours was put in as a penalty for failure to observe the eight-hour day plan."

President Delahaunty upheld his contention that it was just and fair that the marine engineers should receive time and one-ha for holidays and Sundays even when they had taken another day off during the week and the Sunday was only their sixth day of work. He expressed the opinion that it "was worth it" for a workingman to give up his Sunday or holiday, although he admitted upon cross examination by Theodora H. Burgess, counsel for the United States Railroad Administration, that it was necessary to keep passenger ferries and many other boats running on Sundays so that the public would not be inconvenienced. He suggested that passengers arriving on Sundays at the railroad terminals in New Jersey "might use the Hudson tubes as they did during the marine strike."

Counsel for the Railroad Administration sought to show that the eight-hour day on lighters and some other classes of boats was impracticable. Counsel for the unions objected because of the recognition given to the eight-hour day by the Director General of Railroads. Mr. Burgess replied that it was true that the eight-hour day had been recognized but that the general order would not cover a branch of the service where the operation of the principle was impracticable and caused a great financial loss in operation.

Paul Hoynge, counsel for the Red Star Towing and Transportation Company, sought to elicit from the union officials more definite information upon their demand for uniform pay of $225 a month for all captains and all classes of engineers, irrespective of the class of boat or the size or speed of engines. President Delahunty contended that "the size of the boat or the engine is no fault of the worker" and that all should receive equal pay. Nor should the earning power of the craft enter into the fixing of pay for the men, he declared.

Although it had been asserted by other union officials that with the eight-hour day cooks on many of the boats would not be necessary, Mr. Delahunty declared that his union had not decided upon waiving the demand for cooks. In reply to a question as to what new work would be assigned to cooks released from service by the probable operation of the eight-hour day, he said that the union officials were "not going to sacrifice any member of the marine affiliation," and that if the cooks were needed the men would have them.

John Brennan, an official of the Tidewater oBatmen's Union, said the members of his organization did not demand the eight-hour day. They seek an increase from $90 a month to $125 for twelve hours, although Mr. Brennan told the subcommittee that the men would like to have it stipulated in the award that no coal or grain boats, canal boats, scows, or other craft should be required to take on cargo after 6 o'clock at night. He said the men did not object to operating the boats at night, however. Other witnesses were Paul Vacarelli, Business Manager of the Harbor Boatmen's Union; S. J. Condon, Business Manager of the Lighter Captains' Union; Joseph F. Stanton of the Railroad Port and Terminal Workers, and Patrick E. Doran, captain of a Lackawanna Railroad tug.

The hearings will be resumed in the Board of Estimate room in City Hall at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

Frankly, we want you to visit the Herman showrooms—for your own advantage. You'd have a long look to find better coat and suit values than you can get here.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Railroad stocks came in for considerable selling yesterday and before the close of business the movement had extended to the bond market. While professional operations appear to be the chief propelling force toward lower price levels for stocks, liquidation of long holdings were also reported in brokerage circles to be on the increase. In the forepart of the session the industrial issues, particularly steel and equipment shares, were under more pressure than the rails but as the day progressed the market broadened and the decline of a point or more in such stocks as New York Central, New Haven, Northern Pacific, Reading and Southern Pacific could be described as a feature of business. The range of stocks dealt in was fairly broad but activity was not pronounced and there were no unusual movements to attract attention in special directions.

The downward tendency of the rails supplied a rather curious study of market psychology. At the start of business the market seemed to have something in the way of a speculative stimulus on the constructive side in reports that the Railroad Administrator would shortly seek an increase of freight rates. Despite this prices began quickly to move off and when recessions were noted in certain railroad bonds the receding movement received all the more emphasis. The receipt of dispatches from Washington later saying that Mr. Hines denied that the rate application was in prospect accelerated the selling. While the trading element is wont to grasp anything which may be used to advantage in seizing a profit, it seemed as though the freight rate discussion was interpreted yesterday more in the light of economic significance than as a passing influence on price alterations. A freight rate increase which carries in its train fresh increases of wages hardly has any really constructive bearing on net income and it is the matter of income which at the present time is receiving more study than many surrounding factors. A heavy deficit for 1918 has now been generally accepted not only as a certainty but as a development which resulted primarily from the war necessity. The railroad problem is connected with the future more than with the past and freight rate increases when made necessary by advancing wages will hardly clarify the outlook from the investment point of view, as long as the more important factor of future control of the carriers is not definitely outlined.

Comment heard in the street indicated that followers of the securities markets were devoting fresh thought to the readjustment of industry. The favorable sentiment aroused by fairly cheerful observations on steel plant operations last week were less in evidence. Whether or not the day's decline of stocks, a continuation of last week's movement, represented a permanent step toward readjusting market valuations to the status of industry cannot be determined as yet, but the possibility of such a process was talked about at length in trading quarters.

Call money continued easy, the minimum quotation being 3¾ per cent, which equaled the lowest level in several months. In the foreign exchange market business was dull with unimportant changes of quotations. Cotton again declined.

Trading Active on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—Trading on the Bourse today was active. Three per cent. rentes were quoted at 63 francs 15 centimes; exchange on London, 25 francs 98 centimes; 5 per cent. loan, 93 francs.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

To Confer on Mexico.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico will be held this morning. Following this session it is believed that the full outline of the organization's plans with regard to the Mexican difficulties will be decided upon.

Another Hide and Leather Plan.

There were reports yesterday that a new reorganization plan for American Hide and Leather was under consideration by various interests identified with the company. Repeated plans for a refinancing of the company have been submitted during the last few years and it was said by a Director of the company yesterday that so far as he knew the present proposals had been confined entirely to suggestions. The company has $3,011,000 in twenty year 6 per cent. bonds falling due next September, part of an issue of $8,047,000, the balance being in the sinking fund. Under the adjustment plan these would be paid off at maturity and the present holders of the $13,000,000 stock would receive a new 7 per cent. preferred, dollar for dollar. The back dividends on the preferred, amounting to 116 per cent., would be paid by the issuing of 210,000 shares of new common. The present common stockholders would receive one new share of common for each two shares of the outstanding common held.

Marine Preferred Below Par.

International Mercantile Marine preferred in yesterday's trading fell below par for the first time this year, the low for the day being 99¼ and the close at 100, showed a sharp decline from that of last Saturday. The continued withholding of definite news regarding the pending deal between the British and American Governments has not been particularly pleasing to traders. Now and again rumors have come forth that the deal was off, only to have denials follow shortly afterward.

The Return of Shipping.

One of the most vital steps necessary to an expansion of our foreign trade has been the release of shipping commandeered by the Government to private owners. This has been announced as forthcoming as speedily as possible, and the many export concerns which have been formed recently can now look forward with more confidence to the actual transaction of business. Contrary to the general interpretation of trade conditions, some of the steel interests report that export business is showing considerable activity. This is especially true of the Consolidated Steel Corporation, formed to handle the export business of some of the largest independent concerns. It was said yesterday by this company that inquiries were numerous and that many were developing into actual orders.

Copper Market Quiet.

In trade circles it is reported that there is little active demand for copper, a condition which has prevailed since late in December. The question has been raised, in view of the continued lack of buying, as to how far the curtailment of production by the copper companies will actually proceed. It has been announced by some of the more prominent companies that they will not sell copper below 23 cents, and that mining operations will continue to be reduced until an active demand develops. Just how far in this process of curtailment the companies will have to go before encountering a deficiency in supply presents some interesting speculation.

Uncertainty Rules Rails.

The uncertainty surrounding the question of returning the railroads of the country to a modified private ownership subject to responsible governmental regulation continued to rule the course of the standard railroad shares in yesterday's stock market. The report from Washington that the increases in wages granted by former Director General of Railroads McAdoo would aggregate close to $1,000,000,000, instead of the $600,000,000 he had mentioned, was not without a depressing effect, and the movement of the rails was generally downward, although offerings of stock were fairly light. Atchison, which opened at 91¾, sold off to 91½ at the close, after touching 92, with only 800 shares changing hands. On a turnover of only 500 shares, Delaware & Hudson lost almost a point from the opening quotation of 108⅝, while Erie, Great Northern preferred, Pennsylvania, and Norfolk & Western, Missouri Pacific, and others registered fractional losses.

BRITAIN OFFERS LONG TERM BONDS

American Syndicate to Manage Conversion of $150,000,000 of 5½ Per Cent. Notes.

ISSUE TO RUN FOR 20 YEARS

An announcement by J. P. Morgan & Company yesterday in connection with the conversion of the $150,000,000 issue of 5½ per cent. United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland notes indicated that the first public offering of foreign securities in this country since the armistice was signed would be twenty-year 5½ per cent. bonds of the British Government. J. P. Morgan & Co. are organizing a syndicate consisting of the First National Bank, the National City Company, Harris, Forbes & Co.; Kidder, Peabody & Co.; the Guaranty Trust Company, the Bankers Trust Company, the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, Brown Bros. & Co.; Lee, Higginson & Co., and other firms to underwrite the note conversion, the terms providing that the group take the paper not converted by present holders and exchange it for long-term bonds on their own account. It is expected that the bonds they receive will shortly be open for subscription by investors.

The United Kingdom notes are part of an issue of $250,000,000 of which $100,000,000 were paid off Feb. 1 last year. The remainder fall due on Feb. 1. To date about $55,000,000 of the notes have been converted into the British Government issue, and it is estimated that the banking group will ultimately have between $60,000,000 and $80,000,000 of the bonds to dispose of. Details of the offering were not made public yesterday, but the present market price of the twenty-year bonds already outstanding through conversions indicate that the price will be in the neighborhood of par.

The transaction supplies a new departure in international financing. Heretofore loans made by Great Britain, France and other allied nations in this country have been entirely on a short-term basis, part of them secured by collateral and the others unsecured. The 5½ per cent. bonds represent the only long-term obligation of the British Government payable in dollars in New York and dealt in on the American market.

Great Britain, Belgium, Italy and others of the allied nations have been negotiating for several weeks with the Treasury Department and bankers for sales of securities in this country. With the $5,000,000,000 victory loan coming late in April, plans for foreign financing will need to be completed quickly, and several issues are looked for prior to March 1.

ASSAILS FEDERAL PAPERS.

Sherman Asserts Department Bulletins Serve No Useful Purpose.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20. — Senator Sherman of Illinois offered a resolution in the Senate today calling upon the Committee on Printing to investigate the various publications issued by the Government, including the Official Bulletin, to ascertain if they are actually serving any useful purpose. Altogether, there are eighteen publications issued by the various departments. The resolution, which went to the Committee on Printing, was as follows:

"Resolved by the Senate, That the newspapers, magazines, and other instrumentalities of a free press serve adequately all purposes in the transmission of news and its communication to the public.

"That the practice which has developed of various Government departments publishing what is in effect a newspaper or a periodical, which ostensibly represents to the public news from that department, has become a system of promoting various economic proposals, schemes for extending the power of the department or bureau concerned and securing increased appropriations; it is a menace to the free press of the country, a burden to the taxpayer thereof, and serves no useful purpose in promoting efficient, economic, or sound principles of government.

"Resolved, That the Senate Committee on Printing be and is hereby directed to investigate the number of such periodicals or papers published by the departments, bureaus, boards, and commissions, the number of persons employed therein, and the estimated cost of the same, and report such matter to the Senate for its further consideration."

PROTEST ON THEATRE TAX.

Thousands of Messages on Proposed Rise Sent to Conferees.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Telegrams, letters, and petitions by the thousands, protesting against the proposed increasing of the 10 per cent. tax on theatre tickets to 20 per cent. were received today at the offices of the Senate Finance Committee, where the Senate and House conferees who are struggling over the War Revenue bill held their sessions.

The conferees did not get together because of the illness of Representative Kitchin, Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and leading advocate of the increased theatre, movie and club taxes. Mr. Kitchin will be present tomorrow when the deliberations will be resumed.

There was not sufficient storage space in the ante-room of the conference quarters and batches of the petitions and letters were shoved inside the room. Clerks piled heaps of them upon the table where they will be the first objects to greet the eyes of the conferees in the morning.

The majority of the petitions, it was stated, came from New York, Boston, Philadelphia, and other large communities in the Eastern part of the country. Word has been received by telegram that petitions signed by many thousands of theatregoers are being forwarded from the Middle West and West.

There is nothing definite to indicate what, if any, action will be taken in the direction of a downward revision of the theatre taxes. The Senate members of the conference who suggested the retention of 10 per cent., but who agreed to the higher tax demanded by the House conferees in order not to block compromises on bigger problems, are still taking the position that the protestants must aim their attacks upon Representative Kitchin and his followers. It is possible that some announcement will be made tomorrow after the protests now cluttering up the committee quarters are given consideration.

The big problem which will confront the conferees tomorrow is the settlement of the war excess profits taxes payable in 1919.

DENIES CONSIDERING FREIGHT RATE RISE

Director General Hines Issues Statement on the Railroads' Problems for 1919.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Walker D. Hines, Director General of Railroads, today issued a statement in which he denied that the Railroad Administration "has given or is giving any consideration to any increase in the present basis of rates."

The statement followed the publication in THE NEW YORK TIMES and certain other newspapers of a report that the Government operation of railroads in 1919 would result in a deficit, instead of the surplus predicted by former Director General McAdoo, and that this situation might render it necessary to seek a further rise in freight rates.

The denial issued by Director General Hines today does not go to the heart of the question, namely, the assertion that instead of operating the railroads in 1919 so as to produce a surplus the Government faces the prospect of a deficit, and there is no denial by Mr. Hines that the Railroad Administration "may have" to recommend a rise in railroad rates, or call on Congress to appropriate funds to make good a deficit for 1919.

"There is no foundation for the report that the Railroad Administration has given consideration or is giving consideration to any increase in present basis of rates," Mr. Hines's statement read.

"The results of operations for the year will be largely dependent upon the volume of traffic. If the volume of traffic should be as large as last year, it is believed the operating income would be sufficient to pa ythe rental. As soon as any reasonably satisfactory conclusion as to the probable volume of traffic can be formed, the public and Congress will be given the best possible estimate of the prospects for 1919."

In the Washington dispatch to THE TIMES it was pointed out that in the event o fthe deficit which may occur, there would be five ways open for meeting it, one of which would be through increase in the volume of traffic. The statement is made that the weekly returns to the Director General show a falling off in traffic since the armistice was signed. Mr. Hines says that "if the volume of traffic should be as large as last year," then "it is believed," by the Railroad Administration, that the "operating income would be sufficient to pay the rental."

More Than $2,000,000,000 Already Impounded by the Federal Reserve Banks.

NOT READY FOR EXPORTING

Light on Foreign Needs Wanted Before Present Restrictions Can Be Lifted.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The striking change in the gold situation growing out of the war, which has produced a remarkable rearrangement and redistribution of gold among the leading commercial and belligerent nations, is dealt with by the Federal Reserve Board in its monthly bulletin for January, just off the press and made public tonight.

Since the war started in August, 1914 the gain in this country's stock of gold has been $1,071,660,000. These figures are complete up to Dec. 10, 1918. More than $2,000,000,000 worth of gold has now been impounded by the Federal Reserve banks and the Federal Reserve Board is of the opinion that this stock will reach the staggering figure of $2,500,000,000.

One effect of the changes in the international gold situation has been to raise in urgent form in the minds of members of the Federal Reserve Board the question as to the extent to which gold will be used as a circulating medium and also the question of the extent to which the gold standard can maintain itself, but the board feels that creditor countries, such as England and the United States, will find it necessary to maintain the essential integrity of the gold standard unimpaired.

"Among the sterling changes produced by the war," says the board in its bulletin, "is a very great rearrangement or redistribution of gold among the principal commercial and belligerent nations, as well as a considerable increase of prices. One question which has naturally been presented in urgent form, therefore, is the extent to which gold will be used as a circulating medium and the extent to which the gold standard can maintain itself.

"Practically all of the principal belligerent countries had a very large actual hand-to-hand circulation of gold prior to the coming on of the war, but in practically all of them this gold has been transferred to the central banks and has been methodically eliminated from the actual circulation.

"More than $2,000,000,000 of gold has thus far been impounded by the Federal Reserve banks, and it seems likely that this movement will continue to a point that will enlarge the stock of gold held by the Federal Reserve banks to perhaps $2,800,000,000, if Government estimates of the total gold monetary stock of the country are accurate.

"The question may fairly be raised whether the outcome of the situation may not be that of introducing the general use of substitutes for gold. It is interesting to note that the recent report of the Committee on Currency of the Foreign Exchanges in Great Britain has recommended that the policy be pursued of substituting notes for all gold outside the central bank reserves.

"Creditor countries, such as England has been in the past, and such as the United States is today, and countries—such as England and henceforth also the United States—which expect to be international bankers, will doubtless find it necessary to maintain the gold standard in its essential integrity; in other words, they will have to maintain a free gold market, or one in which sterling and dollar credits, respectively, will always without question or delay be liquidated in gold or in currency convertible into gold.

"To that end it will be necessary for them to maintain their domestic currency on an unequivocal gold basis by always standing ready to redeem all forms of it on demand in gold.

"A large absolute supply of gold does not appear to be necessary to the successful maintenance of the gold standard, if a country occupies the position of a banking creditor holding a large volume of foreign bills and has an efficient banking system. In the United States today both gold and gold certificates have largely disappeared from circulation and the remaining currency in the hands of the people now consists largely of Federal Reserve notes, national bank notes, and Federal Reserve Bank notes.

"Further light upon the character of the needs and requirements of foreign countries with respect to advances of capital from the United States must be obtained before definite conclusions can be reached with respect to the advisability of removing restrictions on the shipment of gold out of the United States."

NEW LOAN
Exempt from All Federal Income Taxes
$2,750,000
Arkansas Louisiana Highway District
Serial 6% Bonds

Dated March 1, 1918. No Option. Due September 1 serially as below

Total issue $2,750,000. Coupon bonds in denomination of $1,000 and $500. Principal and semi-annual interest, March 1 and September 1, payable at the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, St. Louis, Missouri.

THIS DEBT constitutes the obligation of a district including approximately 675,000 acres of fertile agricultural lands, about 29 towns, and some 200 miles of railroad, with a population of 75,000, and is payable from an annual tax on all of the real property contained within the boundaries of the district.

THIS DISTRICT contains portions of Ashley, Chicot, Desha, Drew and Lincoln Counties, situated in the southeastern part of Arkansas. It is one of the richest sections of the Mississippi Valley and development is progressing rapidly. At the present time perhaps 40% of the area of this District consists of improved farms. The Towns of McGehee, Dermott, Arkansas City, Lake Village, Dumas, included therein, furnish trading facilities, while Little Rock, Memphis and New Orleans supply convenient markets. The Missouri Pacific Railroad traverses the District for over 200 miles.

THE IMPROVEMENT contemplates the expenditure of over $3,000,000, provided by these bonds and $300,000 by the State of Arkansas. One hundred fifty-five miles of public roads are to be constructed; 80% of which will be asphalt. The work has been let to responsible contractors who have given bond for the construction of the improvement as planned. Sufficient revenue will be available for proper annual maintenance.

TAXES TO PAY THESE BONDS have been irrevocably levied upon all of the real property within the District and exceed the requirements by a safe margin. About 96% of the cost of the improvement will be paid by the acreage, 2½% by the town property, and 1½% by the railroads and other public utilities. The average debt per acre is $4.00, the highest being $12.00. The average annual requirement for the payment of principal and interest is 60c per acre, the highest being $1.20. Land values range from $125 to $25 per acre, depending upon the state of cultivation. The value of the lands alone is in excess of $27,000,000 and the assessed valuation of property taxed for the payment of the improvement is approximately $9,576,718.

The Advantages of a SAFEKEEPING ACCOUNT

To the Owner of Securities Which Bear February Coupons

TO insure prompt collection of your February coupons and thereby avoid loss of interest, many details should be attended to in advance.

Coupons must be cut, Income Tax certificates must be made out, and the coupons must be deposited.

If any bonds mature on February 1st, they should be deposited for collection, to make possible the reinvestment of your funds without delay and loss of interest.

You can free yourself of personal attention to such details by depositing your securities in a SAFEKEEPING ACCOUNT with our Trust Department.

Under a SAFEKEEPING ACCOUNT we assume responsibility for the safety of your holdings, collect and credit all income, and render other important services. You do not in any way relinquish your control of your investments. The fee is very moderate.

May we send our booklet, "THE SAFEKEEPING OF SECURITIES," which gives complete information, or explain more fully to you, in person? Our offices are conveniently located, both downtown and uptown.

GRADUAL DECLINE IN PRICES EXPECTED

Federal Reserve Board Foresees No Rapid Return to Ante-War Basis.

INFLATION WORLD - WIDE

Extraordinary Expenditures on Account of War Must Continue for Some Time.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Declaring that 1918 was the most remarkable year in the financial history of the world, the Federal Reserve Board in its official review of the year, made public today, turns to the future and says:

"The monetary problem characteristic in all countries today is general inflation of prices. This condition stands today as the main obstacle to a restoration of free gold movements. With prices as they stand, bank reserves are regarded as inadequate in many countries to the meeting of probable demands for redemption, assuming the continued existence of the present level of prices.

"In some countries, notably those of the Central Powers, the credit circulation has become so largely expanded as to leave the underlying gold as little more than a mere theoretical base or protection for outstanding liabilities. If such a condition affected the Central Powers only it might not be considered an immediate or urgent problem for the remainder of the world. In the natural course of events it must, however, be expected that commercial relationship between the belligerents will eventually be resumed, and the question must then present itself how payments and settlements are to be made between them.

"A general world program for the restoration of prices must therefore apply not only to those countries which have succeeded in keeping their own internal conditions tolerably satisfactory, but must also include the weaker nations and those that have been defeated in the present war. This makes the inflation situation not merely a national but an international problem of fundamental importance.

Post-War Drift of Prices.

"In the United States, as in other countries, the first question asked by business interests relative to the transition to a peace basis has to do with the possible drift of prices. The price equation has been fundamentally altered in both its terms—on the monetary side in the supply and distribution of the metallic medium, as well as, much more largely, in the supply of credit; on the commodity side through changes in the volume and distribution of goods and the location of existing stocks of these goods.

"As a result of the operation of these factors on both sides of the price equation, prices have, as it is well known, practically doubled in the Western countries. In some the increase has been more than 100 per cent., in others less, but the statement that the price level is now twice as high as it was at the outbreak of the European war is in general terms a fair representation of the case.

"That this situation is abnormal and artificial, and that it consequently is not likely to perpetuate itself, is obvious. Some authorities have expressed themselves as expecting a sharp reduction in prices consequent upon the close of the war, but no such reduction, or even a general tendency in that direction, has thus far exhibited itself, and the more conservative view would appear to be that there will be a gradual reduction in prices, probably not to their former level, but to something approximating it.

"During the period between the last Fridays in 1917 and 1918 the total gold holdings of the Reserve system have risen from $1,671,133,000 to $2,090,274,000 and its total assets from $3,102,689,000 to $5,251,990,000. So-called war paper handled by Federal Reserve banks is today approximately $1,400,000,000 out of total assets of $5,152,000,000, and this great sum represents about 32 per cent. of the total discounted paper held by Federal Reserve banks.

Change in Banking Methods.

"Activities devoted to war finance will now need gradual adaptation to peace requirements, involving as great a change in banking as the parallel movement through which industry must now pass in the return from a war to a peace basis. As loans based upon Government bonds are reduced and eventually eliminated, loans growing out of normal processes of business life will take their place and must be dealt with on the basis of peace requirements.

"This is now the problem in the Federal Reserve system. Meantime the student of banking will not fail to note the unquestionable efficiency which has been exhibited by Federal Reserve banks in extending the enormous amount of credit which was demanded of them, in transferring the obligations growing out of such credit, and in meeting the requirements of the community for note currency."

The board still estimates that $18,000,000,000 will be spent by the Government and says:

"Assuming that the new Revenue bill yields $2,000,000,000 in taxation, the proportion of $2 in loans to each $1 in taxes, theoretically established at the beginning of the fiscal year as a standard toward which to work, still remains effective. This implies the continuation of large spending operations.

"In preparation for the next Liberty Loan two issues of certificates of indebtedness running ninety days have already been placed, their proceeds aggregating $1,155,082,000. Continued preparation for large additional Government borrowing is thus rendered necessary, and it becomes evident that in order to obtain $6,000,000,000 from taxation and perhaps an equal amount from a Fifth Liberty Loan to be offered during early Spring very close conservation of resources will be essential.

"Inasmuch as the process of paying the taxes and subscribing for and paying the new loan will go on almost simultaneously, the combined draft upon our national resources is likely to be very heavy. The necessity of reduction of nonessential credits and of conservation of incomes and savings is thus again emphasized.

"During the coming months there will continue to be necessity for the employment of those expedients which are generally classed as war finance at the same time that our domestic requirements and those of foreign countries are beginning to draw upon the banking resources of the country for the purpose of providing the economic basis of peace reorganization. For some time to come, therefore, the demands upon our banking means will be of a dual nature.

"It will not be possible to apply either the standards of war or those of peace to the analysis and control of the situation, but in some measure both principles of action must be combined."

VIOLENT BREAK IN COTTON.

A violent break, which carried prices for some of the more active options down 150 points from last week's closing levels, occurred in yesterday's cotton market, and the good feeling which has been slowly building up for a few days was eliminated. Selling was general, coming from ring and trade sources here and from Liverpool and the South. At the close of the day the market was virtually at the lowest, with March at 23.30, against 24.80 on Saturday, and May at 22.15, compared with a previous closing of 23.65.

On the first call prices were irregular, due mainly to the disappointing action of the Liverpool market, which came in much lower than expected. After the call the market started downward, and continued to sell off most consistently throughout the remainder of the session. In the last hour pressure was especially heavy and some of the worst losses of the day were suffered in that period.

There was much disappointment in both trade and speculative circles over the failure of Europe to stock up more rapidly. In the last forthnight European stocks have been practically stationary, and it is now believed that Manchester and other centres will continue to hold off until something definite regarding the economic features of the peace arrangements is known. The labor situation abroad is also causing some uneasiness. Under the circumstances, local interests which have been supporting the market could hardly be expected to take all the offerings which appeared yesterday and, in fact, it was reported that some of these interests were lightening their holdings.

Calcutta-

Population 1,216,500

WITH its suburbs Calcutta is next to London the most populous city of the British Empire; over one-third of the entire trade of India passes through Calcutta. Its imports have increased from £21,000,000 in 1902-1903 to £34,000,000 in 1911-1912 and its exports from £34,000,000 to £57,000,000 in the same period. Calcutta is the only available port of export for the rich products of Bengal. The combined value of the import and export trade in private merchandise for the year ended March 31, 1917, was over $481,000,000, as compared with $454,000,000 the previous year. Calcutta received from the United States forty-nine per cent more goods in 1916 than during the previous year. This increase consists of Mineral Oils, Motor Cars, Motor Cycles, Hardware and Electrical Implements. More than half its export trade is with Europe.

New Issue

South Porto Rico Sugar Company

8% Cumulative Preferred Stock
(Par Value of Shares $100.00)

Preferred as to Earnings, Property and Assets.
Quarterly Dividends Payable on the First Day of January, April, July and October.

Both the common and preferred stocks of the Company are listed on the New York Stock Exchange, and application will be made to list the preferred stock now offered

The Company has no bonded indebtedness.

We summarize from a letter of Frank A. Dillingham, President of the South Porto Rico Sugar Company, as follows:

The Company has been in successful operation since 1902. Dividends at the rate of 8% per annum have been regularly paid on the preferred stock since that time.

The proceeds of the preferred stock just sold will provide additional working capital for the purposes of the Company and its subsidiary, including additional cane plantings in Santo Domingo.

The actual investment in the property (exclusive of current assets), which has been made out of the sale of capital stock and from earnings, is $16,422,287, of which about $6,800,000 is from earnings.

The common stock is now selling on the New York Stock Exchange at about $140 per share, indicating a market equity above the preferred stock of $7,875,000, or $157 per share.

The production of raw sugar by the Company has nearly doubled in the last nine years.

The average annual operating profits for the nine years, 1910-1918, were $1,792,299, which is equal to four and one-half times the 8% annual dividend on the preferred stock now outstanding.

Operating profits for the year ending September 30th, 1918, amounted to $2,691,851, being six and one-half times the amount required to pay the dividend on the entire preferred shares, and it is confidently believed that the earnings for the coming year will be in excess thereof.

Since January, 1910, the operating profits have been $16,150,693, out of which $6,812,860 has been set aside as reserve funds for Depreciation and Working Capital. In other words, considerably more than one-third of the operating profits has been set aside as reserves.

The greater part of the issue having been sold we offer the unsold balance subject to prior sale at

$107.50 per share and accrued dividend, yielding about 7.45%

THOM URGES ACTION TO UNIFY RAILROADS

Says Federal Incorporation Is Necessary for Consolidation of Systems.

OBSTACLE IN STATES' LAWS

Single Head, with a Cabinet Post, Should Be Appointed, Witness Tells Senators.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Federal incorporation of railroads will be necessary in order that there may be consolidations of systems, Alfred P. Thom, General Counsel for the railway executives, told the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee when he completed his testimony before that body today. Mr. Thom said that repeal of the anti-trust laws would not be sufficient. He took this ground, he explained, because many States now had laws prohibiting consolidation, and others required that consent must be obtained from the legislatures before such a step was attempted. Consolidations should be "permitted" instead of being "compelled," under law, he declared.

Mr. Thom will be followed on the stand tomorrow by another representative of the railway executives, Julius Kruttschnitt, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Santa Fé. On Wednesday the Railway Brotherhood will present its views on future railway control.

Today, when Senator Kellogg of Minnesota asked Mr. Thom if he thought the railroads' proposal to establish a Secretary of Transportation in the Cabinet would increase the danger of politics, the witness answered:

"I don't think its possible to keep Federal administration of the roads out of politics. The question would be as to the kind of politics. Whoever may be appointed, and whatever office he would hold, he would still be surrounded by a political atmosphere."

"Well," continued Senator Kellogg, "would it not be better to put the control in the hands of somebody such as the Interstate Commerce Commission, whose members are so appointed as to prevent the body from being influenced by political changes?"

"We believe," replied Mr. Thom, "you are going to extend the period of Federal control. If that is true, it is important that there should be a single head, whose decision in administrative matters might be taken quickly, for that will be the measure of our capacity to adapt ourselves to changing business conditions. Therefore we want a single head to initiate decisions subject to review by the commission."

Senator Kellogg suggested the employment of an outside man, who would act as an administrator. But Mr. Thom insisted that in any system of Federal control the National Administration should be directly responsible to the people for adequacy of service, and therefore a Cabinet officer accessible to the President would be the best administrator.

The railway executives have open minds upon the subject of what should be done with excess earnings, Mr. Thom told the committee; they were willing to consider plans whereby these could be put into extensions and improvements, or into the Federal Treasury, or used for the betterment of more or less unsuccessful systems.

"You do not contemplate a plan of making rates high enough to support every railroad?" asked Senator Cummins of Iowa.

"No, that could not be done," answered the witness. "But we want the Interstate Commerce Commission given specific authority to make rates for roads in the average condition. There are some that could not live under such rates. The ordinary commercial law must apply to them. They must be absorbed."

DISCUSSED FEEDING EUROPE

PARIS, Jan. 20.—Further consideration of the problem of provisioning Europe was taken up by the Supreme Council of Supply and Relief after its members had returned from the armistice conference at Treves late last week, according to the council's official statement issued today. A permanent committee was named by the council, and this committee was called together yesterday for its first meeting. The council's statement reads:

"The Supreme Council of Supply and Relief resumed its deliberations on Saturday upon the return of their delegates from Treves. The Earl of Reading presided. The council considered the results of the negotiations of the preceding days at Treves, especially the agreement reached for the handing over of the German mercantile marine. They continued the examination of the financial problems involved in reprovisioning Europe. They had before them information supplied by the Commander in Chief of the allied forces in Eastern Europe as to the needs and resources of the territories in that sphere.

"The council appointed a permanent committee, which held its first meeting on Sunday."

PREDICT DEARER FOOD.

Army Officials Anticipate Removal of Price Restrictions.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Higher food prices next year are anticipated by army officials, who, in asking Congress for appropriations for food purchases, disclosed today that they had allowed for a 10 per cent. increase in the year beginning next July.

"When the Food Administration ceases to function and all its restrictions are removed, prices will go sky high," declared Lieutenant Colonel Adams of the Quartermaster's Corps, before the House Military Committee.

An army ration—food for one man for one day—now costs the Government 48 cents. Colonel Adams said appropriations had been asked on a basis of 53 cents.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Net losses from one to three points were recorded in the market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Pressure in heavy volume in the final hour, directed against the leading industrials made for a sharp decline and extended to the rails. Securities, which previously had displayed strength, gave way and lost the major portion, if not all, of their advances.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

The realty market opened unusually strong yesterday with the sale of a $110,000 dwelling in the Upper Fifth Avenue section, four apartment house transactions on Washington Heights and several investment purchases on the East Side. Many of the sales were for all cash, which is considered highly favorable to market conditions as, heretofore, trading has predominated.

The Upper Fifth Avenue deal involved the modern six-story private dwelling at 6 West Fifty-sixth Street, on a lot 25 by 100.5, which was sold by William B. May & Co., in conjunction with Tucker, Speyers & Co., to Frank Partridge, art dealer, now at 741 Fifth Avenue. It was sold by the heirs of the late Dr. F. LeR. Satterlee, who occupied the house up to his death, about a year ago, since when the house has been vacant. The residence, 1 West Fifty-sixth Street, was recently purchased by Duveen Brothers to protect their Fifth Avenue building.

$300,000 West Side Investment.

An important investment deal in the Washington Heights district was closed by Joseph Jovans in the purchase of the six-story apartment house, known as the Chambold, of 66 to 72 Fort Washington Avenue, being at the southwest corner of 162d Street. It occupies a plot 100 by 152 feet, and was held at $300,000. It was bought from the Chambold Court Realty Company, which acquired it last September from Sallie H. Waller. The deal was a cash transaction. Sol Friedus & Co. were the brokers. Joseph J. Abramson represented the buyer as attorney, and the sellers were represented by Greenberg & Levy.

Upper Manhattan Apartment Sale.

In the Upper Manhattan residential zone the five-story apartment house at 42 Northern Avenue, southwest corner of 179th Street, on plot 80 by 125, was purchased by Voell & Schultz from Henry Van Arsdale. It has been held at $175,000. The brokers in the sale were M. I. Stransky and McDowell & McMahan.

Investor Buys Heights Apartment for Cash.

As an investment, Ethel Backer purchased from Frederick Brown, for all cash, 535 West 151st Street, a six-story elevator apartment, on a plot 75 by 100, adjoining the northeast corner of Broadway. The property shows an annual rental of $17,000 and was held at $135,000. M. Veit negotiated the sale.

Sale of Lexington Avenue Corner.

Gaines, Van Nostrand & Morrison, Inc., sold for H. B. Leckler the three-story dwelling 180 Lexington Avenue, being the northwest corner of Thirty-first Street, on a lot 21.5 by 47.10, to a client of James V. Graham. The property is assessed at $24,500.

Operator Buys Pearl Street Loft.

Jacob Lorillard sold to an operator, for all cash, 269 Pearl Street, a five-story loft building covering a lot 17 by 61, adjoining the northwest corner of Fulton Street. The Charles F. Noyes Company and Douglas Robinson-Charles S. Brown Company negotiated the sale.

Builder Increases East Side Holdings.

Henry Hof sold for the estate of Conrad Vogel the four-story brick building on a lot 22.8 by 98.9 at 218 East Forty-first Street to Robert E. Kelly, builder. The property has been owned by the seller since 1852. By this purchase Mr. Kelly now controls the five buildings from 214 to 222 East Forty-first Street, on a plot 113.6 by 98.

Private Dwelling Sales.

Duff & Brown Company have sold for the United States Trust Company 384 Convent Avenue, a four-story dwelling on a lot 25 by 95.

$700,000 Fifth Avenue Lease.

An important Fifth Avenue lease has been closed by John Forsythe & Sons in the rental for twenty-one years from May 1 of the six-story building at 590 Fifth Avenue, adjoining the southwest corner of Forty-eighth Street, occupied by Black, Starr & Frost. The lease was taken from the owner, Mrs. Hermine Haan and will aggregate $700,000 for the term. The lessees now occupy the quarters at 3 West Forty-second Street and have no intention of moving for the present. The art firm of Scott & Fowles occupy the store, basement, and first floor in the 590 Fifth Avenue building and expect to remain there for at least two or three years. Rice & Hill were the brokers in the transaction.

A mortgage for $160,000 has been obtained by the Congregation B'nai Jeshurum on its property at 257 to 265 West Eighty-eighth Street, 89.2 by 100.8 in the middle of the block between Broadway and West End Avenue. The mortgage was taken by the Emigrant Industrial Savings Institution at 5¼ per cent. due Jan. 1, 1924.

The Bronx Market.

Morris Sax sold for Charles Johansen 2,694 Valentine Avenue, a five-story new law flat on plot 40 by 100, to an investor for cash.

The Benenson Realty Company sold to a client of Rubin & Lefkowitz 1,447 Wilkins Avenue, a six-story apartment house containing four stores, on a plot 56 by 98. The property was held at $75,000 and rents for $11,000 annually. It was a cash transaction.

TWO MORE MURDERS IN OUTLYING QUEENS

Saloonkeeper and Wife Shot Down Within a Mile of Where Elizabeth Riddell Was Slain.

FOUR LEAVE FINGER PRINTS

Identification of Two $10 Notes May Verify O'Donnell Confession —Prisoner Still Raving.

With the solution of the murder of Miss Marg Elizabeth Riddell, the 17-year-old stenographer who was killed last Wednesday evening in Glen Morris, Richmond Hill, depending upon the identification today of two $10 notes carried by Patrick O'Donnell, who has confessed the murder, the second crime of violence in five days in Queens was reported yesterday. Within a mile from where Miss Riddell was killed, Joseph Holbach, proprietor of Holbach's Hall, a café at Leahy Avenue and Rockaway Boulevard, and his wife were murdered.

As closing time, 1 o'clock, drew near yesterday morning, Holbach began drawing down the shades of his place and his wife went back of the bar to check up the day's receipts. Four men, apparently Italians, were at a small table drinking. The preparations to close the saloon seemed to anger them. On the stroke of 1 o'clock, Holbach with a smile told them they would have to leave.

"Not on your life," one of them replied. Holbach remonstrated with them. One man jumped up and ran to the door, two others took stations at either end of the bar, and although the police last night said that this indicated preparations for a robbery, no effort was made to rifle the cash register until the fourth man at the table drew a revolver. Steadying his elbow on the table he coolly shot Holbach in the chest.

With a hysterical scream, Mrs. Holbach ran from behind the bar, intending to go to her husband's aid. As she stooped over Holbach, the man at the table again pulled the trigger and Mrs. Holbach fell over dead. The shots were heard by Policeman Joseph Paletta, two blocks away, on his way to his home, in Leahy Avenue. When Paletta located the source of the shots, he found the saloon empty and lightless, and Mr. and Mrs. Holbach on the floor.

When an ambulance from St. Mary's Hospital arrived the surgeon found Holbach still alive, but he died eight hours later in the hospital. He made an antemortem statement, in which he furnished the police with a good description of the murderers. Late last night no arrest had been made, although the police had finger prints on all the men, taken from glasses from which they had been drinking.

Intimating that no more serious charge than homicide would be made against Patrick O'Donnell until his story of the murder of Miss Riddell had received more corroboration, the police last night admitted that today probably would prove the truth or falsity of the confession. When Miss Riddell was killed she carried in her purse two $10 notes, received as wages from the Globe Indemnity Company. Detectives yesterday asked the company to get from its bank the serial numbers of all the money used in last week's payroll, all of the notes having been new ones. If the numbers of any of the notes found in O'Donnell's possession correspond with the notes the girl carried, a strong link will have been forged to connect O'Donnell with the crime. In this connection, it was also said that Miss Riddell had an original way of folding her paper money, and, according to the police, both of the notes taken from O'Donnell had been folded in an unusual manner.

While more than 100 detectives, directed by First Deputy Commissioner John A. Leach, sought yesterday to trace down various points in his story, O'Donnell remained in the Queens County Jail, still too nervous to appear in court. His wild ravings even made it undesirable to take him before Judge Humphreys in Long Island City for commitment to the Kings County Hospital for observation as to his sanity.

District Attorney O'Leary said last night, however, that if O'Donnell's condition permitted he would be brought into court this morning.

"O'Donnell continues to accuse himself of the crime," said Assistant District Attorney Edgar F. Hazleton last night, "and he has expressed the hope that his victim and her relatives will forgive him. It is a strange thing that no member of his family, neither his wife nor his father, has visited him since his arrest or come to make a statement to the Queens officials on his behalf. While there are inconsistencies in his confession, his statements regarding some details were so exact that no one not closely connected with the crime could have known them. They were not printed in the newspapers. If he is not telling the truth, we are determined to protect him from himself. We hope we have captured the murderer, for otherwise a fiend is still at large."

Nicholas O'Donnell, father of the prisoner, at his home in 1,015½ De Kalb Avenue, Brooklyn, censured the police for placing any credence in his son's statements, and suggested that he be taken to Kings County Hospital, where the doctors could determine his mental state.

"I intend to visit my son tomorrow at the Queens County Jail," said Mr. O'Donnell, "and thus far I haven't received any letters from him nor have I heard from him in any way since his arrest. The best thing the police can do with my boy is to turn him over to the doctors, for I am sure they will find that he is suffering from a mental disease. It is apparent that he has not yet realized the seriousness of his predicament."

O'Donnell collapsed in his cell last night and a hasty call was sent for Dr. Edward V. McGoldrick, the jail physician. He attended the prisoner, but the police refused to discuss a report that O'Donnell had tried to harm himself. It was intimated that he had suffered one of the epileptic fits to which he is subject.

GARMENT WORKERS ORDERED TO STRIKE

Union Calls Upon 35,000 Members to Quit Their Employment at 10 o'Clock This Morning.

APPEAL FOR GOOD ORDER

A strike involving 35,000 garment workers, members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, will begin at 10 o'clock this morning, when members of the union's shop committees will post the strike notices. According to union officials, 12,000 or more workers have been locked out within a few days in anticipation of the strike against the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association, an organization whose 260 members, it was said, represented an annual business of about $100,000,000.

About 90 per cent. of the strikers are women, but the strike order issued yesterday includes many men and calls out cutters, operators, sample makers, drapers, examiners, tuckers, hemstitchers, lace runners, finishers, cleaners, pressers, buttonhole makers, and button sewers. The order read in part:

Sisters and Brothers: You are hereby requested to leave your employment as orderly and quietly as possible. Do not make any disturbance. Pack up your tools and everything that belongs to you promptly at 10 A. M. and leave your shop and join the ranks of the strikers. Avoid arguments and enter into no discussion with your employer or any of his representatives. If the employers refuse to permit you to use the elevators, walk down the stairs. Let the workers of each shop, headed by its shop Chairman, march in an orderly manner to the meeting hall to which you were directed. All workers of open shops are requested to go to the meeting hall as directed. Do not wait for any committee to take you down. Let this circular be your committee.

In a formal statement Benjamin Schlesinger, President of the union, said:

We have done all within our power to avert this strike. When we presented our demands to the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association for a forty-four hour week and for an increase in wages, we announced that we were ready to submit all questions in dispute to arbitration. The manufacturers declined to accept our offer for arbitration and began to discharge workers wholesale. During the last four days alone, from ten to twelve thousand workers have been locked out from their shops; and this action has made the strike unavoidable.

I request all strikers to preserve the best order possible at their meeting halls and on the picket lines.

Morris Weiss, President of the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association, said yesterday afternoon that the organization had not sought strife in the industry and had made every effort to avert a strike. A letter had been written to Mayor Hylan, he said, setting forth the views of the manufacturers concerning the strike. There had been sporadic stoppages of work in several shops in the last few days, but these had been due to the unsettled state of the workers regarding the strike, Mr. Weiss added.

The strike will affect 35,000 workers directly and between 50,000 and 60,000 indirectly, said Mr. Schlesinger, supplementing his formal statement. The chief point at issue, he said, was whether the employer should be allowed to discharge his workers with no provision to safeguard the union worker. The union had never denied the right of the employer to discharge a worker for improper behavior or for incompetency, he said.

In their open letter to the union the manufacturers contended for the right to discharge employes subject to review in case the discharge is made for union activity. They also demanded the right to offer inducements to especially skilled and rapid workers.

The union demands (1) a 44-hour week to make employment more regular and continuous; (2) an increase of 15 per cent. in wages to meet the cost of living; (3) permission to a representative of the union to visit each shop once a month to discover whether protocol standards are observed.

OUR RED CROSS TO AID RUSSIAN PRISONERS

Will Take Food and Clothing to 1,500,000 in German Prison Camps.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—The American Red Cross will begin immediately the work of providing relief for Russian prisoners in Germany, who are said to number 1,500,000. Large sums of money have been contributed for this purpose by Russian societies and individuals in France and Scandinavian countries.

Captain W. B. Webster, of the American Red Cross, is now in London supervising the loading of the steamer Nero with shoes, blankets, and clothing. The vessel will start for Copenhagen in a few days. Negotiations have been completed with Herbert C. Hoover, Director General of Relief, who will supply food up to the limit of the money subscribed for the relief of Russian prisoners through Rotterdam and Copenhagen.

This relief work possibly is the result of a clause in the new armistice conditions, and will be under the general supervision of Brig. Gen. Harries of the American Army, who is in Berlin in connection with the repatriation of American prisoners.

The Russian military prisoners in Germany aggregate 1,200,000, while the civiliane number 300,000. Most of them are in labor camps, there being 200,000 at Danzig alone. There are 14,000 officers. Sanitary conditions among the Russians are said to be very bad because of the lack of soap, disinfectants, and medicines.

It is reported that 100,000 Russian prisoners are in hospitals, and that 50,000 more are invalids, chiefly from cosumption, because of the lack of proper food. The Red Cross will supply fats and other foods to supplement the diet furnished the prisoners by Germany.

Most of the prisoners have not received any clothing except paper underwear and wooden shoes, and the Red Cross will try to supply at once the urgent need of warm clothing and nourishing food. Distribution of the food and clothing will be supervised carefully to insure that it reaches the prisoners.

ASSAIL COPELAND AT PROTEST MEETING

Labor and Civic Organizations Deplore Proposed Changes in Hygiene Division.

GOLDSTEIN FAVORS INQUIRY

Committees Named to See Commissioner and to Confer with Academy of Medicine.

Unless Health Commissioner R. S. Copeland should give up his plan for withdrawing the Division of Industrial Hygiene from the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, Mayor Hylan would be asked to request that Dr. Copeland resign, said Rose Schneiderman, President of the Women's Trade Union League yesterday at a conference of representatives of more than sixty social welfare, labor, and civic organizations at the Murray Hill Hotel.

"If the head of the Health Department cannot realize what the desires of the citizens are, then we will demand that he get out and we will ask the Mayor to demand his resignation," she said. Miss Schneiderman protested against what she termed Dr. Copeland's "polite way of doing away with the work of industrial hygiene." Other speakers were Florence Kelley, representing the National Consumers' League and the New York State Child Labor Committee; Dr. Lee K. Frankel; J. Coughlin, of the Central Labor Union; Dr. Leonard Wallstein, of the Citizens' Union, Edward J. Rybicki, delegate of Typographical Union, No. 6, to the Central Federated Union; Fred Gaa of the Painters' Union, Dr. Sidney Goldstein of the Free Synagogue, Rabbi M. L. Kaplan of the Jewish Centre, and Evans Clark, Secretary to the Socialist Aldermanic relegation. The Chairman was Judge Charles M. Hough of the Federal District Court.

All but one of the speakers protested against Dr. Copeland's proposed change in the work of industrial hygiene. Dr. Goldstein favored sending a committee to Albany to ask that the State Legislature inaugurate a sweeping investigation into the affairs of the Health Department. A committee, consisting of Dr. Ira S. Wile, Dr. George M. Price of the Joint Board of Sanitary Control, Dr. G. Alsop of Barnard College, J. J. Bagley of Franklin Union No. 23, Rose Schneiderman, and Mrs. Frances Carter Wod of the Woman's Municipal League, was appointed to call on Commissioner Copeland and request that he desist in making his proposed changes in the work on industrial hygiene. Another committee was appointed to confer with the Committee on Public Health of the Academy of Medicine, which is discussing the situation.

Copeland Sends Regrets.

Commissioner Copeland, who had been invited to speak at the conference, sent a reply in which he regretted that official business would prevent him from accepting the invitation. He said he thought it right that the people had determined to get at the truth in the matter, and added: "Of course, the information you have is distorted." Whenever he presented the plan to any "disinterested person," he said, "there has been entire agreement that the plan I have in mind is a wise one." He said he would be glad to see any committee the meeting might decide to send to his office. Director Louis I. Harris, of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, who had also been asked to speak, wrote that circumstances compelled him, very much to his regret, to decline the invitation.

ESTIMATE ERIE BASIN CLAIM.

Goodrich Fixes Value of Area at from $200,000 to $900,000.

The hearing on the First Construction Company's application for an equitable award for property appropriated by the State in the Erie Basin was resumed yesterday. Ernest P. Goodrich, who was on the stand when court adjourned last Thursday, was the witness in the morning.

This franchise right Mr. Charles E. Hughes, counsel for the company, contended was a right over the acquired territory based on the improvement. The filling in, which was the condition subsequent, having filled in and complied with this condition, then the fee title would pass under the act of the Legislature. The question to be determined, he said, was the value of the franchise, and the cost of filling in—deduct this and a fair valuation on the property could be reached under the terms of the order of the Court of Appeals.

In the afternoon in reply to hypothetical questions by Mr. Mone, Mr. Goodrich fixed the value of the claimant's rights to the appropriated area at sums varying from $200,000 to $900,000, according to the conditions contained in the questions. There was a long argument over the question of forfeiture of the franchise or its abandonment.

TELLS OF KILLING LEBAUDY.

Widow Says She Shot Him to Protect Her Daughter.

MINEOLA, L. I., Jan. 20.—In her first direct statement since she was lodged in the Nassau County Jail, following her shooting of Jacques Lebaudy, Mrs. Marie Augustine Lebaudy today declared that she had killed her husband to protect her daughter, Jacqueline. In conversation with the matron of the jail, Mrs. Lebaudy also cleared up another point, namely her marriage, by saying that she had wed Lebaudy in France nineteen years ago, having known his family for some time previous.

Following a talk with Mrs. Lebaudy, Harry W. Moore, her counsel, said the collection of valuable jewelry which was in her possession at one time, had not been seen by her for more than a year, and that so far as she could learn it had been distributed among New York women friends of the eccentric "Emperor of Sahara." Mr. Moore said that since his client had been in jail she had received many letters of sympathy from women in Manhattan and that one of the writers had stated she had received a piece of jewelry from Lebaudy, under the impression that he was unmarried.

"About a year ago," Mrs. Lebaudy is reported to have said to Mr. Moore, "Mr. Lebaudy complained that there was too much jewelry about the house, and suggested that I let him put it in a safety deposit vault in Hempstead. I consented and later he informed me he had decided to take the jewelry to New York. After that he refused to tell me what had become of it."

Holding that newspaper reports are not sufficient evidence, Supreme Court Justice Manning in Brooklyn today refused the application of Solomon Desola for an order to question the officers of the First National Bank of Hempstead as to the amount of jewelry Mrs. Lebaudy has in the bank's vaults. Desola recently obtained a judgment for $310 against her.

Sell Collegiate Church Property.

The Collegiate Reformed Church got permission yesterday from Supreme Court Justice Hendrick to sell the property at Avenue B and Fifth Stret, which is 71 feet wide and 100 feet long, for $71,000. The property has long been occupied by the Evangelical Reformed Church founded in 1628, but nearly all the members have gone to Brooklyn or to the Bronx, and the church structure is to be torn down to make way for a business building.

AGITATOR GOT $2 HUSBAND.

BERNE, Jan. 20.—How Rosa Luxemburg, the dead Spartacide leader of Berlin, managed to gain German citizenship is related by the Tagebiatt of Berne.

Rosa, who had been expelled from Russia for activities among the Jews there, was living in Zurich when she decided to go to Germany to propagate Socialistic ideas. She was warned that she would be expelled, so she sought a lawyer in Zurich and demanded to know whether it was possible to contract a mock marriage with a German citizen in order to become a German herself and hence immune from expulsion.

The lawyer said that there would be some difficulties in obtaining a man to go through such a ceremony. Rosa soon produced a German known as Dr. Lilbeck and he married her on payment of 10 francs.

Rosa immediately left her husband and went to Germany. Lilbeck was expelled later from Switzerland as an undesirable foreigner.

TO HONOR AMHERST'S BRAVE

Dinner to Welcome Its Men in War on Feb. 21.

The Amherst Association of New York is arranging for a welcome to the alumni and undergraduates of the college who have served in the war. It will take the form of a dinner in the Hotel Pennsylvania on Feb. 21, to which all the 1,000 or more Amherst men who have been or still are in the service will be invited as guests of the New York Association.

It is proposed to make this the biggest reunion of Amherst men ever held outside of Amherst. The Alumni Council of the college is to meet in New York on the same day as the dinner, thus insuring the attendance of a large number of the alumni from all sections of the country.

Your Change of Business Quarters

A study of your present organization to meet its needs in the new offices.

A systematization plan to save overhead expense, waste space and motion.

An architectural plan and decoration scheme.

A plan for electrical installation.

Negotiations with contractors. The purchase of material and equipment.

The superintendence of construction work.

To our best knowledge there is only one organization where specialists in all of these steps work together as a unit, under a single overhead expense and charging but a single fee. This unique organization is described in our booklet—"Who Would You Consult?"

Write for this booklet by all means, if you plan a change in business quarters.

No big repair bills due to corrosion

PYRO Non-Freezing mixture is absolutely safe for your car. It has the lowest freezing point of all mixtures and is as good for your radiator as oil for your engine.

Warning!—The U. S. Bureau of Standards warns motorists thus: "Calcium Chloride compounds should be used with caution if at all, on account of their corrosive action."

On the other hand, the Bureau approves the type of non-freezing mixture of which PYRO is the leader, and the Government uses it in its motor cars, motor trucks and aeroplanes.

Get PYRO from your garageman—let him put it in. No fussing, no "mussiness"—safe, efficient, reliable.

NEW YORK TO ASK COURTS TO ANNUL NEW PHONE RATES

Service Board Orders Attorney to Join Other States in Fight on Burleson's Order.

JERSEY AND MICHIGAN SUE

Governor of Massachusetts Declares That State's Rights Should Be Protected.

PLEA FOR PRIVATE CONTROL

National Association of State Commissions Opposed to Present Management.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 21.—At its session here today the Public Service Commission of the Second District directed its counsel to begin an action, either by mandamus or injunction, to restrain the New York Telephone Company from putting into operation its new tariff of rates under the order of the Postmaster General. The telephone company, it is stated, is now charging substantially increased rates for services.

The new tariff has not been filed with the commission, and it is the opinion of that body that the telephone company is violating Section 92 of the Public Service Commission law. Attorney Ledyard P. Hale will at once proceed against the telephone company under the commission's authority.

"The commission delayed taking action," said Chairman Hill today, "because it was thought that its position would be stronger by waiting until the Postmaster General had put the order into effect. The new rates were promulgated by the Postmaster General with the statement that they brought about a decrease in charges, but analysis by the commission gives the same results as those made by the commissions in Illinois, Ohio, Nebraska, New Jersey, Indiana, Missouri, and other States; that is, that the increase in rates varies from 20 to 100 per cent.

"The general effect of the order of the Postmaster General is to increase charges for certain telephone service covering the bulk of traffic and making charges for certain services which were heretofore free."

Stands for State's Rights.

BOSTON, Jan. 21.—The action of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company in putting into effect today the new telephone toll rates determined by the Postmaster General was called to the attention of Attorney General Attwill by the Public Service Commission, with a request that proceedings looking to a suspension of the rates be instituted in the State Supreme Court. The commission alleged that the company had violated the laws of the State in ignoring an order of the commission.

"I see no reason," said Governor Coolidge, "why any of the States should surrender any of their rate-making powers to the Federal Government. In times of war emergencies may arise making it advisable not to stand upon the Constitution, but at the present time I feel that the State's interests should be fully protected. I feel strongly that the Public Service Commission, as in the past, should continue to make rates for Massachusetts patrons."

Michigan Asks an Injunction.

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 21.—First steps to test the right of Postmaster General Burleson to fix long-distance telephone rates in Michigan were taken today by Attorney General Groesbeck in petitions in the Circuit Court for an injunction. Separate petitions were filed for each of the companies involved. They ask in addition to the restraining writ, an order requiring the companies to continue the present rates "until they are legally modified."

Order Obtained in Jersey.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 21.—Postmaster General Albert S. Burleson, the New York Telephone Company, the Delaware and Atlantic Telephone and Telegraph Company, and the American Telephone and Telegraph Company were ordered tonight, through an order issued by Judge John Bellstab, in the United States court, to appear and show cause at 10:30 o'clock on Monday morning next, in the Federal court here, why an injunction should not issue to restrain the Postmaster General and the telephone companies from continuing in force the order of the Postmaster General increasing telephone rates in New Jersey. These new rates, effective today, should first be approved by the Public Utility Commission, it is alleged.

Judge Bellstab, however, refused to issue a restraining order which would prohibit the immediate continuance of the new rates until the court had had an opportunity to pass upon the application for an injunction.

The petition was presented by Alfred N. Barber, Secretary of the State Utility Commission, through L. Edward Herrmann, counsel for the commission. Mr. Barber contends that the board is empowered by the State laws to have supervision, regulation, and control over all public utilities in the State. He also asserts the board has power to fix "just and reasonable" rates and may require every public utility concern in the State to file with it complete schedules and classification of rates.

The petition sets forth that the Utility Board issued an order yesterday directing the suspension of the new rates in

TREASON CHARGE AT WIRE INQUIRY

AID FOR SMALL SYSTEMS

Mackay Manager Insists Control Is in Interest of Crippled Companies and Western Union.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Because Edward Reynolds, Vice President and General Manager of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company, would not comply with orders issued by Postmaster General Burleson, Chairman Moon of the House Post Office Committee this afternoon charged Mr. Reynolds with "treason" at the committee hearing on the bill Judge Moon has written to extend the period of Federal control over the telegraph and telephone system. Trembling with indignation Mr. Reynolds resented the accusation, while members of the committee protested against Judge Moon's treatment of the witness.

The hearing was marked with bitterness all day. Witnesses representing the Minnesota State Railroad and Warehouse Commission, whom Representative Steenerson of that State presented, were accused by Judge Moon of being actuated by the desire to retain their places, which, he said, would be eliminated by Government regulation. There was distinct line-up in the committee, headed by Judge Moon on one side, and Representatives Steenerson and Madden of Illinois, both Republicans, on the other. Solicitor William H. Lamar of the Post Office Department sat beside Judge Moon and coached the Chairman with questions during the session.

It developed during the testimony that Mr. Reynolds had been dismissed on Dec. 1 because he indorsed a letter written by one of his subordinates urging delay and obstruction to the Federal plan of control.

"You were dismissed, were you?" asked Judge Moon.

"I certainly was," replied Mr. Reynolds.

"Because you were treasonable?"

"I take exception to that," exclaimed Mr. Reynolds, while members at the other end of the table shouted "No, No!" One of them, Mr. Madden, interjected:

"That should certainly be stricken from the record."

"You were disloyal to Mr. Burleson," continued Judge Moon.

"My daughter and son are in France and I won't permit you or any one else to impugn my loyalty," responded Mr. Reynolds.

"I think we should proceed with the hearing as if the witness was a human being," said Mr. Madden. "There's no reason that the power of Government should be used to bulldoze the witness."

Produces Reynolds's Letter.

Judge Moon explained that Mr. Reynolds, in his opinion, had been disloyal to the Postmaster General. The letter in question was of few lines and indorsing one in which a district superintendent said that, "as the war was over" the Postmaster General's plans should be rearded, and added," Thank God for a Republican House and presumably a Republican Senate." Mr. Reynolds said:

"I sent the letter out to some eight officials. It came into the hands of Mr. Burleson, and he dismissed me."

Mr. Reynolds testified he had started with the Postal Company thirty years ago as a messenger and read a prepared statement, in the course of which he said:

"Mr. Burleson's Operating Committee, consisting of a Western Union man, two Bell Telephone men and one Independent Telephone man, has within the last few days tried to get the Postal Company to agree to increased telegraph rates and the Postal Company has refused.

"I am reliably informed that most of the independent telephone companies were making money at the time the Government took them over, and I am also informed that they wish their properties returned at once, notwithstanding the statements made to this committee to the contrary.

"Public sentiment is opposed to retaining the wires, and no one is willing to admit he wishes the Government to keep the telephone lines in order to bring about Government ownership, except Mr. Burleson, himself, because that purpose is a perversion of the purpose for which Congress authorized the seizure of the lines.

"The whole situation looks to me like a scheme for the raising of telephone rates and the financing of crippled tele-

LIBERAL GROUPS GAIN IN RETURNS OF GERMAN VOTE

Predicted in Berlin That a Socialist-Democratic Alliance Will Control Convention.

EBERT PARTY FACES FIGHT

May Be in a Minority if the Opposition Combines, Copenhagen Estimates.

RHINELAND FOR CENTRISTS

Weimar Reported to Have Been Selected as Meeting Place of National Assembly.

BERLIN, Jan. 20, (Associated Press.)—Full election returns from all sections of Germany are coming into Berlin slowly because of the work in apportioning the vote among the six leading parties.

Based on incomplete returns available at 8 o'clock tonight, the Majority Socialists had from 43 to 45 per cent. of the total vote. With the Independent Socialists and the German Democrats, the Majority Socialists will constitute the Left of the National Assembly, with 65 per cent. of the seats.

The Democratic Party has made an excellent showing, and may outstrip the Centrists (Christian People's Party) in the final count.

The Independent Socialists made a strong eleventh-hour rally in Berlin, and probably will get four out of the fourteen seats from Greater Berlin. The Majority Socialists will get five seats from Greater Berlin, the Democrats two, and the three parties of the Right one each.

Socialists Outvoted in Wurttemberg.

The combined bourgeois parties in the Kingdom of Württemberg and the Province of Hohensollern, Prussia, elected ten delegates to the National Assembly. The Majority Socialists seated seven and the Independent Socialists none. The combined popular vote of the Socialists was 506,000, and of the bourgeois parties 920,000.

In Mecklenburg and Lübeck the combined bourgeois parties elected three delegates and the Socialists three.

In Hanover and Bremen the Socialists had a large majority over the Independents.

The Independent Socialists in Leipsic polled 195,000 votes against 95,000 for the Majority Socialists.

At Frankfort-on-the-Oder the Majority Socialists elected four delegates, the German Democrats two, the National People's Party two, while the Independent Socialists, the German People's Party, and the Centrists failed to get a seat.

In the Magdeburg-Anhalt district the German Democrats got three delegates, the Majority Socialists seven, the National People's Party one, and the Independent Socialists, German People's Party, and Centrists none.

May Get Final Count Today.

The official final count of the national vote probably will not be available before Wednesday. Numerous votes in Berlin are being contested by the Independent Socialists, who charge the Majority Socialists with having used an illegal caption on their party ballot.

It is probable that former Chief of

Denial That Root or Taft Will Be Wilson's Alternate

PARIS, Jan. 21.—Statements from New York printed in the Paris afternoon newspapers that Elihu Root or William Howard Taft will succeed President Wilson on the American delegation when the President returns to America are said by those close to the President to be unfounded, although no authoritative statement has been issued.

These reports are entirely contrary to the President's announced intentions when he left America. He had arranged then that Secretary Baker should come to France to take his place in the plenipotentiary panel, and there is every reason to believe that there has been no change in his plans. The system for the rotation of plenipotentiaries was adopted, it is understood, partly to fit Mr. Baker's case.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Viscount Asseca, Lord-in-Waiting to former King Manuel of Portugal, received The Daily Chronicle representative tonight at the hotel in London where the ex-King is staying. When the latest message from Vigo was shown to the Viscount he made the following statement:

"At the beginning of the war King Manuel made it distinctly understood that there was to be no movement in his favor in Portugal and that his country was to devote the whole of its energies to prosecution of the war. The assassination of the President in December altered the situation and seemed to threaten the country with chaos.

"In the circumstances a new situation was opened up, the possibility of which before was out of the question. The King's position was this, that he placed himself entirely at the disposal of Portugal. If his country wished him to return he would at once do so without any reference to difficulties or dangers that the course would involve.

"He has been treated with infinite kindness in this country, where he has greatly enjoyed his stay, but he has lived with no other idea than to return to his throne."

MADRID, Jan. 21.—The monarchist movement in Portugal, headed by Paiva Conceiro, has been successful in Northern Portugal, and a Government has been formed at Oporto, according to a report received by the Spanish Government yesterday from the Governor of the Province of Ponte Vedra, in Northwestern Spain, who added that Lisbon was believed to have joined the movement.

The monarchical Government, it was said, was constituted with Paiva Conceiro as President of the Council and Food Minister; M. Saleri, Minister of Home Affairs; Viscount Barro, Minister of Justice and Instruction; Magalhaes Lima, Minister of Foreign Affairs; Silva Ramos, Minister of Communication and Public Works; Count Asevedo, Minister of Labor, and Tamagnini Barbosa, Minister of War.

IRISH ASSEMBLY PROCLAIMS THE IRISH REPUBLIC

Declaration of Independence Read to First Sinn Fein Assembly in Dublin.

MEETING AT MANSION HOUSE

Evacuation of Ireland by the Garrison of British Troops Is Demanded.

APPEAL TO FREE NATIONS

DUBLIN, Jan. 21, (Associated Press).—Twenty-five members of the Sinn Fein Society elected to the British House of Commons assembled here this afternoon and formally constituted themselves the "Dail Eireann," which is Irish Gaelic for "Irish Parliament."

They elected Charles Burgess, whose Irish name is Cathal Brugha, Speaker. They also adopted a declaration of independence and an address to the free nations of the world and appointed a committee consisting of Count Plunkett, Arthur Griffiths and Professor Edward De Valeera to present the claims of Ireland to self-determination to the Peace Conference at Paris.

The two last named being in British prisons, only the venerable Count Plunkett can proceed to Paris, and then only provided the British Government consents to give him passports.

Proceedings Were Dull.

The walls of the hall were quaintly embellished with classic statues in plaster and coats of arms. Past Lord Mayors have witnessed many more exciting dramas, notably in recent years the conventions of the Nationalist Party, when there were impassioned speeches and hot party contests. That today's proceedings seemed tame by contrast was due to the fact that they were conducted in the dead language of the Irish tongue. This was a tribute to sentiment, but it was deadening to interest. Few of the 2,000 auditors understood the addresses.

Oratory was killed by the process of reading all the speeches, and even some of the delegates had trouble in following them on their manuscripts. The only concession to popular interest was the translation of the declaration of independence and the address to the free nations in English and French, and this was a wearisome process.

It should not be inferred there was any lack of emotion or want of feeling or responsibility on the part of the delegates. They evidently felt themselves men playing great parts in a solemn sacrament.

A crowd of perhaps a thousand, including many women and children, wearing green, white and yellow ribbons, pressed around the door of the Mansion House, watching the delegates enter. Only two policemen were visible, but the Sinn Fein had its own police—youths wearing white arm bands—to keep order.

Another crowd of different type was on hand—repatriated war prisoners of the Dublin Fusiliers. They had been entertained at luncheon in the Mansion House, and their friends and the public generally were waiting outside to cheer them.

This combination furnished the possibilities of a clash. But none occurred.

A Dingy Meeting Place.

The rotunda of the Mansion House, where the congress met, is a dingy old place, lighted by stained glass windows overhead. The platform and half the floor were fitted with tables for officers and delegates. The remainder of the floor and the circular gallery were reserved for the public, admission being by ticket.

A large proportion of the audience consisted of women. The number of young priests was conspicuous. One of the popular figures arriving first was Father O'Flanagan, who recently was dismissed from his parish by the Bishop on account of his political activity.

There was a brief demonstration when the delegates advanced down the centre aisle, the people standing on their seats and applauding them.

The youthfulness of the Sinn Fein leaders was their most noticeable characteristic. There were hardly a half dozen gray heads in the group. Count Plunkett, Member of Parliament and one of the leaders of the party, introduced in a few terse sentences Charles S. Burgess, a young man who acted as Chairman and who made a short speech which was much applauded. Most of the members of the party crossed themselves frequently during the prayer of the Rev. Father O'Flanagan.

The roll call was made in English. It included all the Members of Parliament elected from Ireland to the British Parliament. Naturally a majority of these men failed to respond, as they are in prison.

Mention of the name of Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Ulsterites, was the cause of much merriment during the session. The most striking feature of the program was the reading of the Declaration of Independence, first in Irish, with the delegates standing, and afterward in English and French, "Ireland's address to the free nations" was read. It began:

"The nation of Ireland, having her national independence, calls through her elected representatives, in Parliament as-

By Wireless to The New York Times.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The Daily Chronicle's diplomatic correspondent, discussing the Russian problem now before the Peace Conference, says that the telegrams exchanged between Great Britain and America alone on this portentous subject would fill a volume.

"The opinion obtains here," he says, "that if any intervention is sanctioned it will take the form of reinforcing the Polish Army, which would thus offer a wall to Bolshevism from the east to the west. Polish forces hitherto employed in the west would be strengthened by the addition of two American divisions."

The correspondent proceeds to point out that the weak point in this proposal is the uncertainty as to the disposition of the populace, and whether Bolshevism can be fought by such means. Premier Paderewski's difficulties are considerable, and are as great in the economic as in the political field. The question is how Poland can exist without close economic relations with Russia, since she cannot hope to find a market for her manufactures in the German or Austrian States. The correspondent proceeds:

"The interdependence of Poland, Esthonia, and other constituent parts of the old empire inspire the belief in many quarters that the only real remedy for the present anarchy is federation. Such a solution will probably receive sympathetic consideration from the conference. It is obvious that Russia is too large a territory to be administered from one centre, and its interests also are too diverse. Federation, then, seems to be the most workable system."

DOMINIONS SEEK TO ENTER LEAGUE

British Colonies Want Admission, with Same Status as Other Nations.

EARNED IT, SAYS HUGHES

PARIS, Jan. 21, (Associated Press.)—Canada, Australia, and the other self-governing Dominions of Great Britain have begun an effort for individual representation in the projected League of Nations. They claim the right to enter the league with the same status as other nations.

The question is now being discussed by the British and Dominion officials, and it will be for the British Government to say whether it shall ask the Peace Conference to accord the Dominions individual membership in the League.

The admission by the Peace Conference of the right of the Dominions to a separate representation at the sessions is held to have been in itself tacit recognition of their nationhood. The new proposal, however, goes further, and it is considered that its acceptance would be a formal acknowledgment by the world of the Dominions existing autonomously within the British Empire and of their equality with other nations. Unofficially it is stated that England will probably approve the plan, although the matter is still the subject of grave discussion.

Premier Hughes of Australia, discussing the claims of the dominions with The Associated Press, said:

"We have earned the right by our sacrifices and efforts in this great war to a place in the family of nations. We expect to come in with the same status as any other nation. So far as I understand it, President Wilson's conception of the League of Nations is that all nations shall come in on a basis of equality, the nations to come in as entities and retain their sovereign rights as nations.

"That being so, of course, once the status of nationhood is established, the Dominions would come in as the other nations and would be accorded whatever right they have."

Sir Robert L. Borden, Premier of Canada, gave to The Associated Press tonight the following statement regarding the claims of the Dominions:

"In the Imperial War Council in 1917 I had the honor of moving in behalf of Canada a resolution which was accepted by the United Kingdom and the other dominions and which declared that the readjustment of the constitutional relations of the component parts of the British Empire should be based on the full recognition of the dominions as autonomous nations of the Imperial Commonwealth.

"The principle thus established has been illustrated and carried into effect by the Peace Conference, in which the several Dominions have distinctive representation as members of the world-wide Britannic commonwealth, which, in open sense, is itself a League of Nations.

"The resolution of 1917, to which I have alluded, declared in emphatic terms the right of each Dominion to an adequate voice in the foreign policy and foreign relations with which the proposed League of Nations is intimately and vitally concerned.

"It is neither necessary nord esirable to forecast the exact method by which this essential purpose shall be fulfilled in framing the constitution of the proposed league."

Canada, Australia, and New Zealand have for several years claimed for themselves absolute independence, so far as the conduct of internal affairs was concerned, but this principle has never been formally admitted by England. The Dominions, it is said, will now ask for formal recognition of it.

The announcement of the aspirations of the Dominions is being discussed with the keenest interest in official circles in Paris. The question is being frequently asked whether this present important step is to be followed later by insistence on the part of the Dominions of a right as nations to have a full share in dictating the foreign policy of the empire as far as it affects the Dominions.

"The British Empire is in one sense a national entity and in another a League of Nations in itself," was the way one high personage summarized the situation tonight.

The Italian Government has nominated Senator Scialoja, former Minister of Justice, as the Italian member of the international committee in Paris to study the question of the League of Nations. Leon Bourgeois and Lord Robert Cecil are the French and British members respectively.

LICHNOWSKY PLEA FOR A JUST PEACE

ANXIOUS ABOUT FRONTIERS

But Believes Germany's Rights Will Be Respected, "Especially in the East."

BERLIN, Jan. 21, (Associated Press.)—Prince Lichnowsky, former German Ambassador to Great Britain, today gave the following statement to The Associated Press:

"A peace of right and justice, provided it is not merely to be a phrase behind which a peace of violence conceals itself as a Pax Britannica, can only be such a peace as neither enslaves nor mutilates the conquered and which leaves him the possibility of recuperating, of paying his debts and of entering with complete confidence into the peaceful competition of a Society of Nations. A League of Nations which has its roots only in statutes and is not in the hearts of peoples is worthless.

"Just as the conquerors hundreds of years ago treated France forbearingly and left in its possession its old borders, including even German Alsace, which had earlier been taken away from us just as forcibly as we later took it back, so I believe there will be left to us, especially in the East, our borders which are indispensable for us politically and economically.

"Not only ethnography, but also geography, should be taken into consideration in establishing borders. The Poles and Czechs have no more right to our mixed-language territories, which owe their prosperity alone to German organization and to the German market, than we have to all the German territories outside the empire, including the German parts of Alsace-Lorraine.

"Hence a peace of justice would be only such a one as neither boycotts us nor lays upon us intolerable financial burdens which would make us dependents for all time, nor one which creates untenable borders and robs us of lands which we require geographically and economically.

"Mr. Wilson and the British statesmen have announced their war aims to be the abolishing of autocracy and militarism and making good the harm the war has done to Belgium and France. I expect confidently that they will now demonstrate the uprightness of their intentions and that they will not create the impression that a war psychosis now rules them, just as it ruled with us during the war."

STEVENS TO BE HEAD OF TRANS-SIBERIAN

Russian General Horvath to be Co-Director—Allies to Speed Up Work on Road.

VLADIVOSTOK, Jan. 20, (via Montreal.)—The agreement for Allied control of the Trans-Siberian Railway gives the Americans control of the line from Pogranichana to Omsk, a distance of 3,000 miles; the British will have charge of the line from Omsk to the fighting front; the French will control the Khabarovsk line, and the Japanese the line from Blagovieatchenak to Chita.

The administrative positions are to be filled by Russians and Americans in equal numbers. There are to be Russians only on the working staff. John F. Stevens, head of the American Railway Commission to Russia, is to be chief administrator of the railway, with the Russian General Horvath as co-director. Americans are to guard the line.

"Cars and engines are being supplied from the United States. Great workshops are being opened in Vladivostok, and every effort is to be made to speed up operations.

AGAINST DEAL WITH SOVIETS

Danish Diplomat Emphasizes the Futility of Treating With Them.

CALL WILSON REACTIONARY

OUR LEAGUE PLAN UP SOON

Wilson Expected to Present Memorial at Full Session Late This Week.

PARIS, Jan. 21, (Associated Press.)—The Supreme Council of the Great Powers hopes to formulate a concrete proposal on Russia at tomorrow's meeting. This was the definite official announcement of the communiqué issued tonight after the council had been considering the Russian situation continuously for two days.

It can be added that, while this concrete proposal was not finally decided upon and reduced to writing, its main features were agreed upon in principle. The members came from the session, however, feeling that there was no sovereign remedy insuring a certain cure for the difficult and dangerous situation, and that it would be desirable to embody several lines of action in the proposal.

The first effect of this decision will be that neither Serglus Sazonoff, the Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs before the revolution, nor any Soviet agents will be received in Paris as exponents of Russian affairs, but that some form of inquiry or investigation of political conditions in Russia will be made without considering the presence in Paris of the champions of either side of the dispute. This determination is largely the result of a strong sentiment in some quarters against having any direct dealings with the Bolshevikl.

Early indications were that Premier Lloyd George's proposal to M. Pichon, the French Foreign Minister, would again take form in having Soviet agents come here, and three names of prominent leaders were mentioned as possible emissaries. But this is now said to have been definitely superseded by a plan of inquiry or investigation without involving the presence of Soviet agents.

Dane's Testimony Against Soviets.

The Danish Minister to Russia, Harold Scavenius, who took charge of French interests on the departure of the Ambassador, made a statement before the executive session of the council today on conditions in Russia, which also had a strong influence in determining that Soviet representatives should not come to Paris. He was the last of the Ministers to leave Petrograd, and today he emphasized the futility of trying to conduct any intercourse with the Soviet leaders.

He read an article written by one of the Soviet chiefs declaring that Premier Lloyd George and President Wilson were too conservative and reactionary for the Soviets to deal with.

He also gave exact data on the Bolshevist forces, showing that they did not exceed 90,000 armed men, the remainder being without arms or ammunition, clothing or shoes. He said also that the Red Army was largely recruited from the famished peasants, who took this means to obtain food and the pay the Soviet seemed able to give them.

Polish Question Up Today.

The Polish question will come up at tomorrow's session as well as the matter of Russia. It is understood in this connection that President Wilson has received information concerning the spread of the Bolshevist movement in Poland, where the Russian Red Army is nearing Warsaw. It is expected that proposals will be renewed for the allied armies to help the Polish Army with war material, but this has not yet been decided.

The official communiqué tonight also announces that the question of procedure of the conference was again discussed. The nature of this discussion was in determining the appointment of two committees, the first to deal with reparation for the damages of the war, the second to deal with the subject of the League of Nations.

Another full session of the Peace Conference will probably be held next Friday or Saturday for the purpose of the presentation of a memorial on the League of Nations by President Wilson. The English and French memorials on the League will probably be presented at the same time, and the committee proposed today will then work out the details, while the full conference may enunciate some general expression of principle on the plan.

The council at 12:30 o'clock took a recess until 3 P. M. M. Scavenius finished his statement at noon and withdrew. The council, however, continued its consideration of the Russian question and planned to resume it at the afternoon session.

At the close of the morning session President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George had an earnest discussion of ten minutes' duration in an antechamber.

The Supreme Council's afternoon session lasted from 3 to 5 o'clock.

Text of the Official Statement.

The official statement regarding the council's proceedings says:

The President of the United States, the Prime Ministers and Foreign Ministers, assisted by the Japanese representatives, met today at the Quai d'Orsay from 10:30 A. M. to 12:45 P. M. in the morning, and in the afternoon from 3 to 5 P. M.

In the morning M. Scavenius, Danish Minister to Russia, gave all the information at his disposal on the various parties in Russia.

In the afternoon the discussion of this question was continued. Very great progress toward an agreement was made, and it is hoped to formulate a concrete proposal on this subject tomorrow. The question of the procedure of the conference was then discussed.

The next meeting will take place at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning.

M. Sazonoff, former Russian Foreign Minister, has been in conference with some members of the American delegation, urging the admission to the conference of delegates from the Omsk Government in Russia, which he represents here.

The attitude of the various powers toward Russia is summed up today by L'Information, which states that the situation stands as follows:

"France and Italy heretofore have been for intervention on condition that the Allies were unanimous for it. Great Britain, through Premier Lloyd George, has expressed a desire to see intervention limited to the coasts of the Caspian Sea, leaving to Russia the adjustment of her own affairs in the interior. President Wilson seems to agree with the latter conception, and to be still hoping to see the Bolsheviki, in the process of evolution, establish a régime less resembling an anarchical one. Japan has not yet agreed to consider the possibility of prolonging the action she has undertaken in Siberia."

FRENCH NOW UNWILLING TO INTERVENE IN RUSSIA

See Futility of Acting Alone, While the Italians Cannot Spare Troops.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—The proceedings before President Wilson and the Premiers and Foreign Ministers of England, France, Italy, and Japan at the Quai d'Orsay today and tomorrow may be likened very closely to an investigation by a Grand Jury. The first witness, so to speak, called today was M. Noulens, the recently returned French Ambassador to Russia. Tomorrow he will be followed by M. Scavenius, the Danish Minister to Russia.

To the testimony of these men the great powers will add all available information on every phase of the Russian situation, political, economic, military, and social. This is the first and one of the greatest tasks of the Peace Conference.

No one pretends yet to say what the finding of this Grand Jury will be, but it is admitted that one of three courses must be followed. These are:

First—To fight the Bolsheviki outright and directly by sending a powerful military force of American and allied troops into Russia.

Second—To fight the Bolsheviki indirectly and by proxy, that is, not by sending in troops, but by furnishing adequate supplies—guns, ammunition, food, and money—to the Russian Governments which are anti-Bolshevist, and aiding them in every possible way short of sending troops, but leaving the actual fighting to save Russia from her present plight to Russians themselves.

Third—To give up fighting the Bolsheviki altogether, and to try to arrive at a working arrangement with the Soviet Government whereby the Bolshevist leaders would pledge themselves to cease warfare and terrorism and to give the Allies an opportunity to relieve the present starvation conditions in Russia and assist in the reorganization of the transportation and industrial systems as a preliminary to restoring commercial and diplomatic relations with the rest of the world and putting the Russian people in a position to decide upon their form of government.

No Chance of Intervention.

There seems to be hardly one chance in a million that the first of these three possible courses will be adopted. The anti-intervention policy of America is well known. Furthermore, France herself, formerly the chief advocate of sending a big allied military force into Russia to exterminate the Bolsheviki, no longer feels that she is able to undertake such a task at the end of a long war and in the face of public clamor for speedy demobilization. France surely would not undertake the enterprise alone, and there is no trace of encouragement or co-operation from any other nation. Italy, who is keeping up full mobilization in case of the emergency of war with the Jugoslavs, would send no troops for a Winter campaign in Russia.

So practically there are really only two possible courses open: either to supply the anti-Bolshevist Russians with munitions to keep up the war on the Lenine forces, or to treat with the representatives of the Bolsheviki, as has already been proposed by Lloyd George. France is the only Government which has declared itself against this proposal from the British Premier, and the only other declared opposition to it is that from the committee of Russian statesmen and diplomats in Paris striving to be accepted by the Peace Conference as the only representatives of Russia with whom the other powers may safely deal.

It has been assumed by France that Italy would stand by her in this matter, and that America and Japan would consent to the Lloyd George plan. But the Orlando Government has given no sign to indicate its Russian policy for the immediate future, and Italy dares not go too far in antagonism to what may be America's attitude, for she is absolutely dependent on the continuance of loans from the United States.

Hope for Lloyd George's Plan.

So it is well within the range of possibility and even probability that the Lloyd George proposal which, when revealed to the world the other day by Pichon's vehement rejection of it, caused such a sensation in international politics, may after all be adopted by the Peace Conference, before which the Bolsheviki would thus have an opportunity to state their case and promise to cease their atrocities till the conference could finally pass on their case.

It should be remembered that the proposal which Lloyd George passed on to the Foreign Offices of other countries came originally from the Bolsheviki themselves in the shape of a request of Litvinoff, who assured Lloyd George that Bolshevist terrorism would cease if he and his associates could get a chance to appear before the Peace Conference.

The adoption of this last of the three possible courses would involve the cessation of the present hostilities against the Bolshevist Government which the Allies are now carrying on in Northern and Southern Russia and Siberia and the withdrawal of the comparatively small military forces now engaged in those campaigns, after satisfactory assurance had been obtained from the Bolsheviki that they also would cease all fighting.

This would not mean formal recognition by the powers of the Bolshevist Government. On the contrary, the Lloyd George plan would provide for the Peace Conference listening to representatives of the other Governments of Russia which are now struggling to maintain themselves against Bolshevism and eventually to unite themselves into one democratic Government of all Russia.

As I cabled you last week, the whole Lloyd George plan is strongly opposed by the Russian committee in Paris on the ground that the Bolsheviki, who represent the destruction of nations, should have no place in a conference based on the idea of democratic States, and that the representatives of the other Governments of Russia should not be received as representing separate States, for the purpose of all those States is to be united, and the truest representation of the real Russia which they are all striving for is in the personnel of this Paris committee consisting of Sazonoff, Lvoff, Bakhmeteff, Maklakoff, and Tchaikovsky. These men will be heard before the decision is reached.

Lenine's Power Seems Waning.

Paris sees vague, wavering signs of hope in the situation because of evidence of the breaking down of the Bolsheviki's strength. Deaths from starvation at the rate of a thousand daily are occurring in Petrograd alone, and the population of that city has been cut in half in the last fourteen months by removal, death, and massacre. Every form of enterprise by which men live has been completely paralyzed; and, because of all this, Lenine's power is diminishing rather than increasing.

Lenine apparently realizes this. It was with his approval, of course, that Litvinoff asked for parleys with the Allies, and he has already gone so far as to propose to the Soviet Congress a surrender to the Allies. Two hundred delegates voted on this proposal, and it was defeated by a majority of only twelve. On the other hand, Lenine still has good control of the Red Army, now estimated at 300,000, and the advocates in Paris of making working arrangements with the Bolsheviki say that is the only way, because every threat of military intervention from without simply increases Lenine's power.

REDS SPEND BILLIONS, CAN'T COLLECT TAXES

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 21.—The financial statement of the Russian Bolshevist Government for 1918, according to a Petrograd dispatch, shows that the expenditures for the year were 47,000,000,000 rubles, and that there would be a probable deficit of 43,000,000,000 owing to the inability of the Government to collect the property tax.

From July to December the Soviet Government spent 7,773,000,000 rubles on the Ministry of War, compared with 644,000,000 rubles in the preceding six months.

NEED 350,000 TONS OF FOOD.

Allied Investigator Finds 5,000,000 Poles Must Have Relief.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—Dr. Vernon Kellogg, of the international relief organization, who has just returned to Paris from making a food survey of Poland on behalf of the Supreme Food and Relief Council, says that there are between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 people there who must be supplied with 350,000 tons of food for the six months until the next harvest.

Food, he reports, is imperative to fortify the new Government and check disorders in Warsaw, Lemberg, Lodz, and other large cities. Danzig is the key to the Polish relief situation, and under the armistice it is open to the Allies, as well as the territory leading into Poland. Dr. Kellogg urges the immediate shipment of quantities of milk for the starving children in Lemberg, but says extensive relief is impossible until the Danzig avenue is thoroughly organized. A shipload of food bought in New York by Polish and Jewish committees is now on the way to Danzig. Other food will be rushed from Copenhagen and Rotterdam when money for it is available.

Dr. Kellogg says that shipments of raw materials also are necessary to afford employment.

REDS SEEK PEACE WITH UNITED STATES

SEND NOTE TO WASHINGTON

State Department Forwards It by Wireless to Paris to be Dealt with There.

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 20.—Maxim Litvinoff, former Bolshevist Ambassador in London, who is in Stockholm, forwarded on Saturday to the American State Department a note sent by Bolshevist Foreign Minister Tchitcherin, in which it was pointed out that the original reasons for allied intervention in Russia, as restated recently in the American Senate by Senator Hitchcock, do not exist any more. The note expresses willingness to come to an understanding with the American Government.

Foreign Minister Tchitcherin asked the American Government to fix a date and place for Soviet representatives to meet emissaries of the United States. Tchitcherin made the assertion that American officers and soldiers "do not any longer understand why they are in Russia."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—American representatives at the Peace Conference, it was said today at the State Department, have under consideration the note of Bolshevist Foreign Minister Tchitcherin, proposing that the United States fix a date and place for a conference between Soviet representatives and American emissaries to discuss withdrawal of American troops from Russia.

The note was forwarded promptly to Paris after its receipt at the State Department by wireless, so that it might be considered along with other aspects of the Russian situation.

ESTHONIANS RETAKE NARVA FROM REDS

Capture Many Prisoners and Guns —Trotzky Said to Have Escaped From City.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—A notable success has been won against the Bolsheviki by Esthonian troops operating to the northeast of Lake Peipus, according to an Esthonian official statement received by wireless at Stockholm today and transmitted here. They have taken the town of Narva, on the Reval-Petrograd Railway line, together with a large number of prisoners.

Finnish troops co-operated with the Esthonians, the statement says. A quantity of booty fell into the hands of the victorious forces, including guns, provisions, and armored trains. The prisoners included division and regimental staffs.

Leon Trotzky, the Bolshevist War Minister, it is stated, was present in Narva during the fighting and fled after the Bolshevist defeat.

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 21.—Swedish military missions which have returned here from Lithuania and Esthonia have reported favorably regarding the sending of a volunteer military expedition into Lithuania, where the Lithuanian forces are unable to stem the Bolshevist advance. The missions report against an expedition to Esthonia, owing to the lack of economic resources there.

The first Swedish detachment probably will start for Libau this week.

URGES SEIZURE OF LIVONIA.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Jan. 20.—M. Philippe Jenneret, the Swiss professor who has just returned from Russia, where he was a teacher at the college in Khasan for many years, has joined the Czechoslovak Corps in Russia. He has had personal experience in fighting the Bolsheviki.

"The organization of the Bolshevist Army," he says, "has been effected chiefly by Letts and Hungarians. In the early days of our campaign the Red Guards were merely bandits who pillaged villages and murdered defenseless peasants, but took to their heels when we attacked them. But quite suddenly there was a complete change, and we found ourselves opposed to well-disciplined regular troops.

"Lenine and Trotzky, realizing their danger, had incorporated thousands of Hungarian prisoners, whom they paid and fed well, in their army, and reorganized it with the help of Lett officers. The Letts and Hungarians today form the backbone of the Bolshevist forces. Lenine and Trotzky draw most of their strength from Livonia, which the Allies should occupy without delay if they wish to strike a mortal blow against Bolshevism in Russia.

"The cruelty and bestiality of the Letts, who hold nearly all the important posts under the Bolshevist Government, surpass belief. The horrors at Khasan, where 250 men, women, and children were walled up in a cellar and left to starve, were perpetrated by order of the Lett Commissary with the Bolshevist Army."

After his tragic experiences, it is natural that the Swiss professor's spirit is overshadowed by the menace which to him appears very real of a Bolshevist invasion of Europe.

"Take strong measures before it is too late," he earnestly advises. "Otherwise Europe will once more be plunged in a sea of blood. Here in the West no one seems to dream of danger. Victory and peace have filled everybody with joy and hope, but the last act of the great drama has not yet been played. Those who, like myself, have been face to face with Bolshevism, are terrified by what they see creeping nearer day by day."

PADEREWSKI NOT WOUNDED.

Warsaw Denies Stories of Disorders, Says Germans Circulate Them.

WARSAW, Jan. 20, (Associated Press.)—Polish troops in arresting more than 200 Bolshevist agitators fired a dozen shots today in the Jewish quarter of the city. The incident at once gave rise to a report that pogroms had occurred. The Jewish newspaper of Warsaw says, however, that only three persons were wounded. Another newspaper says that two of those wounded were Polish women and that the third was a Jewish cabman, who was shot accidentally.

Members of allied missions who are arriving here from Switzerland and France say that wild rumors about disorders in Poland have been in circulation in allied countries. One rumor had to do with the alleged wounding of Ignace Jan Paderewski.

Most of the reports of disorders can be dismissed as having a German origin. There are also innumerable stories circulated here regarding conditions in the outside world, and these are only contradicted when travelers arrive or when Paris or London newspapers reach Warsaw two or three weeks after the alleged incidents were said to have occurred.

A Vienna dispatch received in Copenhagen and transmitted to London on Jan. 12 said that M. Paderewski had been wounded slightly by an assassin at Warsaw. There never was any confirmation of this report from Warsaw direct.

POLES STILL HOLD OUT IN BESIEGED CITIES

WARSAW, Jan. 20, (Associated Press.)—The Polish population is heroically defending Lemberg from capture by the Ukrainians. Women and boys are taking part in the spirited fighting.

For the last month Lemberg has been surrounded by the Ukrainians, and the railway has been cut.

Przemysl is also being shelled by six German nine-inch guns, and airplanes are dropping shells upon the town daily, but the Ukrainians have not been successful in capturing it.

MOVES TO DECLARE HAMMERLING AN ALIEN

Citizenship of Head of Foreign Language Newspapers May Be Revoked by Court.

SCRANTON, Penn., Jan. 21.—By direction of the Department of Justice the United States District Attorney for this Federal district is preparing to present a petition to the United States District Court for the revocation of the naturalization papers of Louis N. Hammerling, President of the Association of Foreign Language Newspapers in the United States, with offices in the Woolworth Building, New York.

The evidence seems to be, so far as the investigation has proceeded, that when Hammerling applied for his second papers he swore that he was born in Hawaii. It is alleged that this statement was not true.

It was said at Mr. Hammerling's home, 104 East Fortieth Street, last night that he was out of town and it was not known when he would return.

PLAN REVOLTS IN FAR EAST.

LONDON, Jan. 21, (via Montreal.)—The Russian Bolshevist Government for a long time has been organizing an extensive propaganda for revolutions in China, India, and Persia and is now ready, as soon as the opportunity offers, to send agents with large sums of money to stir up trouble throughout Asia, according to reliable advices received here.

A great obstacle facing the revolutionary plans of the Bolsheviki is the existence of the army of the Omsk Government, which at present effectively bars the road to Asia by way of the Ural front. If, however, it is pointed out, Admiral Kolchak's army becomes weakened and disintegrates through lack of support and encouragement, the Bolshevist plans would very seriously threaten the peace of Asia.

CONSIDERING PLANS TO RELAX BLOCKADE

PARIS, Jan. 21.—(Associated Press.)—Owing to pressure of more urgent problems before delegates to the Peace Congress, various economic delegations are studying, each for itself, the blockade and kindred problems. It is probable that they will start joint discussions this week.

American opinion contemplates a certain relaxation of the earlier "watertight" blockade, which would allow the entry of foodstuffs, lubricants and other materials into enemy countries. This, it is held, would permit the restoration of distributing systems, flour mills and other agencies involved in the preparation of food supplies. The blockade, however, would otherwise be as rigidly enforced as ever, because of its value as a weapon to force the enemy to accept the peace terms that will be presented.

The relaxation of the blockade as regards foodstuffs is already effective in a part of the former Hapsburg domains. Food is being sent into Vienna as well as to liberated regions, and will be supplied to Germany under the terms of the armistice extension agreement signed at Treves last Friday.

American experts are said to believe that babbitt metal for bearings, lubricants, repair parts for locomotives and flour mills and other articles fall in virtually the same category as foodstuffs, since it is obvious that enemy countries have no adequate facilities for milling flour and distributing food after it is imported.

Some American economic experts advocate for enemy countries, at least Austria-Hungary, and possibly Germany, a further relaxation of the blockade to permit the importation of limited quantities of raw materials. These imports, however, would not be enough to permit the Central Powers to resume international commercial competition while the allied countries were still laboring under the handicap of the devastation of their chief industrial regions, the spoliation of industrial plants, the transformation of the great bulk of their remaining factories into war plants, and the absence of industrial laborers who are still under arms.

The manufacture of textiles, for example, is urgently required to meet the needs of enemy populations, and the production of other materials is held to be absolutely indispensable. This would, it is said, facilitate relief measures and alleviate conditions of unemployment upon which Bolshevism thrives, particularly in Hungary.

TELLS OF BISMARCK'S AIM.

Memorandum Quotes Him as Saying He Expected to Crush France.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—Prince Bismarck contemplated a second war by Germany against the French which would result in the virtual destruction of France, according to a document published in the Petit Parisien today.

The document purports to be a note made by an ex-counsellor of the then King of Hanover, summing up a conversation with Bismarck, and is said to have been found recently among the papers of a French literary man.

"I am positive that if I live long enough I am destined to destroy France," Bismarck is quoted as having said, "for in another war I will take from her her colonies and her fleet, not to mention billions, and will dismember her a second time. For this purpose I am going to prepare the German people to become more powerful."

ARABS LOOK TO US FOR INDEPENDENCE

Prince Feisal of Hedjaz Says Eyes of the Whole East Are Turned Toward America.

PRESENTS CLAIMS AT PARIS

Proposes a State Comprising Hedjaz, Syria, Mesopotamia, Yemen, and Nejd.

PARIS, Jan. 21, (Associated Press.)—Prince Feisal, son of the King of Hedjaz, whom he represents at the Peace Conference, is pressing his claims for the recognition of the Arab State of Hedjaz.

"The Arabs have long enough suffered under foreign domination," he said to The Associated Press today. "The hour has at last struck when we are to come into our own again. We have, I believe, an even greater right to become free and independent than any of the new States to be formed through the war, since we are the oldest democracy in the world.

"The country is inhabited almost exclusively by a homogeneous set of Arabs, all descending from a common stock, while the foreign element is infinitesimal, certainly smaller than in any other country I know of. There are only about two thousand Turkish officials and no Turkish population in a land containing three and one-half million Arabs. Why then should not the Arabs rule the country where they live and have lived for countless generations? Why should we not be masters in our own house?"

The Prince then explained that the provinces they claimed as constituting the proposed State are Hedjaz, Syria, Upper and Lower Mesopotamia, Yemen and Nejd. He made it clear that he was here officially only as the representative of the Kingdom of Hedjaz.

"But," he added, "I am also the representative of the whole Arab army, which was recruited from each and all of these States, and I can truthfully say that the Arabs are unanimous in claiming their independence. If the Peace Conference should doubt this statement, or lend ear to the rumors that Syria prefers the French, or Palestine the British, let them send a commission to investigate. If they find that any portion of Arabia would prefer to be ruled by China, Japan, Chile or any other power, then I shall not have another word to say.

"As a small struggling nation we have already done much. King Hussein, my father, commonly called 'the Grand Old Man of the East,' declared war against Turkey when she was at the height of her military glory, and invited volunteers to his standard. Soon quite a considerable army collected, which, under my personal leadership, inflicted on the Turks a series of defeats, culminating in the taking of Medina last week.

"The Arab Army acted as the British right wing, and in the last offensive, in addition to taking 40,000 prisoners, by a rapid march cut the Turkish line of retreat, enabling the British to capture 70,000 more.

"The two usual objections made to our ambitions," continued the Prince, "are: 'Have your people reached a high enough standard of civilization to govern themselves?' and 'Will you have enough money to carry on your State?'

"To the first I unhesitatingly say 'Yes.' The world must not forget that it is Arabs who largely govern the country at this very moment, and all over the world Arabs have shown their worth as merchants and administrators. There must be some six or seven thousand Arabs fighting in the American Army, as there are about 250,000 Arabs in America.

"As for the second question, I also answer in the affirmative. Our country is a rich one. It contains large quantities of copper, iron, mineral oils, and a little coal, while, when properly irrigated, it is perhaps one of the most fertile in the world. That, I think, is enough to tempt capital, and we intend to welcome all foreigners who come with the intention of investing capital or teaching us something. The only stipulation we make is that there shall be no intrigue, no foreign control, but complete freedom for the Arabs.

"I address this appeal to the American people," said Prince Feisal in conclusion, "because I believe American public opinion to be the chief factor in deciding our fate. I also address them because I have complete faith in them. Even in the furthest corner of my own distant country the word has spread that America is the friend of all oppressed and the enemy of all oppressors, that to her all oppressed may come, sure of finding patient ears to listen and strong arms to uphold the weak if the claims are found to be just.

"At this moment the eyes of the whole East are turned toward America. It is up to her now to show that our faith is not misplaced."

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 21.—It is reported that there have been counter-revolutionary demonstrations led by officers at Budapest, and that there have been conflicts with the police in which bloodshed resulted.

situation, and that the republican leaders are united in defense of the present régime.

Other messages report Lisbon quiet, with strong police forces guarding the palace of the Civil Governor.

The commander at Coimbra has received orders to march upon Oporto, Braga, and Viscus.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—Circumstances of the outbreak of the monarchical revolution in Portugal are given in an agency dispatch from Lisbon filed at 11:45 A. M. on Monday. It says:

"The Minister of War, with a number of officers, took a special train to Oporto and arrived there yesterday. They were received at the station by officers of the garrison, who conducted them to headquarters. They were informed that a monarchy was about to be proclaimed in Oporto.

"The Minister and his suite were able to take a train for Lisbon. On their way they received confirmation of the proclamation of a monarchy in Oporto.

"The monarchist manifesto calls upon the population to fly the old blue and white royalist banner.

"The Cabinet has taken vigorous measures to maintain order. A state of siege has been proclaimed throughout the country. The warships Vasco da Gama and Guadiana have been called home, and two other war vessels have been sent to Oporto. At Coimbra two divisions of the reserves have been called to the colors.

"The Lisbon garrison remains loyal to the Government."

The message states that the troubles are not of a Bolshevist nature, but are merely due to interparty quarrels.

"From a conversation between Premier Barbosa and Ayres Ornellas, chief agent in Portugal of ex-King Manuel," adds the message, "it appears that the former King considers the present moment inopportune for an attempt to restore the monarchy."

DIFFICULT TO ADJUST ALLOTMENT TREATIES

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—A. P. Nicholson, the Paris correspondent of The Daily News, telegraphs:

"As the question of the secret treaties made during the war is referred to from time to time, it is of interest to state that I am hearing on trustworthy authority that the view taken by the Allies who signed such treaties is this:

"The treaties signed between the other powers and Russia are abrogated by the Russian revolution only so far as those parts relating to Russia are concerned, while the parts concerning the remaining signatories hold good as treaty obligations. At the same time the view is taken in British circles that so much has happened since America's entry into the war and later events—that it is profoundly desirable that the conference as a whole should regard such agreements as modified by these later events.

"America, which was not a party to such agreements, takes the strong line that this is so, and will make that view felt.

"The agreement between France and Russia of February, 1917, which provided for the Rhineland as an autonomous and neutral State, of course falls to the ground.

"The Treaty of London of 1915, signed by Great Britain, France, Russia, and Italy, is what the Italian claims are founded on. The Russian clauses drop out, but the clauses remaining prescribe a smaller territory to the Jugoslavs, though Fiume was allotted to them. To Italy went the Trentino, Istria, Southern Tyrol, Gorizia, Gradisca, the Dalmatian province, a number of the Adriatic islands, and the Dodecanese Islands.

"The agreement of the same Allies with Rumania in February, 1918, included the Rumanian claim to the Banat, which is now opposed by the Serbians.

"A memorandum on Turkey in the Spring of 1916, made by Great Britain, France, and Russia, holds good diplomatically between Great Britain and France except for the dropped Russian clauses. It was by this that France claimed the coastal strip of Syria and the vilayet of Adana, and Great Britain South Mesopotamia, with Bagdad and the Syrian ports of Haifa and Acre.

"The Persian and China agreements fall out, but I understand that there is an agreement of Japan with the Allies giving Japan possession of the Caroline and Marshall Islands, in the Pacific. This is strongly opposed by Australia.

"It will be seen from this outline what far-reaching modifications will be required in the interests of a common agreement."

DEPUTIES' WORK FOR PEACE.

Committee of the Chamber Planned to Co-operate with Clemenceau.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—Premier Clemenceau having appealed to the Chamber of Deputies to co-operate in the task of making peace, Maurice Damour, supported by 100 Deputies, has introduced a motion in the Chamber for the appointment of a committee on the subject to give its opinions on various matters and to prepare reports for submission to the Chamber.

By the adoption of this method M. Damour points out, the Parliament would be kept in close touch with the negotiations and would afford the negotiators needed moral support. The Chamber thus would also be able to study the preliminaries of the peace before they were submitted for ratification.

WOMEN CRY FOR JUSTICE.

French Petition Asks Peace Conference to Avenge Their Wrongs.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—Frenchwomen have addressed a petition to the members of the Peace Conference asking justice in the name of thousands of women, young girls, and children who, it is set forth, were systematically torn from their families and subjected to various forms of ill treatment at the hands of the Germans during the war. The petition adds:

"In order forever to prevent the recurrence of such atrocities we ask that those who executed them and those who ordered them be condemned as criminals of the common law."

WHOLE NAVY FORCE SOON TO BE SENT HOME

F. D. Roosevelt Says That Fewer Than 3,000 Men Will Remain Abroad After Feb. 15.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, after a conference with Admiral Sims on plans for the demobilization of the American navy in European waters said tonight that he was confident that with the exception of about 3,000 men the American navy would be out of Europe not later than February 15.

When the armistice was signed there were 70,000 American sailors in European waters. Today there are approximately 25,000. Several thousands are at aviation stations in France and Ireland, but are being sent home as rapidly as possible.

One of the present difficulties in the way of complete demobilization is the uncertainty at this time as to just how many German passenger ships will be allotted to carry American soldiers home and as to when the ship will be delivered. These ships will be manned and operated by the American navy and their advent into troop service will require the services of men at the ports from which they will sail.

The navy is having little difficulty in disposing of the vast amount of material and supplies in France, England and Ireland. The material in England and Ireland is being sold largely to the British Admiralty and the British Air Department. The little that the British government organizations are not taking is of small value and is being sold at auction. In France the navy is selling some material to the American army while the international relief organization also is getting some. The navy also has lent 250 men for relief work in Belgium.

Assistant Secretary Roosevelt is here with full authority to clear up demobilization details and will remain until Feb. 1. His presence obviates the delays which would be necessary should many questions have to be referred to Washington.

LONDON STRIKE GROWING.

Public Services Threatened with Tieup in Fight Over Hours.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—A strike which would close down all the engineering works and nearly every class of public service in London is threatened today. Already 15,000 workers are out, and as the men and the employers broke off negotiations for a settlement during the day it is expected that at least 250,000 men engaged in the engineering trade will cease to work before the end of the week.

The trouble arises out of the operation of the forty-seven-hour week, which has just been granted. When the new hours came into operation the employers decided that forty-seven hours meant forty-seven hours' work and withdrew certain privileges that had been previously allowed, such as ten minutes for refreshments in the morning, and a few minutes of the employers' time for men engaged in rough work to wash their hands.

Similar troubles are occurring in other parts of the United Kingdom.

DOUBTFUL OF PEACE LEAGUE

Representative Kahn Would Train Every Boy to be a Soldier.

At the dinner of the National Garment Retailers' Association, held last evening at the Waldorf, Representative Julius Kahn of California told of his plans for reconstruction and of his hope "that there would soon be written on the statute books of this country a law for the universal training of our young men." Other speakers were the Rev. H. Percy Silver, former chaplain of West Point, and Anson H. Ball of Best & Co.

"I am one of those who have not become convinced that the millennium has dawned," said Mr. Kahn. "I contend that war is not a thing of the past, much as we all would like to have it so. Man is a fighting animal. He cannot help it. He was born that way. It is his very nature.

"Many well-meaning and highly educated persons seem to think that you can prevent war with a scratch of the pen—by international agreements. I wish I could bring myself to that belief. They hope that, at the Peace Conference, the nations will agree to a plan of disarmament. These good intentioned dreamers seem to forget some of the lessons of history.

"That plan of disarmament was tried by the great Napoleon, who was undoubtedly the greatest military genius of modern times, against the very power that we have been fighting during the past eighteen months.

"It would be, in my opinion, the height of folly to neglect our own preparations for possible wars of the future, and the defense of our rights as a vigorous, independent, and progressive nation. For that reason I am strongly in favor of universal training for American youth. I consider such a policy the best form of insurance for peace."

IRISH PROCLAIM IRELAND A REPUBLIC

sembled, upon every free nation to support the Irish Republic by recognizing Ireland's national status and her right to vindication at the Peace Conference."

It declared that Ireland was radically distinct from England in race, language, customs, and traditions. Ireland, it said, was one of the most ancient nations of Europe. She had preserved her national integrity and vigor intact through seven centuries of foreign oppression and never had relinquished her national rights, which she had defiantly proclaimed every generation throughout the era of English usurpation, "down to her last glorious resort to arms in 1916."

It concluded with an announcement of the "complete independence of the Irish Republic against the arrogant pretensions of England, founded in fraud and sustained only by an overwhelming military occupation."

The meeting lasted only ninety minutes.

Probably no country except Ireland could present an episode as remarkable as the assembly of the "Irish Parliament." Perhaps no writer except an Irishman like George Bernard Shaw could do justice to the paradoxical nature of the proceedings.

Many Members in English Jails.

About half the Sinn Feiners elected to membership in the British Parliament participated, the other half being in various English prisons, charged with sedition, or merely held on suspicion under the spacious and elastic provisions of the Defense of the Realm act. The Sinn Feiners met under the shadow of Dublin Castle, where presides Field Marshal Viscount French, the first Viceroy in many years to give Ireland a purely military government. They met with his full knowledge and tacit consent to take measures which are purely seditious and in direct violation of explicit law.

This is one paradox. Another is that these Sinn Feiners, elected by about half of the voters in Ireland on a platform of independence from the British Empire, were chosen members of the British Parliament, but specifically refused to recognize that body and to call themselves members of the British Parliament. They occupy Mansion House by the permission of the Lord Mayor of Dublin, who himself is a Home Ruler, but not so much of a Separatist that he does not expect to accept what most of his predecessors have accepted—a knighthood from the British Government.

In the shabby Sinn Fein headquarters, situated in a decayed old house which was at one time one of Dublin's finest mansions, courteous young women secretaries gave cards of admission to today's meeting quite impartially to friend and foe; to supporters of the Sinn Fein and to correspondents of English newspapers which hold the Sinn Fein and all its works anathema. Cardinal Newman had his residence in this house during his unhappy incumbency of his high ecclesiastical post in Dublin, concerning which he was reported to have said afterward that his days in Dublin should be subtracted from his term in purgatory.

Today's program in "Independence Hall" differed in one respect from the solemnities of 1776 at Philadelphia. They were carried out in the Irish language, which is virtually a dead tongue, so dead that the Sinn Feiners have been obliged to rehearse their parts and were compelled to lapse occasionally into boycotted English terms because they could not find Irish words to fit modern parliamentary procedure.

Ireland is a country of the unexpected but no one predicts any trouble or disorder. The Government has revoked the order, made last July, requiring official authorization for public meetings and processions, which order had been suspended for some time. The revolutionary flag floats quite freely over the homes of Sinn Feiners in Dublin. Members of the party expect protection from the authorities of the nation whom they are defying. Once they would have looked to the United States for sympathy and help, but now they think they do not command American support.

They do not talk of, and apparently do not contemplate violence. Dublin had an unhappy and fruitless experience in the insurrection of 1916, an experience which cost rows of buildings on Sackville Street, once pointed to with pride as one of the finest avenues in Europe.

The Constitution of the new Irish Republic, declared yesterday by the Sinn Fein Assembly at Dublin, will be in accordance with the highest American ideals of personal and religious liberty, Diarmuid Lynch, Secretary of the Friends of Irish Freedom, and recently elected member of the British Parliament, predicted in New York last night.

"From my intimate knowledge of the men elected to the Dail Eireann," he added, "I am satisfied that they will secure the respect and co-operation of the Ulster minority and will bring honor and prosperity to their country in a measure unattainable while the British connection lasted."

Although the members of the "Dail Eireann" or "Irish Parliament" are conducting their business in Gaelic, they will undoubtedly make concessions to those who do not speak the Irish language, Mr. Lynch said.

GOMPERS HOLDS ALOOF FROM BERNE MEETING

But Goes to Paris to Continue Orga[illegible]n of World [illegible] Congress.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—An adjourned conference of leaders of British labor with Samuel Gompers and other American labor delegates now in England has reached an agreement to form a nucleus for an International Trades Union Congress. A committee of five will be appointed to represent British labor at the new Congress and to aid in organizing it. Mr. Gompers will confer with the British committee in the next few days to formulate plans for the Congress and to select an early date for the meeting in order that the Congress may meet simultaneously with the Peace Conference.

Mr. Gompers and the other American delegates will go to Paris tomorrow, where, Mr. Gompers said tonight, it is hoped to discuss the new movement with French labor leaders in advance of the next meeting with the British committee.

The British Trade Union Congress is committed to the idea of an international Socialist and Labor conference. This conference was first set for Lausanne, but recently was changed to Berne. Arthur Henderson is now at Berne as the representative of British Labor in making the arrangements for the meeting. Mr. Gompers said tonight, however, that the Trades Union Congress would be divorced entirely from the meeting at Berne.

BERNE, Jan. 21.—It is announced that Austria will be represented at the labor conference being arranged in Berne by at least two delegates. Deputy Seitz, a Social Democrat leader, and Deputy Allenburg have been designated by the Austrian labor party. German delegates are expected, but there is no indication yet as to who will be the representatives.

The attitude of Samuel Gompers, the President of the American Federation of Labor, in remaining aloof from the Berne conference mystifies the labor leaders here, more so, they say, because he has been quoted as saying that American labor would have nothing to do with Bolshevism. The Socialists here for the conference, it is declared, not only are opposed to Bolshevism, but are hated cordially by the Bolsheviki.

MANNING LEFT $9,000,000.

Executors Ask Permission to Sell Securities to Pay Expenses.

The estate of John B. Manning, retired broker, who died April 23 last at the age of 83, after he had settled for $100,000 a suit for $1,000,000 for breach of promise brought by Miss Honora Ma[illegible] O'Brien, now the wife of an Irish farmer, left an estate valued at $9,000,000, according to a petition filed in the Surrogate's Court yesterday by the executors asking permission to sell securities to pay inheritance taxes and other expenses of the estate. The inheritance taxes will amount to between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000, the Federal inheritance tax will be $150,000, and the debts and funeral expenses about $300,000. The estate has already sold $1,800,000 of securities under a court order to meet expenses and a further sale is necessary to raise $600,000 needed.

The will left the estate to six children and three grandchildren of the decedent. Guardians for the grandchildren oppose the present sale of the securities because of market conditions, but the adult heirs favor the sale and believe no sacrifice of the securities will be necessary. The heirs will receive the securities in nine equal parts after all expenses are paid.

Mr. Manning held stocks and bonds in about 100 corporations. Among the larger holdings of stock are: Consolidated Gas, $156,520; Consolidated Coal, $207,000; Northwestern Railroad, preferred, $146,250, and common, $549,27[illegible]; Jersey Central, $252,500; Corn Exchange Bank, $171,990; Chemical National Bank, $189,420; Lackawanna Railroad, $69[illegible],535; Illinois Central, $265,950; First National Bank, $154,660; Manhattan Railway, $115,862; Chicago & St. Louis Railroad, $129,580; Pullman Company, $2[illegible],963; Reading Railroad, $621,000; Union Pacific, $214,650; Southern Pacific, $121,000; New York Central, $196,350; Liberty bonds, first issue, $152,837, second issue, $207,782. Surrogate Cohalan reserved decision.

GROUP OF REPUBLICS FOR NEW GERMANY

CHAMBERS SERVE 3 YEARS

Redistribution of Landed Property Is Included in the List of Reforms.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Germany, under the draft of the proposed new Constitution, is divided into federated republics. These political divisions, according to a wireless dispatch from Berlin today, include the following:

The Republic of Berlin, heading the list of the Federated Republics and including the city and rural districts of Greater Berlin, with about 10,000,000 inhabitants.

The Republic of Prussia, including the Provinces of East and West Prussia and the Bromberg district.

The Republic of Silesia, including Posen and the Sudeten regions east of Bohemia.

The Republic of Brandenburg, including that part of Brandenburg outside of Greater Berlin, together with Pomerania, Altmark, and the two Mecklenburgs.

The Republic of Lower Saxony, including Hanover, Schleswig-Holstein, Oldenburg, and Brunswick.

The Republic of Westphalia, including Westphalia, Schaumberg-Lippe, and Pyrmont.

The Republic of Hesse, including Hesse-Nassau and the Grand Duchy of Hesse.

The Republic of the Rhineland, including the Rhine Provinces, Bavarian Pfalz, and the Principality of Birkenfeld.

The Erfurt Government District is to go to Greater Thuringia.

The Federal State of German Austria is also to be founded, and Vienna, like Berlin, is to become subject to the State Government. Parts of German Austria are to go to Silesia, Upper Saxony, or Bavaria.

It is provided in the draft of the Constitution that the President of the empire is to be elected by the entire German people, and that his term shall be seven years. The Chancellor is to be appointed by the President and to be responsible to the Chamber. He must retire if the members of the Chamber withdraw their confidence by a definite vote.

BASLE, Jan. 21.—The draft of the proposed new Constitution for Germany provides that all Germans shall have the same rights before the law, and that all privileges and advantages of birth, social condition or creed shall be abolished, according to Berlin advices received here.

The free exercise of religious practice is guaranteed, within the limits of morality and public order, and no one shall be compelled to take part in any religious act or ceremony or to make known his religious convictions. It is provided that the authorities shall have no right to ask questions on this subject.

Scientific instruction, the measure provides shall be free and accessible to all Germans according to their capacities.

It is proposed that the present distribution of landed property shall be modified by a comprehensive process, with a view to the reconciliation of the country districts. Colonization will be fostered in districts where there has not been as yet reasonable fusion of the great, medium-sized and small properties.

In its main feature the proposed constitution, which has been drafted under Government auspices, provides for a Reichstag, composed of two chambers, the one to be a popular chamber and the other chosen by the States. The people's chamber is to be composed of Deputies of the united German people, elected by secret, direct and universal ballot. All men and women over 20 years of age may vote. The lower chamber will be chosen on the principle of proportionate representation.

The upper chamber is to be composed of representatives of the various States. The duration of the legislative mandate of both Chambers is to be three years.

Those who drafted the bill evidently had in mind a highly centralized government, with full control over most of the activities upon which the people are dependent. It characterizes as "imperial matters" the following:

Foreign relations, the defense of the Empire, civil administration of the banks and exchanges; currency, weights and measures; management of railway and river transportation and of all waterways common to the several German States; control of the postal and telegraph service and of motor traffic and aviation; questions of nationality, freedom of domicile in a State and passports; the status of foreigners; emigration and immigration; civil and criminal law and judicial procedure, labor legislation, maritime navigation, legislation bearing on landed property, on the press, on public companies and on public meetings, churches and schools.

The use of the words "Empire" and "imperial" in the new German Constitution is evidently a translation of the words "Das Reich" and "Reichs," in a way that would not have the approval of the Ebert Government.

It was correct in the days of the Empire, for then "Das Reich" meant first of all the German Empire, then the German nation, then any realm, empire, kingdom, nation, or State, and "Reichs" was the adjective. Now, however, at least as far as Germany is concerned, they have lost their imperial—their "kaiserlich"—attributes and might be rendered simply as "nation" and "national" as abstract connotations of the originals.

PRAISES JEWS AS SOLDIERS.

Capt. Harrigan Says They Made a Splendid Record in 77th Division.

Speaking at the dinner of the sales agents of the American Chicle Company at the Waldorf last night, Captain William D. Harrigan of the 307th Infantry gave the very highest praise to the fighting qualities of the New York boys who composed the 77th Division. He stated that in his experience of 185 days of constant fighting he had never seen an enlisted man of the American Army fail to advance when ordered or fall down on a job that was assigned to him.

I wish also to say a special word for the American Jew as a fighter," said Captain Harrigan, who was in command of the force which rescued Lieut. Col. Whittlesey's famous "lost battalion." Whatever opinion any one may have had, I can testify to the splendid record made by the Jewish members of the 77th Division, and they were 40 per cent. of that division. They were put to as hard a test as could be met with in modern warfare when we made our thirty-five-mile advance through the Argonne Forest, an obstacle which had proved a stumbling block in every previous war.

"We had forty-two races and creeds in our division, and from all of them we gained something, as well as from the varied types given us by this city. We had no better men with the bayonet than our gangsters, one of whom I assigned to teach classes in the use of the boot knife—a most valuable weapon at close quarters. He proved a skilled and enthusiastic teacher."

Major Lankester to Talk of War.

Major Eric Lankester of the Honorable Artillery Company of London is to talk on his experiences at the front on Friday night at Delmonico's at a meeting of the Sons of the Revolution, which is to be held to celebrate the birthday of Frederick Samuel Tallmadge, late President of the society.

DENIES THAT JAPAN COVETS TERRITORY

Uchida Says She Is Ready to Aid China and Russia Without Selfish Motives.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The attitude of Japan toward Russia, China, and the allied powers in the present international situation was set forth in a speech delivered today in the Japanese Parliament at Tokio by Viscount Uchida, Minister for Foreign Affairs. The text of the address was made public by the Japanese Embassy here late tonight. The dispatch from Tokio to the embassy indicated that Viscount Uchida's speech had been well and favorably received by the Diet.

Pointing out that the present Peace conference at Paris had in view not only the restoration of peace but "the establishment of peace throughout the world upon solid and enduring foundations," Viscount Uchida asserted that Japan was determined to co-operate "in all sincerity with our allies at the peace conference for the realization of plans conducive to the accomplishment of these objects."

"Japan," declared Viscount Uchida, "has no aspiration but to seek the consummation of a free and unfettered development of her national life along the highway of justice and peace, and to have the open door of the whole world assured to the legitimate and rightful activities of the nation."

Regarding Russia and China, the Foreign Minister said:

"Realizing that the complete withdrawal of our troops from Siberia at this moment might create a serious situation prejudicial to the preservation of order in these regions, the Japanese Government have no alternative but to maintain for the time being a certain portion of force in various localities in Eastern Siberia. At the same time they have decided to effect as much reduction in number of the Japanese troops as the absolute requirements of the situation will permit.

"We do not forget for a moment the conspicuous service which Russia rendered at the initial stage of war in the allied causes, regardless of enormous sacrifices involved by diverting or checking the German military activities on various fronts.

"We confidently look forward to the rehabilitation of Russia as one of the great powers to contribute to the progress and civilization of the world, and we are quite ready to offer her all due assistance for this purpose. We have no intention whatever of interfering in the internal politics of Russia, still less would our policy be influenced by any tendency of taking advantage of domestic troubles in Russia to promote any selfish aims of territorial or economic aggression.

"In view of the mischievos rumors circulated abroad from time to time in regard to our policy in China, I have to say a few words here by way of explanation.

"It goes without saying that Japan has no territorial ambition in China or elsewhere, neither does she contemplate any action which might militate against the development of the legitimate interest and welfare of the Chinese nation. We have solemnly pledged ourselves to respect the independence and territorial integrity of China, and to abide faithfully by the principle of equal opportunity and the open door for commerce and industry.

"We are particularly anxious to deal in spirit of justice and friendliness with all the questions which may come up before the Peace Conference affecting the Chinese interests. Upon acquisition of the right of free disposal from Germany of leased territory of Kiao-chau we would restore it to China in accordance with the terms of the notes complementary to the treaty of May 25, 1915, regarding Shantung Province. At the same time we have to rely, in a large measure, upon rich natural resources in China in order to assure our own economic existence.

"I have no doubt that both the Government and the people of China, in fulfilment of their friendly and neighborly relations with Japan, would not deny us needed co-operation in this respect."

Rose Feinman, Bouck White Ally.

Miss Rose Feinman, who participated in the Bouck White's flag-burning ceremony in the Spring of 1916, died Jan. 10 of pneumonia, but her death was not generally known until Monday. Miss Feinman was one of the eleven arrested with White following the scene in the back yard of the Church of the Socialist Revolution in West Twenty-first Street. White was the only one of the number who was convicted and sentenced to a term in jail. Miss Feinman burned the Rumanian flag, but with the ten others who burned foreign flags she was released.

BERKMAN SPONSOR FOR TROTZKY HERE

12,000 REDS IN NEW YORK

Former Police Inspector Discloses Anarchist Plot to Blow Up Rockefeller Family.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Leon Trotzky's closest associates in New York were Alexander Berkman and Emma Goldman, the anarchists, who were among the 1,000 persons who assembled on the night of March 26, 1917, to bid the Russian agitator farewell, and at which meeting Trotzky urged his followers in this country to organize for the overthrow of the "damned rotten capitalistic Government" of the United States.

This testimony was placed in the record of the Senate Propaganda Committee today, by Inspector Tunney of the New York Police Department, who during the period of the war was detailed to service with the Military Intelligence Division of the Army. Inspector Tunney also testified that William Schatoff, the Bolshevist Commissioner of Railroads, who, he said, was also in charge of executions, was a former resident of New York.

Another witness before the committee today was Archibald E. Stevenson of the Military Intelligence Service, who told of the efforts that were made by a group of persons in New York to organize a company to publish a daily newspaper in New York which would do "justice to the German cause." The men who were selected to head the publishing company were the late Hugo Schweitzer, Emil Kipper, Max Weg Stehr, and Henry Weismann, the last named the former head of the German-American Alliance in New York State. Kipper is now in the Tombs awaiting trial on an indictment which charges conspiracy to commit treason. Schweitzer, though dead, is named in the indictment as well as Jeremiah A. O'Leary, the Sinn Fein agitator, and John T. Ryan, the fugitive Buffalo lawyer.

The scheme for the organization of the publishing company was disclosed, Mr. Stevenson testified, in a memorandum sheet issued by George Sylvester Viereck. There was to have been, he said, an Advisory Board of Honorary Vice Presidents, among those named in Viereck's paper as having been selected for the board being Professor William M. Shepherd of Columbia University, the Rev. Dr. Hall of the Union Theological Seminary, Dr. Edmund Von Mach, and Mayor John F. Hylan of New York, then a County Judge in Brooklyn.

Trotzky's Purpose Made Plain.

Regarding Trotzky's departure for Russia in March, 1917, Inspector Tunney said that the farewell meeting in the Russian's honor was arranged by Alexander Berkman, the anarchist associate of Emma Goldman. The meeting was held in Harlem, and Trotzky made two speeches, one in Russian and the other in German. At the conclusion of one of his speeches Trotzky uttered these words:

"I am going back to Russia to overthrow the Provisional Government there and to stop the war with Germany, and I want to say that we will allow no interference from any outside Government. I want you people here to organize and keep on organizing until you are able to overthrow the damned rotten capitalistic Government of this country." When Trotzky called he was accompanied by thirty or forty other agitators, whose names, Inspector Tunney said, were in the files of the Government.

"After that and up to the following June 1," Inspector Tunney continued, "about 450 other Russians here left under various leaders, and every one of them went back to road the Ameney commission that was in Russia at that time trying to help the people over there. Two of these men are now in the Government over there. Both were at one time connected with radical foreign language papers in New York. One of these men is William Schatoff, the Russian Commissioner of Railroads under Trotzky. I also understand that Schatoff is the new executioner there in the place of Uritzki, who was assassinated some time ago by a woman."

"I was told recently by an American who managed to get out of Petrograd that he saw Schatoff over there and that he halted him and told him to give his regards to Broadway when he got back. Schatoff was on his private train at the time. The other former New York agitator who is in authority of some sort in Petrograd is named Wallen."

"Have you any evidence," Senator Overman asked Inspector Tunney, "as to whether or not Trotzky's followers in New York are trying to carry out his instructions for the overthrow of this Government?"

"Yes, they have some sort of organization, but it is not what I would dignify with the word effective. There is a lot of talking on, some of it in public meetings and some of it in secret."

12,000 Anarchists Here.

"You have quite a nest of these anarchists in New York, have you not?" asked Senator Nelson.

"Yes, Senator, we have a lot of them there yet."

In answer to further questions by Senator Nelson, Inspector Tunney estimated that there are between 12,000 and 15,000 active anarchists in New York City at this time. Add to this the persons who are in sympathy with them and, he said, the total would probably exceed 50,000.

"How long was Trotzky in New York?" Senator Overman asked.

"Only a few months."

"What did he do?"

"He was also agitating among Russians on organization. He was connected with a Russian paper called the Nova Mir, and was nearly always lecturing on anarchy and radical Socialism, sometimes in Russian and sometimes in German. He believed in the overthrow of all government. He spoke very little English. He does not believe in God."

"Who owns the Nova Mir now?" Major Humes asked.

"A man named Gregory Weinstein."

"How about the activities of these anarchists since the signing of the armistice, has it increased?"

"To some extent, mainly through an increased circulation of pamphlets and other seditious literature."

$140,000 for Cable Propaganda.

In reference to the activities of Dr. Karl A. Fuehr, the head propagandist during the period of American neutrality, Mr. Stevenson said that Fuehr's cable bills to the Mexican cable company alone totaled $140,000, this being the toll on propaganda matter cabled to Mexico, Peru, Chile, Bolivia, and Argentina.

Mr. Stevenson next referred to the daily paper that was to have been started in 1915 to support the German cause, and read a long list of names of prominent men who were to be the honorary Vice Presidents of the organization.

CREEL TELLS OF HIS WORK.

Says German Staff Order Proved American Propaganda.

George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, has written an article for the current issue of Everybody's Magazine on American propaganda and its effectiveness abroad. "Eight German prisoners," he says, "out of every ten captured by the Americans had our 'stuff' in their pockets, and reports united in declaring that the literature was well thumbed." Mr. Creel says that the first proof of the effectiveness of the work of the American propagandists was supplied in the order issued by the German General Staff, which provided the death penalty for any one picking up American literature or found with it in his possession.

Getting the truth into Germany and Austria-Hungary was a hard battle, Mr. Creel says, as any fought in France. A censorship, rigidly enforced, not only guarded the frontiers, but broke up every internal attempt to speak or write honestly. Soldiers and citizens "were drugged with lies about Germany's defensive war and the cruel purposes of the enemy." The collapse of the Allies and the inability of America to train and transport troops meant a tremendous victory and world mastery."

The most obvious way to get the propaganda inside the German and Austrian frontiers, according to Mr. Creel, was by airplanes, and pamphlets were rained over firing lines and towns and cities that told the truth in short, sharp sentences.

The fight for the favor of the neutral countries was difficult, Mr. Creel says. There was the danger of saying or doing the wrong thing, and, above all, there was the amazing ignorance about the United States and the abnormal prejudices that had grown out of this ignorance.

INDICT JOHN T. RYAN ON TREASON CHARGE

Fugitive Alleged to Have Aided Germany Since America Entered War.

LONG AN IRISH AGITATOR

Charged with Plotting with Teuton Spies and Agents and Handling German Money.

Following the indictment of Jay Willard Robinson on Monday for treason the Federal Grand Jury yesterday indicted John T. Ryan on the same charge. Ryan, who is a fugitive from justice, was already under indictment for conspiracy to commit treason. It is believed that he is hiding in Mexico, and Federal Prosecutor George Winship Taylor, who is in charge of the prosecution of treason charges, said that if he should be found in that country there would be little difficulty about bringing him here for trial.

It is alleged that Ryan was one of the leaders in the Irish plotting, and that he and Jeremiah A. O'Leary worked together to bring about the defeat of the Allies. Ryan was born in Brookline, Mass., about 45 years ago. He studied law, was admitted to the bar and practiced in Buffalo.

The indictment charges that from April 6, 1917, to Dec. 20, 1918, he was in frequent communication with Maria K. de Victorica, called also Maria von Kretschmann, which is said to be her right name, and by several other names, who, it is charged, was here as a paid spy and agent for the German Government.

On July 20, 1917, the indictment charges, Ryan, with the assistance of O'Leary, took Mme. de Victorica to a certain place in Riverside Drive and there met a man referred to by Ryan as "Hurley" for the purpose of employing him to act as a messenger for Victorica in carrying information from the United States to the German Government and its agents; that between Nov. 3 and Dec. 15, 1917, Ryan paid to Victorica $4,500 to be used by her in her work as a German agent, and that Ryan from April 6, 1917, to Dec. 20, 1918, agreed and conspired with Victorica, Robinson, Hurley, and other agents and officials of the German Government residing in Mexico, Brazil, Germany, Switzerland, Sweden, Denmark, Norway, The Netherlands, Ireland, and Spain, and with other persons, that Victorica should remain in the United States and that her secret activities should be concealed from the officials here and that secret letters and communications containing information for the use of the German Government should be sent by messengers to Germany.

It is also alleged in the indictment that arrangements were made to the end that Victorica should have sufficient money to carry out her plans against this country, and that, in further prosecution and performance of such treason, Ryan, knowing that she was an enemy of this country, met her several times in a hotel at Long Beach.

These meetings are set forth in the indictment as having occurred on July 8 and 29, Aug. 7, 12 and 26, Sept. 9, 23 and 30, and Oct. 7, 1917. These frequent meetings, it is explained, were for the purpose of considering what should be done to further assist Germany in the war against the United States, to counsel and advise the woman, to help her carry on her work without becoming known, and to provide the necessary methods of enabling her to convey her information to Germany, and that Ryan gave her a small dictionary to be used in the selection of words to be used in a code. It is also alleged that Ryan actually gathered information for Victorica which might be used in the interests of Germany against the United States and aided her in every way that he could.

It is said that Ryan was also concerned with Hermann Wessels, Albert Paul Prinz, and Jeremiah O'Leary, already under indictment for treason, and that he acted in concert with them in furthering the aims of Germany. Ryan, it was also said, was in close touch with Sir Roger Casement all the time the latter was in this country, and that Ryan was chosen as a member of the committee which was to carry to Washington the resolution of sympathy adopted at the Irish mass meeting in August, 1915.

Prosecutor Taylor told the reporters that early in 1918 Ryan sent a messenger who is known to the authorities only as "Jerry" to Mexico for $20,000 which he was to receive from the German representatives there, that "Jerry" returned with the money, that Ryan gave the messenger $2,000, and after deducting the $4,500 he had given to Victorica, turned the rest of the money over to her.

Ryan was suspected of having been in the plot to destroy the Welland Canal in Canada, having acted in concert with Captain von Papen, former Military attaché of the German Embassy, and with Horst von der Goltz, a German agent, and of having been active in all of the Sinn Fein plotting in this country. Ryan left Buffalo on May 8 last for an automobile trip to Rochester. That was the last information the authorities have had of him.

Ryan was a Captain in the Spanish war, and, barring the charges pending against him for acts against this country, his record is good. He is described in a Government circular asking for information concerning his whereabouts as being 5 feet 10 inches tall, weight about 190 pounds, a full face, oval chin and an African nose. Mr. Taylor said that Ryan came to this city from his Buffalo home every Saturday and that he has been known as "Philippine Island Bill" and as "Buffalo," the latter being his code name.

FIND LIEBKNECHT SHOT IN BACK

No Proof That He Was Beaten—Rosa Luxemburg's Body Untraced.

BERLIN, Jan. 20, (Associated Press.)—The autopsy upon the body of Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the Spartacide leader who was shot and killed last week as he was trying to escape from the party of soldiers which had arrested him in suppressing the revolt, showed that he was shot from behind and that the bullets which struck him were fired from some distance.

The autopsy was conducted by Professor August C. G. Bier and Professor Paul F. Strassman, together with a third surgeon. William Liebknecht, Dr. Liebknecht's brother, and Hugo Haase, the Independent Socialist leader, were present.

The official report of the surgeons showed that the fatal bullet entered the back of the head and came out through the forehead. A second bullet entered the back and traversed the lungs. A third also struck the back, but produced only a slight wound.

The surgeons found that there was nothing substantial in the allegation that Dr. Liebknecht was beaten over the head with clubs or the butts of guns.

An Independent Socialist member of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Council, who was present at the autopsy, signed the finding. Members of the division of mounted rifle guards, who were in charge of Dr. Liebknecht when the shooting occurred, say that this Socialist witness admitted after the post-mortem that there was "unfortunately no chance of using the killing as a basis for a campaign agitation."

The officers of the division have offered a reward of 10,000 marks for information clearing up the deaths of Dr. Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg. The body of Rosa Luxemburg has not been found, despite a continuous search.

The Spartacide authorities at Elberfeld, Rhenish Prussia, have changed the name of Kaiser Wilhelm Street to Liebknecht Street, and that of Kaiser Friedrich Street to Rosa Luxemburg Street.

FAVORS LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Prof. Hart Discusses Problems of Territorial Expansion.

Albert Bushnell Hart, Professor of Government in Harvard University, told the members of the National Geographic Society at their annual meeting in the Engineering Societies' Building last night that he believed a League of Nations would accomplish a great forward movement in world history and civilization if it resulted only in an annual Hague Convention for the discussion of grievances among nations and the evolution of a body of international laws.

He reviewed the relations of Europe and America with China, Japan, and the other Asiatic countries, and prophesied that the countries of the Far East would have a great part in world affairs. Readjustment of national boundaries in Asia, he said, were inevitable, and he expressed the opinion that territorial expansion there would form one of the largest problems of the powers.

If the English were to have Mesopotamia because they have conquered her, he said, then consideration also would have to be given to the claims of France for a protectorate over countries in the Near East. Recognition of the claims of those countries also would require earnest consideration of the claims of Italy to Albania and Dalmatia, Professor Hart said, in expressing the opinion that the claim of Italy to those territories "was about as good as ours would be if we claimed Denmark."

One of the inevitable results of recognition of all these probable claims, Professor Hart added, would be that the powers then would be required to consider the proposal that Kiao-chau and other territory and islands in the possession of Japan since the beginning of the war should be given to that country. In speaking of the countries of the Near East and their individual claims and problems, Professor Hart said that the Christian nations of Europe ought to be relieved forever from Turkish domination and that Armenia should be set free.

PASTOR AND WIFE IN COURT.

Each Accuses the Other of Cruelty and Each Wants a Separation.

The Rev. Eugene P. Hall, pastor of the Claremont Park Congregational Church in the Bronx, took the stand before Justice Faber in the Queens County Supreme Court yesterday to defend himself against charges of cruelty made by his wife, Anna A. Hall, in her action for separation. Mr. Hall is also trying to substantiate allegations of cruelty on the part of his wife which he has made in his counter action for separation. Two boys, Harold and Herbert, 8 and 6 years old, now with the mother, are also sought by the father.

Mr. Hall's testimony revealed that he had inherited three three-family brick tenements from an aged friend and that he has been adding to his pulpit income by working as a stenographer. He lost the place he had with the Shewan & Son Shipbuilding Company in Brooklyn because the firm was doing Government work and he was accused of being an alien. He was taken to the Federal Building in this city, but was not interned. He asserted that these difficulties were the result of his wife's persecutions. "I was born in Germany, but my father came to this country when I was 2½ years old, and he was a citizen and always voted," Mr. Hall testified.

Mr. Hall said he supplied the money with which he and a neighbor in Ridgewood went into the business of raising goldfish.

"You see my pastoral income was small," he testified. "I built hothouses and aquariums and started to raise goldfish. Then one Sunday last Fall, while I was in my church preaching, this partner of mine came and ripped out the tanks and dismantled the aquariums and broke up the business."

"You don't charge that as cruelty against your wife, do you?" asked Justice Faber.

"Yes, I do," replied Mr. Hall, "because she was looking out of the window and saw him do it."

Mr. Hall testified that he had an income of $50 a month from his congregation, an equal contribution from the General Board of the Congregational Church, and $149 a month from his tenement houses.

Mrs. Hall, while testifying, had produced a revolver and a box of cartridges and said she had taken them from her husband's desk just before their separation last Fall.

"I never had any such a weapon," Mr. Hall testified. "All I had was an old-fashioned firearm which was about 350 years old and which was given to me by the man who left me the property. He had obtained it from an ancestor who was a missionary among the Indians."

LIBERAL GROUPS GAIN IN GERMANY

Police Eichhorn and Hugo Haase, former Secretary for Foreign Affairs in the Ebert Cabinet, have been elected to the National Assembly. Berlin newspapers announce that a warrant for the arrest of Eichhorn has been issued. It is said that various charges, proof of which would lay Eichhorn liable to imprisonment for fifteen years, have been issued.

The former National Liberal leader, Gustav Stresemann, was elected to the Assembly in the Osnabruck-Wilhelmshaven district. Philipp Scheidemann, the Majority Socialist leader, has a big majority in the municipal district where he headed his ticket.

Railway officials at Karlsruhe, according to the Vossische Zeitung, forced Herr Barth, a former member of the German Government, to relinquish his official pass on which he was traveling in connection with the political campaign. Barth, it is said, had been stumping in South Germany for the Independent Socialists at the expense of the Government.

The official pass which, it was charged, he issued to himself while a member of the Government, was taken from him and he was forced to pay first-class fare for all the distance he had traveled since he left Berlin.

Socialists May Not Control.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 21. — Incomplete returns from the German elections showed last night that the Democrats polled 1,234,041 votes; Majority Socialists, 2,603,422; Independent Socialists, 401,187; Christian People's Party, 1,110,137; German People's Party, 266,157, and Conservatives, (National Party,) 467,367, according to advices received by the Berlingske Tidende.

While the Majority Socialists will have the ascendency over any other single party, the results indicate the bourgeois parties together will have a majority in the National Assembly.

Full returns from the Republic of Saxony, received here from Dresden, show this result: Majority Socialists, 17 seats; German Democrats, 6; National Party, 4; People's Party, 2, and Independent Socialists, 3.

The National Party has elected eight delegates in Baden, including Herr Düringer, a former Minister. The Christian People's Party elected five delegates, one of whom is the former President of the Reichstag, Konstantin Fehrenbach. Three delegates were elected by the German Democrats, one being Herr Dielsch, Foreign Minister of Baden.

The Social Democrats succeeded in electing five delegates, one of whom is Herr Rückert, Traffic Minister. Ludwig Haas, Minister of the Interior, was successful as a candidate of the Democratic Party.

The German National Assembly will meet at Weimar, capital of the Grand Duchy of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach, according to the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger. This was decided upon in a conference between the German Government representatives and the Prussian Ministry, after they had agreed that the session ought to be held in a non-Prussian town.

Results Received in Paris.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—The count of the German vote is proceeding slowly, the Majority Socialists, who received the largest vote, having their party name printed at the bottom of the ballot. In some polling stations in Berlin large numbers of ballots were declared illegal, and it is said that Philipp Scheidemann lost 11,000 votes in one ward alone from this cause.

Results so far announced in dispatches received here are:

Munich—Majority Socialists, 147,236; Christian People's Party, 77,304; Democrats, 59,821; Minority Socialists, 34,195; National Liberals, 7,145.

Cassel—Majority Socialists, 51,718; Democrats, 25,002; Christian People's Party, 4,095; National Liberals, 9,489; Conservatives, 2,710; Minority Socialists, 1,194.

Stettin—Majority Socialists, 60,794; Independent Socialists, 8,495; Democrats, 30,722; People's Party, 19,578; National Party, 9,084; Centrists, 282.

Ludwigshafen—Majority Socialists, 24,444; Independent Socialists, 2,549; Centrists, 7,732; Democrats, 7,260; Peasants' League, 2,800.

The Majority Socialists and the German Democrats, who are the successors of the old Radical Party, apparently will go into the Constituent Assembly with a big lead over the Independent Socialists. Friedrich von Payer, former Vice Chancellor and leader of the Democrats, and the Socialist leaders, Ebert and Scheidemann, demonstrated their ability to work together in the old Reichstag. They can also count on Konstantin Fehrenbach, the Centrist leader, as an ally in their efforts to institute a government with a basis of popular support.

This consummation is regarded in all allied circles here as an indispensable preliminary to any peace negotiation. The coming into power of these groups will mean the continuation of the present armistice commission and the probable appointment of Scheidemann, von Payer, and Fehrenbach or Erzberger as the leading members of the German peace delegation.

Had the elections brought in two fairly evenly balanced Socialist groups with an insignificant representation from the moderate and non-Socialist elements, as was feared at first, the controversies and bitterness between the Majority and Independent Socialists would undoubtedly have converted the Constituent Assembly into a disorderly gathering, from which little could have been expected.

Extremists Beaten in Hamburg.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—In Hamburg, which was considered a stronghold of the Spartacides and Independent Socialists, the Majority Socialists secured seven seats out of eleven in the election, according to a Central News dispatch from Amsterdam. The German Democrats won three seats and the Independents Socialists one.

The Majority Socialists and the Centrists were close together in the Palatinate with 50,550 and 54,871 votes, respectively. The People's Party got 46,502 votes, the Democrats 15,521, and the Independent Socialists, 531.

In Nuremberg the Majority Socialists got 29,748; Independent Socialists, 709; Democrats, 5,754; Bavarian People's Party, 17,783, and Bavarian Middle Class Party, 5,683.

Amsterdam Gets Berlin Returns.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 21.—In the Third Berlin District the Majority Socialists won five seats, Philipp Scheidemann, Herr Fischer, Herr Pfannkuch, Herr Schmidt, and Herr Heinmann; the Independents four seats, Herr Eichhorn, Hugo Haase, Herr Leuwart, and Luise Zietz; the Democrats two seats, Herr Naumann and Herr Hartmann, and the Nationalists, the Centrist, and the People's Party one seat each.

Other returns from the German election received here show that at Erfurt the Independent Socialists polled 24,600 votes to 13,500 for the Majority Socialists. The Independents, on the other hand, were beaten badly in Dresden, Chemnitz, Hamburg, Magdeburg, Nuremberg, and Munich.

The Majority Socialists appear likely to get 40 per cent. of all the votes, with the German Democratic Party second. The National Liberals lost more than the Conservatives and the Centrists lost more than they gained.

The final results will not be known until Wednesday, but the indications are that the Majority Socialists will be the strongest party in the new republic and will occupy most of the Cabinet seats. Friedrich Ebert is presumed to stand the best chance of obtaining the Chancellorship.

CENTRIST CANDIDATES SWEEP RHINELAND

Believed at Coblenz That the Socialists Will Be Outvoted in Convention.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COBLENZ, Jan. 20.—The Centrist or Christian People's Party swept the Rhineland in the elections for the German National Assembly.

While only partial returns are available, an official estimate is that the Centrist vote is two-thirds of the total cast in the district occupied by the American Army. This result had been predicted in these dispatches, but it came as something of a surprise that such a poor showing was made by the Social Democrats, who in Treves polled 4,000 votes, against the Centrists' 14,000, and who in Cohlenz were outdistanced about three to one.

Reports from up and down the Rhine indicate the same general result. The Independent Socialist vote was negligible in the Rhineland, although that party carried Leipsic, for instance, by a heavy majority. Reports from Bavaria indicate that the Centrists and affiliated forces won two to one, and in lesser degree south Germany appears to have gone for the Moderates safely.

Few reports are coming through yet from Prussia, where the Socialists of both branches will probably control by a large vote. A large number of Spartacides, who disavowed the election entirely, appear to have voted the Independent Socialist ticket.

From what we can get at this hour from the rest of Germany by wireless and other reports, the indications are that the Socialists will be swamped in the National Assembly. There are the following parties that count: the Centrists, German Democrats, German People's Party, People's Party, National Party, Social Democrats, and Independent Socialists.

It is the opinion of our experts who have studied the situation closely that in the National Assembly the division will be for and against socialism. That will mean that the Centrists, German Democrats, German People's Party, Nationalists, and People's Party will line up against the two Socialist Parties, who will probably bury their differences during the convention.

It The best guess to be made at this hour, 8 P. M., Monday, is that this division will give the Moderates and Conservatives a two-thirds vote, against one-third for the Socialists. The belief is that the disorders in Berlin have hurt the Social Democrats, the party of Ebert and Schiedemann.

The Centrists will join the old German Democrats, the monarchists, it is assured, and further support will probably swing to them if it is needed to defeat the Socialists. Certainly every faction in the Rhineland has its axe sharpened for socialism.

Protestant church leaders have promised the Catholic Party their votes where socialism is the issue.

It is probable that the National Assembly will be called for early next week, after the Prussian elections, which take place next Sunday. Two drafts of the Constitution, Conservative and Socialist, will be presented on the opening day, it is understood, and the battle will be fought out for the adoption of one or the other, with possible amendments, of course.

As the Rhineland delegation will be controlled by the Centrists, it should be mentioned that these delegates, being largely of the propertied class, will call for the deepest consideration of Germany's financial situation at once, a problem which does not bother the Socialists particularly. Germany is in a very bad way financially and the indemnity will make it worse.

Germany's national debt is now equivalent to $30,000,000,000. Five per cent. interest on this plus 2 per cent. for amortization means yearly taxes of $2,100,000,000. In Paris they are talking of $20,000,000,000 or $30,000,000,000 indemnity. If the taxes required to take care of this are another $2,100,000,000 that will make $4,000,000,000 and more yearly which Germany will have to raise in taxes.

To realize what this means one may bear in mind that before the war the United States Government, with resources vastly superior to those of Germany, raised slightly more than $1,000,000,000 yearly.

Fiscal experts of Germany have declared that the country cannot raise $1,000,000,000 a year in taxes. That raises the question, what will Germany do in the dilemma—repudiate her national debt or fail to pay the indemnity?

The Allies say she must pay the indemnity. Economic disaster threatens if she repudiates her national bonds, which form practically the basis of the fiscal machinery of Germany today. It is a problem in which conservative, constructive Germans are deeply concerned.

INTEGRITY

The CHILDS Company passed through the great world war without lowering its high standard of food, service and sanitation for a single day.

The stockholders, realizing the difficulty of doing this, are satisfied to know that the integrity of the institution has been preserved.

True, the Company made no money; but it did co-operate with the Government in maintaining the economic stability of our Country.

And it did make personal sacrifices for the good of the Cause and to the end that a speedy victory might be won.

And with the victory came the removal of all restrictions in the use of wheat flour, and so—

FIGHT ON WILLIAMS PLANNED IN SENATE

ANNUAL REPORT ISSUED

Controller Recommends 30 Items of Legislation, Including Guarantee of Bank Deposits Up to $5,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The annual report of John Skelton Williams, Controller of the Currency, in which he makes thirty distinct recommendations for banking legislation, and which was made public today, probably will be received with more than perfunctory interest because the nomination of Mr. Williams for another term is expected in the Senate shortly and promises to lead to an interesting contest in executive session.

The report covers the fifth year of the Controller's term of office. Unlike any other official in the Treasury Department, the Controller is appointed for a term of five years. His present term began Feb. 3, 1914, and will expire next month. Therefore, if Mr. Williams is confirmed by the present Senate he will remain in office until 1924. Republican members of the Senate are preparing to fight confirmation, predicting that after March 4, 1921, there will be a Republican Secretary of the Treasury, who will not relish retaining a Democratic Controller.

Opponents of Mr. Williams are represented as believing that there will not be enough Democratic Senators to join the Republicans to insure defeat of his nomination. But the statement was made today that there might be a few Democrats who would secretly aid the Republicans by lending themselves to tactics of delay to prevent final action on the nomination at the present session of Congress. In that event President Wilson would give Mr. Williams a "recess appointment," which would come before the new Senate for confirmation.

Guarantee of Bank Deposits.

The annual report of Mr. Williams is exhaustive. One recommendation that probably will attract wide attention is for the insurance or guarantee of certain national bank deposits.

That legislation be enacted to provide for the Federal insurance or guarantee of bona fide deposits of national banks where the balance to the credit of any one individual amounts to a sum not exceeding $5,000, and upon which interest no exceeding 3 per cent. per annum is paid. It is also recommended that it be made discretionary with the national banks as to whether or not they shall take advantage of the provisions of such a law.

The main arguments in favor of the plan are:

1. That it would bring from hiding many million dollars of hoarded money.

2. That such a law would afford complete security to some 18,000,000 depositors in national banks whose balance amount to $5,000 or less.

3. That such a law would largely prevent runs on banks.

4. That the law would contribute more to the unification and solidarity of the entire banking system than anything else that could be done at this time.

Mr. Williams asserts that the taking over of the railroads by the Government averted a financial catastrophe and made possible the success of the Third and Fourth Liberty Loans and the winning of the war. He declares that the future prosperity of the country will depend largely upon the correct solution of the railroad problem.

Banking Power of United States.

The Controller reports that the banking power of the United States, represented by the capital, surplus, profits, circulation, and deposits of all national banks and reporting State banks and trust companies, as well as capital, Government and reserve deposits of the Federal Reserve Banks, and Federal Reserve notes in circulation, amounted in June, 1918, to $39,082,000,000, an increase for the year of $4,909,000,000, or 13 per cent. Since June, 1914, the estimated banking power of the United States has grown from $24,340,000,000, an increase of approximately 60 per cent., against an increase the preceding four-year period of about 16 per cent.

Mr. Williams says the banking power of this country today is nearly two and a half times as great as the banking power of the whole world as late as 1890, according to Mulhall's estimate at that time, and the banking power of the United States today is estimated to be seven times greater than our banking power in 1890.

The recommendations for banking legislation made by the Controller may be epitomized as follows:

First—That the officers of national banks be prohibited from borrowing funds of the banks by which they are employed.

Second—That a "conservative and proper limitation" be placed upon the aggregate loan a national bank may make to any one person, firm, or corporation through discounting of commercial paper and bills of exchange.

Third—That the penalty for an excessive loan be the disqualification of the officer granting the loan, or a suitable fine, or both, in addition to the civil liability incurred by reason of making such a loan.

Fourth—That the Controller be authorized to bring proceedings against national bank Directors for losses sustained by the bank through violation of the provisions of the National Bank and Federal Reserve acts.

Removal of Directors.

Fifth—That the Controller be vested with power to remove Directors "guilty of persistent violations of the National Bank act."

Sixth—That the law provide that if a director-elect does not qualify within thirty days after his election a vacancy shall be immediately declared.

Seventh—That the Controller's office be empowered to penalize, by fines, all violations of the law and regulations, and that these fines be imposed on "offensive" officers, as well as upon the bank.

Eighth—That the Department of Justice be authorized to bring suit against national banks guilty of usury upon information furnished by the Controller.

Ninth—That national banks be authorized to make an interest charge of 25 cents on any loan, even though that charge might exceed the legal rate authorized by law.

Tenth—That the State laws regarding overdrafts be made applicable to national banks in those States.

Eleventh—That the rates of interest any national bank may pay on its deposits shall not exceed 4 per cent. annually, unless the highest rate for time paper fixed by the Federal Reserve Bank of the district is over 4 per cent.

Twelfth—That the total deposits which a national bank may receive shall be limited to eight or ten times the unimpaired capital and surplus of the bank.

Fourteenth—That all officers and employes of a national bank handling its funds furnish surety bonds.

Fifteenth—That all certificates of deposit must be signed by two officers of the bank.

Sixteenth—That no officer or employe of a bank be permitted to make erasures on the books of a bank.

Seventeenth—That authority be given to standardize the by-laws of national banks.

Eighteenth—That rechartered national banks be authorized to continue the use of old banknote plates.

Nineteenth—That the engraving of signatures of bank officers on authorized banknote plates be authorized.

National Bank Branches.

Twentieth—That national banks be allowed to establish branches "within certain limits" but not outside the boundaries of the State in which the parent bank is located. No national bank to be allowed to have more than twelve branches.

Twenty-first—That national banks be permitted to establish branches in Alaska and the insular possessions.

Twenty-second—That the Criminal Code be amended to prode a penalty for false financial statements for the purpose of obtaining credit from national banks.

Twenty-third—That the breaking and entering a national bank for purposes of robbery be made a Federal crime.

Twenty-fourth—That the laws be amended to provide that no national bank be permitted to tie up by investment in an office or bank building an amount in excess of the paid-up capital of the bank.

Twenty-fifth—That the United States Treasurer be authorized to sell bonds securing circulation thirty days after a bank goes into liquidation.

Twenty-sixth—That provision be made by which no national bank shall have the right to make a charge against the account of a depositor except on a charge ticket or order signed by at least two officers of the bank.

Twenty-seventh—That the Controller's office have authority to require national banks to shift their bookkeepers and employes from time to time from one desk or place to another so as "to make it more difficult, if not impossible, for employes to hide their defalcation or manipulate the books."

Twenty-eighth—That Congress require long dormant balances to be deposited in the United States Treasury, Mr. Williams pointing out that reports to his office show that the national banks on March 5, 1917, held $27,000,000 in inactive accounts belonging to 730,000 customers who have drawn no checks for five years.

Twenty-ninth—That legislation be enacted to allow banks to deduct United States bonds from taxable assets.

Thirtieth—That legislation be enacted to insure or guarantee all deposits of $5,000 or less.

CLEAR MRS. LEBAUDY OF KILLING HUSBAND

RETURNS TO HER HOME

Shares Estate, Variously Set at Between $3,000,000 and $20,000,000, with Daughter.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., Jan. 21.—Mrs. Augustine Lebaudy, who shot and killed her husband Jacques, the "Emperor of Sahara," on Jan. 12 at her home, Phoenix Lodge, Westbury, left the Nassau County Jail here and went to her home today after the Grand Jury had refused to indict her.

The Grand Jury's investigation, which has been going on for eight days, strongly indicated, it was said, that Jacques Lebaudy had plotted against his wife and daughter and that Mrs. Lebaudy was compelled to shoot him in defense of her life and her daughter. It was stated that the majority of the Grand Jurors were convinced that she acted in self-defense, but that the conclusion which they reached was not unanimous, a few of the Grand Jurors feeling that the petty jury should pass on the case.

The Grand Jury's presentment simply set forth that the Grand Jury had investigated the issue, and found no ground for indictment. District Attorney Charles R. Weeks said that the Grand Jury had made a thorough and conscientious investigation of all the evidence, and that he had no fault to find with their conclusions.

Mrs. Lebaudy was in her cell in the county jail when word was conveyed to her that the Grand Jury had refused to indict, and that she would not have to undergo a trial. She spent some time in prayer, and left the jail with her daughter and her lawyer, H. W. Moore, after an order of discharge had been signed by Justice Aspinall. She asked Sheriff Seaman to convey her thanks to the people of the vicinity and to others who had sympathized with her and aided her in the belief that she acted in self-defense.

Tell of Death Threats.

H. W. Moore, lawyer for Mrs. Lebaudy, said that he had proof that Lebaudy had not only threatened the life of Mrs. Lebaudy but had made attempts to hire men to assassinate her and her daughter. One of these witnesses, who gave the name of Wilbur Rother, of 23 Prospect Park, Long Island City, and went before the Grand Jury this morning, said that Lebaudy had asked him about six weeks ago to kill "two dogs," offering him $1,500 for the work. Rother said that when he asked for more information Lebaudy showed him pictures of his wife and daughter and told him that it was they whom he wished to have killed.

Mr. Moore said that Lebaudy had tried also to hire a man named Theobold Minser to murder his wife and daughter. Lebaudy sent for Minser after the latter had inserted an advertisement asking for employment as a chauffeur. Lebaudy's proposal was that Minser should act as his chauffeur and should contrive to drown Mrs. Lebaudy and Jacqueline by driving into the river with them. Both men regarded Lebaudy as crazy and gave little heed to his strange offers.

Mrs. Lebaudy and her daughter Jacqueline are the heirs to the Lebaudy estate, and the right of Mme. Lebaudy to inherit her share is completely cleared by the finding of the Grand Jury that she acted in self-defense.

No Will Found.

No will of Lebaudy has been found at the Phoenix Lodge, and it is not known whether he left one in other hands. Whether one is in existence or not is probably of little moment, in view of the volume of proof as to his mental incapacity, which would render any such document of little value. One of Lebaudy's freaks was that of stowing away papers and valuables in ingenious hiding places, so that some time may elapse before all his possessions are discovered.

Those familiar with Lebaudy's business affairs say that it would be impossible to place any accurate valuation on the estate in its present condition. A large part of his inherited money was invested in non-income-paying stocks, from which he expected to achieve value at a later date, and in good mining properties which were closed down and sometimes flooded by Lebaudy as soon as he came into control of them. Lebaudy was believed to have pursued this policy because he was afraid to trust any one, so that he kept his property in an inactive state, which did not require the intervention of managers and agents.

Guesses as to the value of Lebaudy's fortune have ranged from $3,000,000 to $20,000,000. The fortune of Max Lebaudy, the French "Sugar King," and father of Jacques, was said to have been $80,000,000, of which Jacques inherited about one-fourth. On his brother's death he received a considerable legacy, and in 1917 he inherited another large fortune on his mother's death.

Mother Had $9,500,000 Estate.

The total value of the estate of the mother is not known, but the property owned by her in this country was among the largest in possession of any foreigner. Her estate last Fall paid to a New York Internal Revenue office a tax of more than $1,000,000. There was considerable speculation at the time as to the identity of the non-resident whose fortune in this country had been so large, and it was generally supposed that the estate in question was that of the late James Gordon Bennett, but this was denied. It has since been learned that the securities and other property left by Mrs. Lebaudy in this country were appraised at $9,500,000.

H. W. Moore, counsel for Mrs. Lebaudy, said yesterday that he had no reliable information on which to base an estimate of the value of the Lebaudy estate, and he said there was evidence that Jacques had hidden the papers relating to it in several cities. He said that Jacques had a brother and sister in France, but that the indications were that there would be no legal contest over the estate.

phone companies and to carry the Western Union through troublous times and in addition with a view to consolidating all the telegraph and telephone companies and possibly cable lines into one huge monopoly. Everything indicates that this is the general plan toward which all these parties are working, namely, Mr. Burleson, the Bell Telephone, the Western Union, Mr. Vail, and Mr. Carlton.

"The idea that a great consolidation of telegraphs, telephones, cables, and the wiping out of competition and the grant of subsidies for new cables will confer great benefits upon the American public, is put forward to deceive. Such a combination would impose a hardship upon the public without giving it a single advantage it does not enjoy today. It might be called a hobby of Mr. Vail if it were not for the fact that back of it is the definite intent to set up a monopoly for the benefit of his companies."

Many questions were asked Mr. Reynolds about the contention of the Post Office Department that it had tried unsuccessfully to ascertain a true valuation of the Mackay companies, but has been unable to do so because of the companies' conflicting figures. Mr. Reynolds explained that the Mackay companies was a holding company for thirty-nine small organizations which had nominal capital.

"Didn't your companies make sworn statement to the Interstate Commerce Commission that the value was $6,647,-000?" asked Judge Moon.

"No, on the equity the small companies held in the value of the larger one," was the answer.

"Don't you know you swore unequivocably to that regardless of its equity," perslated the Chairman, who repeated his question many times, while Mr. Reynolds reiterated that the value of the Mackay companies was difficult to ascertain because of intangible assets added to the value of the small companies.

"We declined to accept the award of $1,680 000 from the Postmaster General, because last year we made $4,269,000," said the witness. "And the valuation of $28,000 000 he put on our property was guesswork. He sent a man to examine our books, but not the physical value of our property. I think they agreed what to allow us, and simply worked back to that."

Mr. Reynolds was preceded by Charles E. Ellquist, a former Minnesota State Commissioner, and F. W. Putnam, a present member of the Minnesota Commission. Both of these men insisted that the wire systems should be returned to private control. When Representative Ramseyer of Iowa asked the two men what they would recommend in the way of legislation in the event the control period was extended, both earnestly urged that the police powers and right of regulating interstate rates should be left to the State Commissions.

"You must have local authority who can ascertain the facts and which the public can reach without coming to Washington," said Mr. Putnam.

"Oh, you're a Commissioner, and you want to hold your authority," said Judge Moon.

"I don't want the witness insulted," said Mr. Steenerson.

"We have a right to bring out the facts," said Judge Moon. "I will not be deterred from the assumption that a State Commissioner wants to hold his job."

Mr. Putnam said the Postmaster General's new telephone rate schedule would cost the Minnesota public not less than 20 per cent., and in some cases up to 40 per cent., above the present rates.

During the testimony, Judge Lamar presented the following table of compensations allowed to telephone and telegraph companies by the Government:

	Telephone Companies.	All Companies.

SOUTH DAKOTA PROTESTS.

State Senate Demands Return of Roads and Other Utilities.

Special to The New York Times.

PIERRE, S. D., Jan. 21.—The South Dakota Senate has adopted a resolution condemning Government ownership of railroads and other, corporations and asking the Government "to take immediate steps to restore to private control the great public service corporations before they become further entrenched under the guise of Government control by an increase in rates that will be impossible to reduce to a normal standard."

The anti-ownership resolution followed the arrival of three attorneys in Pierre in a private car to fight for an increased express rate.

ARREST 23 IN ROUNDUP.

While the police were making a vigorous roundup of suspected criminals of all classes yesterday in an effort to check increasing reports of crime, evidence was obtained which strengthens the theory that Patrick O'Donnell was guilty of the murder of Mary Elizabeth Riddell at Richmond Hill, as he confessed himself to be.

A blow at the alibi claimed for O'Donnell by his family was struck by Patrick Flood, a medical student, who on the night of the murder was tending bar in his father's saloon at Lexington Avenue and Twenty-fifth Street, Manhattan. While the family of O'Donnell asserted that the man was at work at the factory of the Waterman Fountain Pen Company at Glen Morris until after 8 o'clock on the night of the crime, Flood said that he was positive that he had sold a glass of beer to O'Donnell at 7:15 o'clock that night. The murder at Richmond Hill occurred at 6:30, so that O'Donnell would have had time to cover the distance from Richmond Hill to the saloon. Flood stated that on buying the glass of beer O'Donnell remarked that he was just recovering from an attack of epilepsy.

Following the instructions of Police Commissioner Enright, who had called a hunt for suspicious characters, twenty-three men accused of taking part in recent hold-ups and burglaries were taken to Police Headquarters yesterday. Men who have been held up recently will be asked to be present at Police Headquarters to look over the lineup of suspects. Commissioner Enright has sent out a number of aggressive policemen and detectives with a commission to pick up dangerous characters, and it is understood that an organization resembling the old "Strong Arm Squad," the one headed by Lieutenant Charles Becker, who was executed for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, will be brought into existence.

WILL ASK COURTS TO ANNUL PHONE RATE

New Jersey until April 20 unless that board previous to that date should approve of the changes.

Mr. Barber declares the new rates are "unlawful, illegal, and extortionate," and that only the rates legally effective in New Jersey are those which were in effect yesterday and which were filed with the Public Utility Commission.

NEW YORK SUBURBAN TELEPHONE RATES CUT

Schedules of the new telephone rates promulgated by Postmaster General Burleson on Dec. 14 were obtainied yesterday from an official of the New York Telephone Company. They disclose that under the new method of computing charges on an airline basis of 4½ mills a mile New York's suburban tolls will be cut substantially. Another effect locally will be to include Hoboken and Jersey City in the 5-cent zone, although the new charges will not increase or decrease the present tolls on calls within New York City.

Although it had been expected from the official announcement that great saving would result to business men through the airline computation on long distance calls, the schedule obtained yesterday disclosed that of about sixty specimen cities scattered throughout the country fully 50 per cent. will still continue to pay the old rate and several, notably Washington, D. C., with a boost of 15 cents per call, will find that telephonic communication with New York must cost more. Sharp decreases, however, were made in calls between here and great industrial centres, some of the cheaper rates applying to Akron, Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago, and Philadelphia. For some reason, not explained yesterday, the rates between New York and Boston and New York and Albany, points of heavy traffic, were not decreased.

Another puzzling thing about the new schedule, as was pointed out yesterday, is the fact that special partiality has been shown in making long-distance rates to and from "zones" outside the business districts in New York. The lowest rates of all are given to Manhattan, Zone No. 1, which is made up entirely of exchanges in the residential parts of the city. While cuts were ordered in Manhattan, Zone No. 2, the business exchanges of New York, the rates that were made for long-distance business are still higher than the new rates applied to the "social exchanges," as they are termed.

The following table of long distance points indicates how the new system works out:

LONG DISTANCE.

From a total of seventy-two rates available, the following were selected to show how the new charges affect suburban calls: Manhattan, Zone 1, to Bayonne, N. J., 10 cents as against 15 cents; Manhattan, Zone 2, to Asbury Park, N. J., 30 cents as against 40 cents; Manhattan, Zone 1, to Montclair, 15 cents as against 20 cents. Calls from Manhattan, Zone 1, to Glen Cove, L. I., cut from 25 cents to 20 cents; to Port Washington, from 20 cents to 15 cents; to Long Beach from 25 cents to 20 cents. Connections to points in Westchester and Connecticut average about 10 cents less than the former rate.

THIRTEEN STATES PROTEST.

Service Commissions Contend for Private Control.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Protests from a dozen State Public Service Commissions against the Administration measure extending Government wire control were presented today to the House Post Office Committee.

"Better and cheaper service will result from private management under efficient State commissions than under the present control," declared Charles E. Elmquist, representing the National Association of Railway and Utilities Commissions, in offering the protests.

Opposition to the legislation was expressed in telegrams from the commissions of Maine, Rhode Island, Illinois, Indiana, New York, Mississippi, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Oregon, Nevada, Tennessee, and Michigan. The North Dakota commission favored merger of wires under Government control, but suggested that States retain police powers over the utilities.

"No injury will result to the public interest if the companies are turned back to private operation immediately," Mr. Elmquist said, adding that Government control with dividends guaranteed during the readjustment period would be favored by the companies. He denied that the opposition of the commissions was due to curtailment of their powers by Government operation.

READY TO RATIFY PROHIBITION HERE

State Senate and Assembly Committees May Act Favorably on Resolution Today.

GIVE WARNING AT HEARING

"Wets" Assert Absolute Prohibition Is a Grave Menace to the Nation.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 21.—Lacking much of last year's interest, and in a totally different atmosphere, opponents of ratification by the New York State Legislature of the Federal Prohibition Amendment conducted their last fight this afternoon before joint legislative committees in a packed Assembly Chamber.

The Republicans, it became known tonight, are to make the ratification resolution a party measure, and New York State, perhaps before another week, will have joined the "Dry" column of States which already have put the national ban on alcoholics. Prior to the hearing this afternoon twenty of the twenty-nine Republican members of the Senate signed a caucus call for Monday night, which will mean backing of the Thompson-McNab resolution. A sufficient number of Democrats will aid in making up the necessary twenty-six votes.

The Senate Committee on Taxation voted tonight to report favorably tomorrow the "Dry" amendment. The committee as a matter of courtesy will listen for an hour to Lemuel E. Quigg, counsel for the hotel men, and will then report to the Senate in favor of the adoption of the resolution declaring for the ratification of the Federal amendment.

The Assembly Judiciary Committee tomorrow morning will vote the measure out, according to plans tonight, after hearing Quigg in the interests of the "Wets." There are more than enough votes in the lower house to assure passage of the resolution.

Warning that the Russian revolution may be repeated here after the country goes "dry" was sounded by Emmanuel Coveleski, of Rochester, Vice President of the New York State Federation of Labor. He predicted that brewery workers in numbers would be walking the streets, and added: "Be careful that the Russian revolution doesn't happen in New York State."

This warning was practically repeated by John E. Bowman of New York, head of the hotel interests, who declared that the Anti-Saloon League started in bloodshed and would end "God only knows how."

"You can turn the country upside down," he said, "and break New York State, but you can't stop people from drinking." He declared that the problem was not one of business so much as it was one of personal liberty.

Prohibitionists denounced the methods of the "Wets" and said their opponents had attempted to wave the red flag.

"We have had a statement here today which sounded much like waving the red flag," declared Mrs. Ella A. Boole, President of the New York State Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

We were told that if we had ratification there would be a rebellion against law. We are Americans and we do not think these statements represent the opinion of the rank and file of organized labor in this country."

Beside Mrs. Boole, Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League; Mrs. Ida B. Sammis, member of the Assembly, and William H. Anderson, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, spoke for the Prohibitionists.

William R. Hirst, counsel for the brewers; Everett P. Wheeler, New York lawyer; John McE. Bowman, hotel man, and his counsel, Mr. Quigg; D. C. Gibboney, representing the Law and Order League of Philadelphia, and Assemblyman Peter G. McElligott of New York spoke in favor of the resolution.

Maurice Leon, a New York lawyer, spoke in favor of permitting the use of light wines. He declared that ratification would mean a blow to the wine-producing regions of France and deny them power of rehabilitation.

James P. Holland, President of the New York State Federation of Labor declared in favor of a referendum of the liquor question to the people and said that such action was favored by labor.

D. C. Gibboney, representing the Law and Order League of Philadelphia, and Assemblyman Peter G. McElligott of New York also spoke in favor of a referendum.

Mrs. Sammis, Member of Assembly, was the first speaker for the "Drys."

"We insist on the ousting of this everlasting foe of the home, of the State, of democracy itself," she declared. She characterized appeals of opponents of ratification as "disloyal and un-American."

Others who spoke for ratification included O. R. Miller, Civic League; James Empringham of the Episcopal Church Temperance Society, Miss Elizabeth Collier of the Republican Committee of Kings County, Mrs. Eva Sherwood Potter of the Woman Suffrage Party of Kings County, William H. Burr, State Chairman of the Prohibition Party; Mrs. Robert T. Oliver of the Woman Suffrage Party of New York County, and Dr. C. B. Skinner of Erie.

FARLEY HEADS DEMOCRATS.

Former Foe of Murphy Is Chosen Chairman of State Committee.

SYRACUSE, Jan. 21.—Former State Excise Commissioner William W. Farley of Binghamton and Albany, once foe of Charles F. Murphy, was today unanimously elected Chairman of the Democratic State Committee to succeed Judge J. Augustus Kellogg of Glens Falls, who resigned after being appointed counsel to Governor Smith.

Farley says he intends to organize the up-State democracy along the lines followed by Samuel J. Tilden.

In his speech of acceptance Chairman Farley said he is heartily in sympathy with the policies of President Wilson and Governor Smith. He favors curbing the money power and progress along practical lines of reform.

None of the prominent members of the committee from New York, Brooklyn, and Queens attended the meeting. It was a gathering of the up-Staters, among the prominent leaders being William H. Fitzpatrick of Erie, Charles F. Rattigan of Cayuga, Gerald Flubrer of Orleans, John Pallace and James A. Leary of Rochester, Mayor James D. Smith of Utica, James J. Nolan of Albany, Charles E. Norris of Carthage, George R. Van Amee of Jefferson, Frank Purcell of Steuben, Dr. John W. Gurnett of Schuyler, Frank S. Disney of Chemung, and Frank Sweet of Livingston.

W. Paige Hitchcock of Syracuse, after the members of the committee were called to order in the Hotel Onondaga by Secretary Van Amee, proposed Mr. Farley for Chairman.

Governor at City Hall on Saturday.

ALBANY, Jan. 21.—Governor Smith will hold another Governor's day at the New York City Hall next Saturday morning. He will leave Albany Friday afternoon and probably will return some time Sunday. He hopes to be able to have a Governor's day at Buffalo on Feb. 1.

RETAILERS PROTEST AGAINST LUXURY TAX

Franklin Simon Tells Association That It Would Hamper Industry.

MESSAGE TO WASHINGTON

Resolution Says Tax in Its Present Form Is "Impractical and Impossible of Just Collection."

At the annual convention of the National Garment Retailers' Association, held yesterday at the Waldorf-Astoria, the so-called luxury tax provision of the pending revenue bill was discussed and condemned and a telegram protesting against its retention in the bill, at least in its present form, was sent to the Chairman of the House Conference Committee. In his opening address to the convention the President, Franklin Simon, said:

"Before the conclusion of the war this association, at the solicitation of the Treasury Department, submitted a plan, in case the bill became a law, which would make the collection of the tax as little burdensome to the retail merchants as possible. With the signing of the armistice, however, the luxury tax looked a bit different. While we would not, as an organization, oppose any legislation which might help the successful conclusion of the war, yet, with the war over, we were of the opinion that a luxury tax would be economically unsound and fundamentally wrong. We believe that our efforts today should be to encourage production so that returning soldiers and sailors may readily find places of employment.

"The passing of a luxury tax, I am afraid, will hamper industry. In cooperation with the War Service Committee of Department Store and Dry Goods Interests, we expressed our opposition to the luxury tax to the Senate Finance Committee, and, as you know, when the bill left the committee the luxury tax had been eliminated. The Senate, however, to the surprise of nearly everybody, restored the tax to the bill in amended form. Though the percentage of tax was cut in half by the Senate, and coats, suits, dresses, and millinery were exempted, there are many lines of merchandise carried by most merchants that will be affected by the provision as it stands.

"Merchants know that a luxury tax will mean a great mass of needless detail to the store, necessitating the employment of extra help to see that the law is properly obeyed. Such a tax, if imposed, may react on our sales. It is not the amount of money involved that led us to oppose this method of taxation, for all the members of the association are more than willing to pay their share of the war debt. It is merely the method of taxation and the great burden of detail it means to which we object. But it looks as though a luxury tax, in some form, will be in the bill when it becomes a law. The Conference Committee, it appears, has agreed to the provision as it passed the Senate. It is for this convention to determine what further steps in opposition to the measure it desires to take, if any."

A motion was carried to appoint a special committee to recommend what further action should be taken, and the committee recommended that the following telegram be sent to Congressman Claude Kitchin, Chairman of the House Conference Committee:

The National Garment Retailers' Association, in convention assembled this day at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York City, has unanimously passed a resolution protesting against the luxury tax in its present form as being impractical and impossible of just collection, creating a great hardship on all merchants and an expense in excess of the tax to be collected. It is the intention and desire of our organization to support and assist the Government in the collection of war taxes in every possible way. The contemplated tax in its present form is impossible of correct interpretation. We recommend this resolution to your favorable consideration.

NATIONAL GARMENT RETAILERS' ASSOCIATION.

Congressman Julius Kahn of California, who was the principal speaker at the association's dinner last night, was asked, at the Waldorf yesterday afternoon, what he thought of the action taken by the convention and whether or not he was in favor of a luxury tax. Congressman Kahn said:

"The language of the telegram is plain and unmistakable. I wish that the language of the entire Revenue bill could be made as plain. The dispatch says that the provision of the bill is 'impractical and impossible of just collection.' That is the opinion of successful and hardheaded business men, who will have much to do with seeing that the tax is collected. If their statement be true, and I see no need to question it, then their lawyers ought to go to Washington to confer with the Conference Committee and with the Treasury Department to try to arrive at a agreement on a wording of this provision of the bill which will insure its practicability and make certain its just collection.

"Now as to whether I am in favor of a luxury tax in any form. I answer that I am. Only those who have the means may purchase luxuries, and the presumption is, therefore, that they will be able to pay a luxury tax without feeling the burden to be more than they are able to bear. If some such tax as this were not carried in the bill, it would mean simply that others, less able to pay taxes at all, would have their revenue taxes increased, for our war bill must be paid. We have an enormous principal to pay and an enormous interest charge until the principal is paid. Then, too, there must be set aside a goodly amount for the sinking fund.

"Our people must not imagine that the war is quite over until its cost has been wiped out. And it will take the sustained patriotism of us all to bear cheerfully the burdens of war taxation. It will take almost as much patriotism to bear these burdens in the true spirit of Americans as it required successfully to prosecute our part in the war. It is a situation for every taxpayer to face, and face manfully, and in the true American fashion.

"But, if I am in favor of the levying of a luxury tax, I am utterly opposed to the Federal prohibition amendment and the consequent loss of revenue that will result. If ever there was a time when we needed all the revenue we can get it is now. Besides, in my opinion, Constitutional prohibition will not prohibit. Take the State of Maine, for example. They have had prohibition there for seventy years. Yet it is not only possible to obtain liquor in that State but there is plenty of evidence of plenty of intoxication there."

Besides Mr. Simon, the convention listened to addresses on "The Woolen Market," by A. L. Gifford of the Worumbo Company; on "The Dyestuff Situation," by Dr. Louis J. Matos of the National Aniline and Chemical Company; on "The Relation of the Garment Buyer and Seller," by I. M. Getskay of Getskay & Dann; on "The Re-employment of Soldiers and Sailors," by Percy S. Straus of R. H. Macy & Co., and on "Can the Self-Serve Principle Be Applied to Garments?" by John Mench of the Duffy-Powers Company of Rochester.

To Pay Britain for Carrying Troops.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The United States will pay the British Government actual cost for the transportation of American soldiers overseas in British vessels. Colonel Battison of the Army Embarkation Bureau told the House Military Committee today that General Hines, head of the bureau, would start for London in a few days to determine the amount. Complaints of food on British ships, Colonel Battison said, were largely due to the British practice of serving only tea for breakfast, which was changed because American soldiers objected.

15 Reasons

Why First Mortgages Guaranteed by This Company Are the Best Investment for Prudent People.

16

If the war has taught anything about investments it has taught the great merit of guaranteed mortgages.

Institutions have seen the quotations on their stocks and bonds go down so much that if they needed money the last thing they wished to do was to sell these securities and incur the heavy losses involved.

They have turned to their mortgages and, of course, have not collected all that they asked for, but have got more from that source than from any other, and what they have received they have received at par.

It is not reasonable to expect mortgages to bear the double burden of payment in full and payment immediately, but they have met in hundreds of cases even this double demand and have come out of this crisis with much better reputation than stocks and bonds which could not be collected without loss and quite often could not be realized upon at all.

No investor has ever lost a dollar.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is better than some expensive soaps or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

GOT ORDER TO FIGHT, AFTER PEACE CANARD

TOLD TO TAKE HILL 182

Recounts Valor of Companies H and I in Taking St. Juvin and Repelling Germans.

Major Archibald G. Thacher of the 306th Infantry, who spoke last night at the Washington Irving High School before the auxiliary composed of relatives and friends of that regiment, said that one of the hardest assignments received by the regiment had come just a few hours after the officers and men had been excited by a premature report that the armistice had been signed and that the war was over.

"Just as we were preparing to celebrate the victory and end of the war," he said, "word came at midnight that we were to attack and capture Hill 182 in front of us on the Argonne front on the following morning, and we were given to understand that no explanation would be accepted for failure.

"After three or four hours of sleep the attack was started, and seven companies advanced to make a frontal attack on the town of Saint Juvin. As we approached in a final attack it was seen by our commanding officers that the plan of attack was inadvisable and that the proper way to 'crack' the town was to make flank attacks. The plan was hastily recast. Company H, commanded by Captain Julius O. Adler, supported by Company I, was detailed to make a flank attack. This they did with great success, not only capturing the town, but taking more prisoners than the strength of the attacking company. Captain Adler received a citation for this feat. Later we were able to take Hill 182. The Germans, after a furious artillery fire, counter-attacked, but were unable to regain a footing in the territory we had won.

Major Thacher said that, after the arrival of the regiment in France, the officers had been sent to the front to be trained, so that none of them would have to undergo their baptism of fire before the eyes of their men.

"The only way in which a man can obtain absolute self-control under fire is by experience," he said, "and absolute self-control on the part of officers in the presence of their men is essential, because if an officer falters for a fraction of a second the faith of his men is shattered. Therefore, it was thought necessary to train officers thoroughly in danger zones, and those who were killed during this period were sacrificed for the purpose of insuring the self-control and resoluteness of the survivors.

"After a period in the Marne sector, we were shifted to the River Vesle, where our men distinguished themselves for unusual bravery and calmness under fire. It was an ordinary occurrence in our regiment to find officers going into No Man's Land to bring back a private who had been lying helpless after being struck by enemy bullets. One of the most beloved officers in the regiment was Lieutenant Hayes. During the struggle through the Argonne Forest, he was constantly in the lead of his men, searching for the safest spots to shelter them when they should come up."

HEARS CASE FOR RAILWAY.

Service Board Investigates Position of New York Company.

Testifying yesterday before the Public Service Commission, Thomas M. Fazakerley, President of the New York Railways Company Brotherhood, said that serious labor troubles on the city's railroads might follow the appointment of a receiver for the company. Heretofore, he explained, the brotherhood had always been able to confer amiably with the officials of the company. Last May, when more pay was sought by the employes, a tie-up of the lines, said the witness, was only prevented by Oscar S. Straus, then Chairman of the Public Service Commission, who succeeded in smoothing out the trouble by asking the workers not to disrupt the service during the war period.

F. T. Wood, assistant to Frank Hedley, Vice President and General Manager of the company, admitted that the company was not giving adequate service and submitted data showing that estimates made for the fiscal year ending July 31 next were made on the assumption that the service was to be improved. He told the commission that the receipts of the company for December, 1918, were greater than for the same period in 1917, and explained this by saying that there had been no interruption of service because of snow storms. He said that the company's maintenance fund was exhausted.

The report of the New York Railways Company for November, 1918, shows a decrease in gross operating income of $95,271, the figure being $909,152, as compared with $998,423 in November, 1917. In the month operating expenses increased $58,738 and taxes increased $35,312, while income from operation dropped $189,321. After the payment of interest on underlying bonds, rentals, &c., there was a deficit of $108,850, as compared with a balance of $79,932 in the preceding year.

RELATIVES GET $5,000,000.

Nathaniel Whitman, Bachelor, Made Fortune in Dress Goods.

Nathaniel Whitman, who died on Jan. 8 at the Hotel Plaza, Manhattan, has left an estate valued at more than $5,000,000 which is to be divided among his relatives. Mr. Whitman was a bachelor, and for sixty-seven years was a member of the firm of Lesher, Whitman & Co., dealers in dress goods and linings at Broadway and Nineteenth Street, Manhattan. The will has not as yet been probated, but from the Whitman heirs it was learned last night that the estate, which consists of real and personal property, is to be divided among Mrs. William Withey and Mrs. F. R. Baldwin of Green Avenue, Brooklyn; Mrs. Emma M. Colfax, of Virginia, nieces; Mortimer Whitman, Sr., of 163 Twenty-fifth Street, Elmhurst, a nephew; Mortimer Whitman, Jr., also of Twenty-fifth Street, Elmhurst, a grand nephew, and his two children, Nathaniel and Ethel Whitman.

It is said that the will has been read to the survtving heirs, and that Mrs. Colfax, Mrs. Withey, Mrs. Baldwin, and Mortimer Whitman, Sr., are each to receive $1,000,000 in trust, besides considerable cash; that Mortimer Whitman, Jr., is to receive $300,000 in trust, and that his two children each will receive $133,000. Before her marriage to Mortimer Whitman, Jr., Mrs. Whitman was a clerk in the Bayside Branch of the Flushing Post Office. They now occupy a small apartment in the Jackson Heights section of Elmhurst, where the elder Whitman and his wife are also living. Young Whitman is employed as a salesman by his granduncle's concern.

Bequests to Charity Uneffective.

Because William G. Kaufman survived his wife, Mrs. Nanette E. Kaufman, of 4 East Sixtieth Street, who died at Atlantic City last week, he will receive the entire estate, and bequests of $10,000 each to the Montefiore Home, the Home for Aged and Infirm Hebrews, the Presbyterian Hospital, the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children are not effective. Mrs. Kaufman left the estate to charity in case her husband died before her, or they both died "in the same casualty."

Schmittberger Left Only $8,232.

Application was made to Surrogate Cohalan yesterday by the heirs of the late Chief Inspector Max F. Schmittberger to exempt the estate from the payment of a transfer tax on the ground that the estate amounts to only $8,232, and consists of $5,000 insurance, cash, and Liberty Bonds, with expenses of $2,500 chargeable against the estate.

SEES BREAD LINE BY MAY 1.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Reports from twenty-one cities showing more than 185,000 men unemployed were submitted to the House Immigration Committee today by Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, in support of his contention that "there will be bread lines in every industrial centre before May 1." Mr. Morrison appeared in support of legislation to restrict immigration.

The reports submitted today were in addition to those from thirty cities given to the committee last Thursday by Mr. Morrison, and showed Detroit with 50,000 unemployed, Philadelphia with 10,000, Indianapolis, 8,000; Bridgeport, Conn., 15,000; Charleston, West Va., 3,500; Worcester, Mass., 12,000; San Francisco, 15,000; Tacoma, Wash., 2,500; Denver, 1,750; Great Falls, Mon., 1,000; Akron Ohio, 2,500; Schenectady, N. Y., 3,500 and Pittsburgh 10,000.

A report from Seattle, Wash., said it was impossible to give the approximate number of unemployed there, but that there were thousands, and that the number was increasing daily. The situation was becoming so menacing, it was stated, that Government intervention might soon be necessary.

Mr. Morrison read a letter from William H. Johnston, President of the International Association of Machinists, stating that the existing unrest among the laboring classes is being accentuated by employers who are increasing the number of hours a day the employes have to work and lowering wages. The letter also said that several companies working under awards of the War Labor Board have served notice that as far as they are concerned the war ended the day the armistice was signed and that the awards no longer were in effect. In this connection the Worthington Pump Company of Cudahy, Wis., and the Willys-Overland Company of Elyria, Ohio, were mentioned.

LANE EXTOLS ROOSEVELT.

Secretary Pays Tribute to Him in Indorsing $5,000 Pension.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—A tribute to Theodore Roosevelt by Secretary Lane was adopted by the House Pensions Committee today as a part of its favorable report on a bill, which already has passed the Senate, granting an annual pension of $5,000 to Mrs. Roosevelt. Secretary Lane wrote the committee that Congress had set precedents by granting pensions to the widows of Presidents Polk, Tyler, Lincoln, Grant, Garfield, and McKinley.

The committee, unanimously voting a favorable report, found that the Secretary's letter constituted "one of the most beautiful, fair, and just tributes" to Mr. Roosevelt's life and character. It follows:

"The impress that Theodore Roosevelt's personality has made upon the world does not need emphasis. Whatever his fame as a statesman, it can never outrun his fame as a man. However widely men may differ from him in matters of national policy, this thing men in their hearts would all wish, that their sons might have within them the spirit, the will, the strength, the manliness, the Americanism of Roosevelt. He was made of that rugged and heroic stuff with which legend delights to play. Idylls and Sagas and the Iliads have been woven about men of his mold. We may surely expect to see developed a Roosevelt legend, a body of tales that will exalt the physical power and endurance of the man and the boldness of his spirit, his robust capacity for blunt speech and his hearty comradeship, his live interest in all things living—these will make our boys for the long future proud that they are of his race and his country. And no surer fame than this can come to any man—to live in the hearts of the boys of his land as one whose doings and sayings they would wish to make their own."

ZIONISTS RAISE $400,000.

Third Day of Drive for $3,000,000 Brings In $120,000.

For the third day of the $3,000,000 drive of the Zionist Organization of America the committee announced receipts to the Palestine Restoration Fund of $120,000, bringing the total subscriptions to date up to about $400,000. The largest single subscription received yesterday was $46,000 from San Francisco, the next largest, $15,000, from Los Angeles. At the meeting of team captains in the afternoon it was announced that 1,000 merchants here had pledged 10 per cent. of one day's income to the fund, and that as the result of the campaign in New York $5,120 in cash and $28,000 in pledges had been received. The Women's Committee announced that Rosa Raisa had volunteered to give a concert in the Hippodrome for the fund.

Saturday will be Palestine Restoration Day, and Palestine, the Jewish homeland, and its needs will be the subject of many sermons. On Sunday Judge Julian W. Mack, President of the Zionist Organization, will give a dinner to 200 business and professional men in the Hotel Astor, at which a committee will be formed to assist the drive.

FAVOR TUNNEL TO JERSEY.

Legislative Leaders Confer with Commission on Vehicular Tube.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 21.—Members of the New York State Bridge and Tunnel Commission, who conferred today with legislative leaders regarding the proposal for the State to appropriate $6,000,000 toward a vehicular tunnel between New York and New Jersey, found the leaders in an attitude favorable to the project, it was stated tonight.

The leaders are prepared to support legislation to bring about the construction of the tunnel, it is understood, and the only question was said to be over the method of raising the funds. The cost of the tunnel has been estimated at $2,000,000. New Jersey has already appropriated half that amount.

SAYS THE DOUGHBOY IS AN AMBASSADOR

BUT HE WANTS TO GET HOME

Editor Learned That It Was Albert Ballin Who Suggested to the Kaiser That He Abdicate.

Fresh from a visit to the American Army of Occupation in the Coblenz area, Joe Mitchell Chapple, editor of the National Magazine, returned to the United States several days ago, and last night, at the Hotel Cumberland, related some of the episodes of his trip, which included a three weeks' tour of all the battlefields of the war on the western front from Liége to the Argonne.

While in Europe Mr. Chapple was informed that it was Albert Ballin of the Hamburg-American Line who made the suggestion to the Kaiser that he abdicate in order to save Germany. Ballin died soon after the armistice was signed, and the report that reached Mr. Chapple, but which he was unable to verify, was that Ballin had committed suicide after his interview with the Kaiser. But it was the American doughboy who interested Mr. Chapple most on his last trip to the front. Speaking of conditions in the Coblenz area, he said:

"You must know that there is no soldier like the American doughboy. That sounds trite, but I'll tell you why. The American soldier is just a naturalborn cavalier, a crusader. First of all he is a man in the full sense of the word and then he is a soldier. There is nothing servile about him. He makes himself at home wherever he is. No matter where I went in my various trips in the battle areas or in the area of occupation after the signing of the armistice, the most wonderful thing I found was the doughboy adapting himself to any situation he found himself in and fitting into it like a tree into a landscape.

"At Coblenz, where I spent Christmas Day, I found that the population fairly worshipped the Americans. Of course in the case of the adults there may have been something of propaganda in this, the desire to show that the Germans were not at bad as we found them to be during the hostilities. But this could not apply to the children, who trooped around the Americans with childish admiration, hanging on to them with great glee and indulging in their games.

"The problem in the area of occupation seems to be to keep the soldier a soldier. He is more of a wonder in times of peace with an army of occupation than in times of war with an army of battle. He is doing more to build up an understanding of the American character among the people of Europe than the diplomats can ever do. The doughboy is the real American ambassador to the nations of Europe. He sees a woman dragging a heavy load on the street and he just naturally walks over and lifts it from her shoulders.

"He is as unaffected in his simplicity in the streets of Coblenz or Paris as he is when at home in New York or Oshkosh. And he certainly wants to come home. When those boys in Coblenz heard that I had been in New York in December they crowded around me as if I were something of a curiosity. 'Say, bud,' I heard one say in an awestricken way, 'this guy was in New York a month ago.' These boys have been over there for eighteen months, and home sounds good to them.

"There was a real American celebration on Christmas eve. Great evergreen trees were set up in Coblenz, and on top of the Ehrenbreitstein fortress across the river. The trees were illuminated, and the populace turned out and sang Christmas songs. The doughboys sang the Battle Hymn of the Republic over and over again and it was thrilling.

"The Y. M. C. A. man at Coblenz was indispensable. He was first on the spot and ready for the soldiers when they arrived. He distributed a million cigarettes in a short time and quantities of chocolate.

"The German demobilized soldiers act as if they are dazed. They walk the streets doing nothing, although there is plenty of work to be done. They do not seem to realize that they were defeated. This sense of defeat seems to be slow in penetrating the German mind."

Mr. Chapple visited the grave of Quentin Roosevelt near Chambery. "Across a field of bleeding ground we walked to the grave where he had been buried by the Germans," said Mr. Chapple. "The site is marked by evergreen trees on the fringe of the hill where the young hero lies. The grave overlooks a landscape that seemed to me like the plains of Dakota. The grave was inclosed, and the blue cross of the Germans was between the crosses erected by the Americans with the simple plate and the more elaborated headmark by the French. Beside the Stars and Stripes is his identification disc. The spot where he fell is marked by flowers. There are the immortelles of the French and other flowers of American and other admirers.

"As I leaned over toward the grave I saw a tiny violet peeping up to the sky, catching the blue of the heavens. It seemed to me then that there the infinite and the finite touched. That violet was the most fitting emblem of the tragic fall, from the blue skies overhead in glory as true blue as the flag he served."

CALLS FOR $250,000 TO WELCOME TROOPS

Hylan Asks Aldermen to Authorize a Bond Issue, and His Plans Are Outlined.

BOARD ACCEPTS HEARST

Mayor Hylan asked the Board of Aldermen yesterday to authorize an issue of $250,000 in special revenue bonds to provide for a welcome for homecoming soldiers and sailors. The request was made a special order for next Tuesday's meeting. It would have been granted at the meeting yesterday but for the objection of Alderman Squiers of Brooklyn and the Socialist delegation in the board. The Mayor's request was made the subject of a special message, presented to the board by Grover Whalen, the Mayor's Secretary. Mr. Whalen explained the plan of welcome and how the appropriation was to be spent.

The cost of decorations, according to Mr. Whalen, will be $125,000; the illumination $25,000, and the entertainment of troops $100,000. The whole expenses of welcoming the troops will be in the neighborhood of $300,000. Private subscriptions, he said, would fill out the fund.

New York, according to Mr. Whalen, is to be a great blaze of color when the troops are welcomed. The City Hall will be decorated, as will the Washington and Victory Arches, the Public Library and other public buildings. Fifth Avenue will be gay with bunting and flags by day and with lights at night. Mr. Whalen showed the Aldermen drawings of the proposed plans of decoration. The officers of the troops, he said, would be received at the City Hall. Troops will line the plaza and the guard of honor will be men in Colonial uniforms.

A reviewing stand to cost $15,000, Mr. Whalen said, would be put up at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street. As a measure of economy the lumber used in the stand will be stored after the parade for use on some other occasion. In the past, Mr. Whalen explained, stands in all cost the city about $60,000.

The program of entertainment as outlined includes dinners to be served in the armories. To feed the 60,000 men in the two New York divisions which are to be welcomed the estimated cost is $300,000. Mr. Whalen said that there was available for this $100,000, and private subscriptions were counted on to make up the deficit. The Mayor's Committee, Mr. Whalen said, had already welcomed 103,000 troops who have arrived at this port.

The Board of Aldermen accepted the selection of William Randolph Hearst as a member of the committee to welcome troops when the Democratic majority adopted a report rejecting a resolution offered by Alderman Squiers, Republican, of Brooklyn, and accepting one offered by Alderman Collins last week. The Squiers resolution called for the repudiation of "every truckler with our country's enemies who strives, or has striven, to extenuate or excuse such crimes against humanity as the rape of Belgium, the sinking of the Lusitania, and the German policy of assassination by submarines." It also repudiated any one who would sow dissension among the Allies or "who now seeks to capitalize his appointment to membership on any committee appointed by the Mayor or other public official to welcome our homecoming heroes."

The resolution introduced by Alderman Collins called on "all good citizens, irrespective of personal prejudice or political bias, to join in an enthusiastic official welcome on the part of and in a manner befitting this America's chief city to our heroes on their return to the land they so valiantly and victoriously served."

The resolution also deplored any situation that would give rise "to an imputation that there is any division among the people of our city in the strength of their patriotic fervor, or that political or other prejudice or narrow-mindedness or frenzy of politics would cause an organized, persistent and studied effort in an attack upon any individual member of the committee to the extent of embarrassing the official representative of our city and interfering with a whole-souled welcome to our brave boys and tend to the degrading of the nobility of our spirit of patriotism in this America's hour of victory."

Report of the Committee.

In its report to the board the General Welfare Committee, in rejecting the Squiers resolution, said:

"The plain purpose of this resolution is to censure the chief executive of this city for having appointed as a member of the committee to arrange for a fitting welcome to our homecoming soldiers a newspaper publisher who has, by his vigorous support of measures in the interest of the people, incurred the enmity of jealous rivals and certain political and social elements in this city, and who is sincerely and earnestly upholding the hands of President Wilson in the arduous and overwhelming responsibilities now resting on his shoulders.

"It seems a great pity that the welcome to be extended to our gallant heroes who have been the determining factor in the great struggle for a safe democracy throughout the world should be made the occasion for any display of discord or partisanship or that any attempt should be made to discredit the Mayor of this city or to cast any aspersion on his patriotic devotion to our country and its heroic defenders in the hour of peril."

In conclusion, in favoring the Collins resolution, the committee said:

"Your committee is of the opinion that it is the duty of the Board of Aldermen, representing the City of New York, irrespective of political or other conviction, to support the Chief Magistrate of this city, their city, the city of the constituency they represent, in extending a welcome and participating in a celebration of a character suitable to our returning heroes, and have therefore reported favorably the resolution introduced by Alderman Collins as fittingly expressing that thought, and recommends the filing of this resolution."

B. Charney Vladeck, the Socialist member of the General Welfare Committee, brought in a minority report. The Socialists opposed both the Collins and the Squiers resolutions. In opposing the Collins resolution Mr. Vladeck referred to Mr. Hearst as one of "the evils of the country." The Collins resolution was adopted by a vote of 41 to 14.

Leo Ornstein writes of The Ampico

The Ampico Reproduces The Great Artists

Gentlemen:-

In the full realization that in the Ampico I am leaving a permanent record of my playing, I feel impelled to say that the Ampico is without a peer. Its reproduction vitalizes—it fills piano playing with the life-throb and so contains the spirit of the artist that the rendition is electrifying.

To my mind, no great artist can honestly proclaim the playing of any instrument as comparable to that of the Ampico, unless he has missed hearing it.

The Comparison Recitals, in which I have participated, and those to which I have been simply an auditor, stand as monumental and incontrovertible evidence. It has demonstrated its supremacy.

To William Knabe & Co.
December 10th, 1918

Leo Ornstein

As to Comparison Recitals

IN the several years that the Ampico Reproducing Piano has been before the public, numerous Comparison Recitals have been given, so that the perfection of the Ampico might be tested and proven in actual performance. These recitals have been given from New York to the Coast, and as far South as New Orleans, in collaboration with such Artists and Orchestras as

LEOPOLD GODOWSKY — GEORGE COPELAND — LEO ORNSTEIN
RICHARD BUHLIG — MARGUERITE VOLAVY — VICTOR WITTGENSTEIN
METROPOLITAN OPERA ORCHESTRA — RIALTO-RIVOLI ORCHESTRA

WE have called these demonstrations "Comparison Recitals" advisedly, as in every recital the audience has had the opportunity to make a direct comparison between the playing of the artist and the Ampico's reproduction. Here, the pianist, whose art was being reproduced, played a selection personally. The Ampico then repeated the same composition for direct comparison.

The Direct Comparison is the Only Genuine Test

OTHER concerts have been given in which carefully rehearsed orchestras have played with a piano operated by a music roll, or have played before an audience when the artist was absent. These, while interesting demonstrations of the progress of mechanical efficiency, are not comparisons. The only true comparison is that in which the artist's playing may be directly compared with the reproduction.

HEYDLER WILL HOLD HEARING FOR CHASE

Charges Alleging Gambling on Ball Games Will Be Taken Up on Jan. 30.

McGRAW IS A WITNESS

First Baseman of Reds Is Confident He Will Be Cleared and Will Play with Some Other Club.

President John A. Heydler of the National League will hold a hearing on the charges against Hal Chase, the Cincinnati first baseman, at National League headquarters Thursday, Jan. 30. The hearing was to have been held today, but on the suggestion of Chase's attorney, it was put over.

Last Summer Manager Mathewson, of the Cincinnati Club, suspended Chase indefinitely just after a series at the Polo Grounds. While the charges against Chase have never been publicly announced, Mathewson said at the time that it had something to do with Chase's alleged practice of betting on baseball games. Pitcher Pol Perritt of the Giants is one of the leading witnesses against Chase and so is Manager McGraw. These two witnesses will be at the hearing next week.

Chase vigorously denied that he was implicated in any questionable betting scheme and has brought suit against the Cincinnati Club to recover his salary from the time he was suspended until the end of the season. This suit is now pending. Chase will be represented by counsel, and President Heydler proposes to give Chase every chance to clear himself of the charges.

It is many years since any player has been accused of openly betting on ball games and all men connected with the game are anxious to see the present case settled one way or another. If such practice as Chase is charged with has been going on in the game it is the intention of every one connected with the national pastime to put an end to it.

Chase has told his friends that there is no doubt that he will be cleared of the charges, as he says Manager Mathewson's suspicions were entirely groundless. There must be absolutely unquestionable proof against Chase in order to bar him from the game.

Chase is now one of the oldest ball players in the major leagues in continuous service. He came from St. Mary's College on the Pacific Coast to the Yankees in 1905 after playing a season with the Los Angeles Club. Chase was a sensational performer from the start and in the early days of the American League on the hilltop park at 168th Street and Broadway he developed into the cleverest first baseman in the major leagues. Chase had his troubles with the Yankee players and there were times when there was lack of harmony in the club.

Chase jumped the Yanks in 1908 and played with an outlaw league on the coast. He was barred from organized baseball, but in the Spring of 1909 he was reinstated by the National Commission and again played with the Yanks. During the Farrell régime Chase was manager of the Yanks for one season, but there was much dissension while he was in charge. Chase was one of the many players who jumped to the Federal League, and when that outlaw organization went out of business Chase was bought by the Cincinnati Club. During his first season in the National League he led the circuit in batting.

There has been much speculation about what will become of Chase if President Heydler exonerates him of the charges brought by Manager Mathewson. It has been rumored that Manager McGraw would sign him for the Giants if his differences with Cincinnati are adjusted. President Herrmann says that Chase will never play with the Cincinnati Club again.

All the club owners of all the leagues in baseball, major and minor organizations, have sent appeals to Congressmen and Senators asking their co-operation for a reconsideration of the 20 per cent. tax which is proposed for amusements. The major leagues have asked for a hearing on the subject, and if it is granted President Johnson and President Heydler will appear before the Senate Committee. Baseball men fear that if the war tax now in effect is doubled it will have a serious effect on the attendance next Summer.

George Gibson, who has been coach of the Giants for the last few seasons, has been offered the position of manager of the Toronto club of the International League. Gibson's place on the Giants will be taken next Summer by Pat Moran, formerly Manager of the Phillies. If the major league clubs will waive claim to Gibson's services he will take the Toronto job. The New York club is willing to let Gibson go.

Manager Huggins of the Yankees doubted yesterday the report that Frank Baker had signed to play with the Delaware County League next season. The Yankee Manager talked with the third baseman at his home in Trappe a few weeks ago and at that time Baker promised to let him know if he decided to take any definite action about his plans for next season. If Baker does refuse to return to the Yankees Huggins is ready to place Bill Fewster at third base.

Slim Sallee, the Giant southpaw who assumes the architectural lines of a bamboo fishpole, has announced that he will play baseball no more. He says he is going to buy a farm in Kentucky and raise tobacco for a living. This bit of news from Sallee is taken by the knowing ones as an indication that the pitcher is a "hold-out," and that he must hear pleasant news in regard to his contract for next season before he dispels the tobacco-raising idea from his mind.

COLUMBIA DROPS HOCKEY.

Team Can Find No Facilities for Practice.

Important decisions as to hockey, swimming and wrestling at Columbia University during the present season were announced yesterday. It was decided by the athletic authorities that it would be impossible to maintain a hockey team, so all activity in that sport will be suspended for a year. In wrestling a short schedule will be formed in the absence of an intercollegiate league schedule, and in swimming there will be meets with all the teams in the Intercollegiate Swimming Association, and in addition with Amherst and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The decision to abandon hockey was reached after it was found that it would be impossible to make arrangements to practice either on the Iceland or the Brooklyn Ice Palace rink, and none of the open air rinks in the vicinity of the university afforded satisfactory facilities.

There will be no wrestling league competitions, and at Columbia the prospects are not bright for meets with all the members of the league. One match has been definitely scheduled, that with the Navy on Feb. 15, and other matches will be held with Yale and Brown. There may be a meet with Princeton, but it is uncertain.

In swimming there will be home and home meets with the College of the City of New York, and single meets with Yale, Princeton, and Pennsylvania, in addition to the matches with Amherst and M. I. T. in the course of a New England trip. The opening meet of the year will be with C. C. N. Y. There will be water polo matches at all meets excepting those with Amherst and M. I. T.

NO INTERNATIONAL POLO THIS SEASON

Association, at Annual Meeting, Decides Not to Challenge for Cup This Year.

Competition for the International Polo Cup, now held by England, will not be resumed this year. This declaration was made yesterday by H. L. Herbert, Chairman, at the annual meeting of the Polo Association, held in the Down Town Club. It is unlikely, also, that there will be a revival of the intercircuit contests.

"Of the prospects of games for this year," said Mr. Herbert, "so many identified with polo are still in the service the sport may not reach the dignity of championship events the coming season. Nor is there likely to be an immediate resumption of the intercircuit contests. Tournaments in which visiting teams take part on the old-time scale will probably be superseded by more home play and matches with nearby clubs.

"There can be no possible thought of a challenge from the Polo Association for the International Cup, won back so gallantly by the team representing England in 1914, until the Hurlingham Club has had ample time to refill and prepare its sadly depleted polo ranks."

How much time will be necessary for the English cup holders to prepare for a match is problematical. There is doubt whether the English polo ists will be in a position to defend the cup even in 1920. If the conditions warrant it, however, the Polo Association will challenge for the trophy next year, for there is a strong sentiment for a revival of the international matches. In the event that conditions next year make it inadvisable for international polo it is probable the Polo Association will challenge for the cup in 1921.

The present officers of the association were unanimously re-elected. They are: Chairman, H. L. Herbert; Secretary-Treasurer, W. A. Hazard; Executive Committee: Major August Belmont, Joshua Crane of Boston, Colonel John C. Groome of Philadelphia, who is now in France; W. A. Hazard, Alexander T. Primm, Jr.; Dudley P. Rogers of Boston, W. Plunkitt Stewart, and H. P. Whitney.

No dates were adopted for the coming season. Because of the uncertain conditions it was decided to defer arranging a schedule until the return from the European war zone of many members who before the war were prominently identified with the game. It is planned to arrange a schedule during the course of the season. This means that matches will be conducted at the convenience of the contending teams.

Mr. Herbert's report on the past season disclosed that the sport had not been entirely inactive during the war. Many games were played at various army camps in the country where conditions permitted. These contests were played for the benefit of patriotic funds. In California, near the Coronado Club colony, American and English army officers who were attached to camps in the vicinity of the club played polo. Southern camps also produced games, while in Hawaii military teams competed regularly.

Of the Polo Association's membership of 1,440 exactly 1,005 members went into the nation's service when this country entered the war. Included in this number are six Major Generals and the same number of Brigadier Generals. Until many of these heroes have been mustered out of the service there will be little concentrated effort toward an extensive revival of the sport.

"It is Mr. Hazard's and my own opinion," Mr. Herbert said in discussing the situation, "that the sport will be extensively revived when the great numbers of polo-playing soldiers have been mustered out. They will most likely be glad to share in a well-earned period of friendly battles on the polo field, where the contests are stubbornly fought in a spirit of fair play and good-fellowship."

Representatives of twenty-one clubs attended the meeting. Only two Eastern clubs reported weekly games during last year. They were the Rumson Country Club, at Rumson, N. J., and the Western Country Club, at Westchester, N. Y. This year's tournament at the Coronado Country Club began Jan. 1, with the Pacific Coast All-American Polo Trophy, the California Challenge Trophy, and the Pacific Coast Junior Polo Trophy as prizes. On the opening day the Coronado Club was defeated by the Forty-sixth Field Artillery team by a score of 17 to 3. The Coronado team defeated the team from Camp Kearny, Jan. 5, by a score of 6 to 2.

APAWAMIS CLUB MEETS.

Elects Officers and Arranges for Golf Activities.

At the annual meeting of the Apawamis Club held at Rye, N. Y., the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, William H. Conroy; Vice President, Thomas H. Watkins; Treasurer, James S. McCulloh; Secretary, Howard E. White.

The other members of the club elected to the Board of Governors were: Hugh D. Montgomery, W. Creighton Peet, Douglas R. Hartshorne, Archibald A. Forrest, Charles T. Governi, Louis A. Snyder, William J. Knapp, and Reginald W. Walden.

The golfing program for the coming season indicates a return to the activities of other years. The Metropolitan Golf Association has awarded the Apawamis Club the dates of June 26, 27, and 28 for its annual tournament. The seniors' tournament will be held as usual during the month of September, and the club has made up its program of Saturday and holiday events, including the important competitions for President's and Governors' Cup, and Vice President's Cup.

COCHRAN GAINS IN MATCH.

Welker Cochran, the young Chicago rival of Willie Hoppe, decreased Jake Schaefer's lead in yesterday's two blocks of their 3,600 point balkline billiard match at Daly's Academy, but the Chicagoan is still eighty-six points in the rear of his rival. The score for two days of playing now favors Schaefer by 1,200 to 1,114.

Cochran displayed rare form in the afternoon block and rolled up points with a consistency which astounded his opponent. At the end of seven innings the score favored the young Chicago player by 503 to 300, the match ending when Schaefer scored his necessary 300 points for the block. Cochran made a high run of 200 and averaged 71 6-7. Schaefer had a high run of 96, with an average of 37 4-8.

Schaefer took the evening block by a count of 600 to 286 in eight innings. The victor made a high run of 132 and averaged 37 4-8. Cochran's highest run was 101 and he averaged 40 6-7. The match will be continued today.

HENS WITH RECORDS CACKLE IN GARDEN

The thirtieth annual exhibit of the New York Poultry and Pigeon Association opened at Madison Square Garden yesterday with an entry list of more than 12,000, including every breed known to husbandry. The interest which the Government has taken in chicken raising during the last few years has stimulated the industry, and with eggs now at a point where they are more or less of a luxury the poultry raisers have become folks of real prominence.

The Government exhibit at the Garden is one of the features of the show. It is in charge of Chief Poultryman Harry M. Lamon, who has brought some of the best stock from the Government establishment at Beltsville, Md. The Government has found white leghorns more productive than any other breed, and one of the exhibits is Victory Belle, which has a record of laying 214 eggs as a pullet and 654 eggs in four years. Another Government leghorn laid 408 eggs in two years.

There are several special displays at the show this year, including the exhibit of decorative waterfowl from the farm of G. D. Tilley at Darien, Conn. Birds of rare plumage from all parts of the globe are in this exhibit.

One of the most interested visitors yesterday was a Chinese merchant, Charles F. Gong, who with several other Chinese restaurant keepers is looking for a suitable acreage near New York to raise poultry and pigeons, which make up a great part of the favorite dish known as chop suey.

Exhibits of pit games are shown by Payne Whitney of Manhasset, L. I.; Clarence Sackett of Rye, and F. Leo of this city. The homer pigeons attracted much attention and included in the display were homers with records of from 100 to 1,000 miles. There is an exhibit of the smallest type of pigeon, known as the African owl, not much larger than a canary bird. These are shown by H. E. Dugan of Toronto, Can.

The judges started their work early yesterday and more than $15,000 in prize money will be distributed before the show ends. In the early judging, John A. Gamewell of Little Silver, N. J., was awarded several ribbons for his exhibit of golden pencilled Hamburgs. This variety has been brought to great perfection in recent years. Winners in silver spangled Hamburgs were Dr. J. S. Wolfe of Bloomfield, N. J., and in the golden spangled Hamburgs Morton B. Cooper of Bainbridge, N. Y., won several firsts.

Forced to Be Big!

THE packers are frequently accused of being large. If bigness is a crime, Armour and Company are guilty of the charge. For, from a small beginning this business has grown to a point where it serves millions—affording a constant, ever-open market to producers—bringing meats hundreds of miles to consumers.

Some one has wisely said that "Production waits on distribution." In other words, there can be no incentive to stock-growers to produce more livestock unless adequate outlets are provided to keep pace with the production. When greater yield is created on the farm, the outlet must be widened at the market to care for it.

Armour and Company are large because the livestock industry is large. Obviously the packing industry must keep pace with the increase of livestock and population-growth. As herds increased, the Armour organization kept step with them. New plants were erected in the centers of new stock-raising regions; improved operating methods were adopted; more refrigerator cars were built to carry the food.

Then, with the outbreak of war, the wisdom of this development had a chance to prove itself. In spite of labor shortage, disrupted railway service, and scores of other difficulties, Armour and Company and other similar concerns were equipped to instantly meet the War Department's call for food. In addition to shipping over a hundred carloads of meat a day, or seventy-five million pounds a month to the Army and Navy, we have taken care of civilian requirements in the usual way.

With an increase in cattle production, encouraged by the Food Administration's high prices, had to come further increased facilities for preparing and marketing not only the meat, but the hides, hoofs and all other parts of the animal. To meet the influx of the hundreds of additional cattle daily, we were compelled to erect a new building in ninety days, build additional coolers, tanks to handle the rendered products, dryers, buildings to treat and handle casings, additional oleo kettles, hide storage warehouses, etc.

With the return to normal conditions, these facilities—expanded during the stress of war to provide stock-growers with necessary outlets, and to furnish food in adequate quantities for both Army and Civilian needs—are still at the service of the public. They represent a permanent investment, assuring a permanent outlet and thus a permanent supply of best foods at true value prices.

Today, with Europe looking to America as its most certain source of supply, together with our own country to be fed, Armour and Company's size and ability to handle large volume most efficiently and economically becomes of greater importance than ever.

CHEAPER CLOTHING PREDICTED FOR MEN

STYLES TO BE RESTORED

Double-Breasted Coats, Patch Pockets, and Cuff Trousers, Barred During War, Will Be Worn Again.

After-the-war readjustment problems, chief among them the question of price revision engaged the attention of 100 men's clothing manufacturers at the opening sessions of the twenty-third annual convention of the National Association of Clothiers, held yesterday at the Hotel Astor. Samuel Weill of Rochester, N. Y., President of the association, presided, delegates being present from New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Rochester, Baltimore, Syracuse, and other clothing manufacturing centres.

While some of the manufacturers said that manufacturing costs would not be lower for a considerable period, others expressed the belief that next season's clothing would retail at prices materially below those of 1918, with further reductions in the offerings for the Spring and Summer of 1920.

While the question of price revision downward was not discussed on the floor of the convention, a committee of the manufacturers' association conferred with a committee of five retail clothing dealers appointed at the recent convention of the National Association of Retail Clothiers in Chicago. The retail clothiers urged the manufacturers to make such concessions in price as would permit the dealers to charge lower prices in the immediate future. The manufacturers held that the prices made on their garments were based on the high cost of materials and labor and to reduce them would mean serious losses. Some manufacturers are known, however, to have made slight reductions to the retail trade in cases where they received concessions from mills and the retailers' committee is hopeful of getting like concessions.

In addition to the price question, the committees of manufacturers and retailers are considering the new styles of men's clothing to be put on the market. The joint committees are expected to report their conclusions on the price and style questions at today's convention. It was made known, however, that the double-breasted coat is scheduled for an early return to the favor it enjoyed prior to the edict of the War Industries Board banishing the garment as a conservation measure. Patch pockets, belts, and turned-up trousers, also under a similar ban during the war, are now expected to make an early appearance.

It was brought out at the convention that the retail stocks of clothing are 25 per cent. above normal, and the question of reducing them will be gone into. Such surplus stocks were attributed to the lessened demand for civilian clothing.

The conventions decided to send a committee to Washington to confer with the Senate and House War Revenue Conference Committee regarding the luxury tax provision of the Revenue bill, which, it is claimed by the manufacturers, is an uncalled for burden to both makers and wearers of clothing. The signing of the armistice found the clothing manufacturers with a large amount of material on their hands which it had been intended to work up into army clothing, while millions of dollars' worth of contracts were held by the clothing makers. It was said that until the Government made settlements it would be impossible for many clothing contractors to proceed with business on a normal basis.

The War Service Committee reported that the Government had promised to dispose of its huge surplus stocks of army clothing in such a way as not to upset business. David Kirschbaum of Philadelphia said that for many years following the civil war army uniforms, particularly faded blue overcoats, were worn by those who had been in the conflict, and who seemed unable to get any other kind of clothing. Mr. Kirschbaum said that he hoped this condition would not confront the present generation.

At the afternoon session the adoption of a resolution to form a subsidiary organization to meet the industrial situation was preceded by a long debate. The resolution was proposed by Jacob J. Abt of Chicago, President of the Chicago Wholesale Clothiers' Association, and proposed the establishment of a labor bureau composed of members of the various local associations.

"This labor bureau," Mr. Abt said, "will be called upon to consider the last day, the wage problem, hours of labor, shop conditions, complaints, and every matter of detail connected with the clothing industry."

The convention also voted to form a clearing house for the settlement of controversies arising between the clothing manufacturers and the mill men, and it was announced that the American Association of Woolen and Worsted Manufacturers would participate in the clearing houses' activities. The convention will end this afternoon and be followed tonight by the annual dinner, which will be held at the Astor.

MUSIC

By James Gibbons Huneker

The Philadelphia Orchestra.

The composer possessing the most exquisite sensibility since Chopin is Claude Debussy. Little matters his affinities with Wagner and Verlaine, his shy or recondite moods; this Frenchman wrought of his genius something rare and evocative. In his three nocturnes, for example, we overhear Tristan, who, like those clouds of Baudelaire, faint, floating, flocculent . . . les nuages . . . là bas . . . is in some dim, remote chamber of the musician's fancy; a Wagner attenuated by a feminine temperament. But Debussy must be interpreted by a poetic conductor else he thaws and resolves himself into everlasting inanity. He is all nuance; that nuance which Verlaine praised; of which naughty Paul was the supreme master in verse.

Leopold Stokowski proved himself a musician doubled by a poet yesterday afternoon at Carnegie Hall when the Philadelphia Orchestra played those nocturnes: "Nuages," "Fêtes," and "Sirènes." The delicacy and expressiveness of "Clouds" was music-making of no ordinary merit. The Philadelphia band discoursed eloquently in this dream within a dream. The festal music was brilliant, technically admirable, and the tempo breath-catching. Of the "Sirens" it may be said that while they gasped and gurgled, wailed and moaned, they were not sirenic; rather did they recall the semi-articulate speech of seals sporting on sun-smitten rocks.

The difficult intervals, close, chromatic, and the tonalities, vague and disquieting, were sufficient reason for the colorless singing of a female choir from the Schola Cantorum. Debussy uses the voice for its specific color, just as he employs an English horn. There is too much tooral-looral in "Sirens," but we are grateful to Mr. Stokowski for giving it. Beethoven's Eighth Symphony was played with finesse, for the young Philadelphia conductor has a light touch. Particularly praiseworthy was the accompaniment he provided for Efrem Zimbalist, who was the solo violinist in Mozart's A major concerto. The Russian virtuoso played like a man and a musician, though much of the naïve and tender charm of Mozart was absent. As usual Stokowski conducted without a score, except in the concerted number. His memory is remarkable. The large and distinguished audience was enthusiastic over Debussy—and Stokowski.

Flonzaley Quartet.

"Missing at Verdun" was a significant note on the program of the Flonzaley Quartet at Aeolian Hall last night. It followed the announcement of a manuscript string quartet by the late Paul Roussel, a French composer. It also explains why the work is an unfinished one. In two movements, it is brief and interesting rather than original. The short-breathed phrases in the opening movement are indicative of a mood wrestled with but hardly realized; yet there is charm, and in the animated second movement genuine vitality and no little ingenuity in the treatment. The Roussel fragment ended an evening that began with the more sophisticated work by Vincent D'Indy, a Quartet, Opus 35, which contained more of volition than inspiration; in a word, cerebral. Also filled with more dramatic moments than some of his chamber music. There was fire and fantasy in the third section, a scherzo-mood with a coiling back upon the "moderate" measures. The science of D'Indy is lightly worn. He is a master of rhythm. There is color in his harmonies. The strings give forth rich clangors. A cool head directs the concert of piquant progressions and acid-sweet melodies. Thought-stuff in abundance, and George Meredith has said that thought stuff is not lean stuff.

But Beethoven's early quartet in B flat, Opus 18, No. 6, won the affection of the audience. It was beautifully played, and when on the reprise of "La Malinconia" in the last section—which sounds like an echo of "My Old Kentucky Home"—a string snapped on Mr. Betti's instrument the effect was cataclysmic, so unexpected was it. All is relative in this world of poor relatives, and that broken fiddle string left the audience gasping in midair, like an aviator marooned on a roof. The accident didn't long delay the music, and on a new pinion the composition floated to the close. The Flonzaleys, as ever, grazed perfection in their playing. Another oasis in the season!

"MARTHA" SUNG AT PARK.

Americans in Flotow's Opera Please a Large Audience.

The Society of American Singers, now entering its fifth month of opera in English at the Park Theatre, introduced "Martha" last night to a large and friendly audience. The cast was all-American and headed by Ruth Miller, heard last season at the Metropolitan. The other of the famous pair of heroines of this well-known opera was Elizabeth Campbell, recently with the Boston Opera Company. Lionel and Plunkett were sung by Craig Campbell and Bertram Peacock, respectively, who have just ended a long run together as the two kings "who act in perfect unity" in the justly celebrated "Gondoliers" of Gilbert and Sullivan. Carl Formes as Sir Tristan and Jack Goldman as the Sheriff completed the cast.

Supported by the fine orchestra led by John McGhie, which has done so much to make the long and successful career of the American singers, Flotow's melodies which have traveled over the whole world were sung again to the great satisfaction of the audience.

"The Last Rose of Summer," always associated with the opera; the famous tenor song in the third act and the swelling finale of that act were generously applauded.

President Hinshaw of the Society announced yesterday that the next opera to be added to the already long list of productions this season would be "Robin Hood," which will be given on Monday night, Feb. 3.

Toscha Seidel, Violinist, Plays.

Toscha Seidel, who has played often with New York's orchestras since his début last Spring, gave his first violin recital of the season before a large audience last evening in Carnegie Hall. The young man's exuberant spirits and style have a popular appeal, and his enthusiasm is infectious. In his program were the Tartini "Devil's Trill," with cadenza by his master, Auer; the D minor concerto of Wieniawski, assisted by I. T. Grunberg; Beethoven's "Romance" in G, several arrangements by Kreisler, and Achron's "Hebrew Lullaby."

TO STOP THEATRE TAX FIGHT

Senators Win Support and Managers Believe Victory is Won.

On the advice of Senator James A. Reed, a member of the Senate Committee on Finance, steps will be taken by the theatrical managers today to discontinue the stream of protests against the 20 per cent. tax which has been pouring into Washington. It was generally felt by the managers last night, following the receipt of dispatches from Washington, that the fight against the tax is practically won, and that the 10 per cent. rate will be permitted to stand. Speeches were made in the theatres as usual last night, however, and petitions were again circulated.

Lee Shubert, as Vice President of the United Managers' Protective Association, yesterday received a telegram from Claude Kitchin, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the House, and credited with being the principal advocate of the 20 per cent. tax, asking that the managers submit a brief setting forth their side of the case. This was in process of preparation last night, and will be carried to Washington today by special messenger. According to information from Washington the tax will be brought up for a vote in the committee today or tomorrow.

Many Senators and members of Congress wired the managers here yesterday assuring them of their support. The most important of these messages was from Senator Reed, who declared that he had canvassed the Conference Committee and found a majority of its members opposed to the increase. Among others who have gone on record against the tax are Senators Smoot of Utah, Poindexter of Washington, Smith of Michigan, and Ashhurst of Arizona.

The total number of protests which have reached Washington is said to be more than 6,000,000. The prospective victory of the managers will put a halt to elaborate plans to enroll the entire country as petitioners. A call was sent out yesterday to all persons who write for the stage, urging them to make themselves heard at Washington, and Rotary Clubs, Chambers of Commerce, and commercial organizations all over the country have been passing resolutions of protest.

MORALS, ECONOMICS, AND POLITICS.

Ten States are in rebellion against the telephone rates fixed by the Postmaster General under the war powers which he exercises. The Interstate Commerce Commission declares that the Director General fixed unjust and unreasonable railway rates on a certain commodity, under his war powers, and orders the Federally controlled railways to make other rates. On the same day the Commerce Commission is overruled by the Supreme Court of the United States, and by the Public Service Commission of Pennsylvania in a case like several others pending which involve the relations between State and national powers. It might be thought that our institutions were in peril and that we have failed in the practice of that self-determination in matters of government the theory of which we are spreading abroad. The opposite is the truth. There is so little excitement about these conflicts between officials in matters involving a mixture of morals, economics, and politics that the interest felt is deficient even among those charged with duties in the premises. Congress is described as apathetic, and few follow the cases mentioned unless they have a specific concern in them. There is rather excess of confidence that the snarls will be straightened in due season, and that finally our affairs will be settled for us in the manner in which the League of Nations will settle world affairs if only the peoples of the world will emulate our self-control as well as our self-determination.

That is all very well, but there are other things in which we are setting worse examples to the world which is fixing its eyes upon us, we are assured. American efficiency does not shine when its highest officials quarrel instead of doing things. If Government operation and control bungles in the smaller tasks set it, what will the harvest be if larger affairs are intrusted to the same humans, who do not become supermen by putting on official mantles? If these alarums now fall upon deaf ears, how can it be urged that the matters are of such supreme importance, and will it not be shown that, like the tariff, they are merely local issues and not new irrepressible conflicts? May it not even be said that they are thought to be individual matters concerning only the parties involved, and will be thought so until one of the triangular contenders, the officials, the utilities, and the public, makes its position so clear that a standard will be raised around which it is possible to rally supporters? Manifestly, it is not possible to rally around all of them, for their positions are inconsistent, and a solution can be hoped for only by abandoning some of them.

The question of wrongful use of war powers needs little attention. Even if it were malicious usurpation, instead of bureaucratic officiousness, the coming of true instead of technical peace would remove that issue. The conflict between State and national authority is of another sort. It has survived for a generation, and now is ripe for settlement. In the telephone cases the important question is the establishment of a system of zone rates, whether done by war or peace authority. The zone system of express rates threw the companies into bankruptcy. The zone system of mail rates makes the distribution of intelligence costly and localized, instead of cheap and national. There is pending a proposal for the establishment of railway zone rates, or, worse yet, pure distance rates. The singular situation is that those exercising national authority are using it narrowly, locally. It is a degradation of national power, without raising local power. It is apparently a matter of politics, but is based on wrong economics, and will fail with the demonstration. Those who are ready or even wish to see the railways go the way of the express companies may slumber on undisturbed if they prefer a smash to a revival of the methods which gave us prosperity.

The lumber rate case adds moral questions to those of politics and economics. The idea is to establish by law equality of unequal economic conditions. Usually this assertion of what "ought" to be done in matters of economic discretion has been made by the Interstate Commission, which has not succeeded where it declares the Director General has failed. When railways competed for business which they could get only by sacrificing profits it was a mere question of profit and loss, and was settled by the balance sheet. Either the business paid and was justified or it did not pay. The present temper is to discourage uneconomic competition, and to allow merely reasonable competition, either regulated officially or moderated by pools or combinations justifiable under the rule of reason. It is different when official authority, either of the Director General or the Interstate Commission, enables shippers to compete in a manner so costly that the bills go to the taxpayers instead of the railways. A distance or zone tariff is no more a solution of justice and morality in rate making than a blanket rate which takes in or excludes competitors as the case may be. There has been immorality in both railway regulation and railway operation, and some of it has been the result of good rather than bad intentions. There is a just mean between apathy and hysteria as well as between morals and economics in relation to self-determination. The scales have dropped from the eyes of some admirers of lawmakers and regulators, and, now that the regulators are regulating one another, the end must be near.

THE GERMAN ELECTIONS.

Imperfect as are the returns of the German general elections for the National Assembly, they confirm the conclusions drawn from the recent local elections. The parties of order are an immense majority. Feeble are the Independent Socialists, whose most violent section made so much disturbance and looked so formidable until the slow, orderly mass of the population goaded the Majority Socialist Government into too long delayed severe action; and the Red Terror was quieted with lead. Sporadic disturbances by the Spartacans are reported. Here and there there were raids upon the ballot boxes and shootings, not so much more or worse, perhaps, than Manhattan and Philadelphia have known in the golden prime of ferocious ward politics.

Apparently the Majority Socialists, the strongest party at the last Reichstag election, are the strongest still. For the purposes of this election they are practically a "bourgeois" party; nor is the immediate construction of a Socialist State in their plans. Germany has too many, too urgent, and too far-reaching tasks and burdens ahead of her to venture on highly theoretic or doubtful political and social schemes. It is fortunate for Germany, for her conquerors who have to deal with her, for the polity under which she is to live, for a time at least, that the parties in the National Assembly are to be balanced and checked, as the returns indicate. If the Majority Socialist Party has a larger representation in the Assembly than any other, the combined "bourgeois" parties have a majority in that body.

The Democratic Party, compounded of the most liberal elements of the old Progressives and National Liberals, seems to have polled a great vote. This is a moderate reasonable republican party. In Socialist Berlin it has made signal gains. It seems to be uncertain whoso vote was larger, that of the Democrats or that of the late Centrists, now the Christian People's Party. Whatever their differences of principles, these two parties may be depended upon to resist any extreme radical policy, should the Majority Socialists favor such. The German People's Party, composed of the most conservative wings of the former Progressives and "big business" National Liberals, ironically so called, has cast no multitudinous vote. Finally, the National People's Party, refuge of the East Elbian grandees and foaming Pan Germans, of Junkerdom and Megalomania, was only moderately strong.

A conservative triumph, we might say, if conservatism in Germany wasn't associated with reaction. A good day's work for the German people and for the rest of us. It will be interesting to see how many of those entitled to vote, more than half of them women, went to the polls.

COMRADES IN WAR, FRIENDS IN PEACE.

Captain CARPENTER of the Vindictive was not wrong—far from it—when he said at a dinner of the Economic Club on Monday night that "there is "a certain amount of insidious prop-"aganda going about that our navies "[the American and the British] did "not get along as well together as "might have been hoped." As a matter of fact, the propagandists have stuck at nothing to provoke ill feeling among the men of the United States Navy, by disparaging the work of the British sailors in the war, by spreading stories of their treatment of the Americans in European waters, and particularly by lauding the efficiency and bravery of the Americans at the expense of their British allies. Doubtless in a subtle way the British bluejackets were tampered with, but the opportunities for mischief were not as promising in England; there propagandists sometimes came to grief, and a watch was always kept upon them.

Since the armistice the sowing of discord has been very noticeable in this country. Captain CARPENTER did well to have his say about it. When he faced his great audience on Monday night he used the short and ugly word, with a seaman's dash of profanity, in characterizing the evil work of the enemies of America and Great Britain, and he finished by calling as a witness Admiral RODMAN, who said that the personnel of the two navies—he was speaking of their co-operation—had been bound together by the closest ties of regard and esteem, adding:

> I sometimes commanded a force with British Admirals under me, and sometimes they commanded me, and no thought of jealousy, no thought of nationality, no thought of misunderstanding, ever arose. * * * Though my comrades in the British Navy were born under a different flag, though we are by geographical boundary different nations, yet I am convinced that the same blood flows in our veins, that we have the same ideals, the same love of righteousness and liberty. Should the time ever come again in the future, as it has done in this war, there is no question in my mind but that we shall stand together through thick and thin, fight together, and win together.

That is the feeling among Admiral RODMAN's brother officers throughout the navy, and the intelligent warrant officers and sailors share it. Allowing for a certain degree of prejudice against England, coming down from Lexington and Concord, which has been assiduously cultivated by the propagandists, who have not overlooked any racial feeling they could turn to account, American sailors in the past have not been hostile to men in the British service in Manila Bay or elsewhere, though in foreign ports they have had their personal rows, like all bluejackets ashore, as well as their friendly meetings and common amusements. If the American sailor could not find a comrade in the British sailor, on the Asiatic station, for instance, whom could he get to know and fraternize with in another navy?

It remained for the great war, with its rivalry in a common cause, the sharing of the same tasks and dangers, the winning together of a historic victory, the exchange of hospitalities, eye-to-eye and hand-to-hand association ashore in sports and games, to bring the men of the two services closer together in bonds of good-will and esteem than would have been possible in a hundred years of peace. The rank and file never understood one another so well before, and it is a poor specimen of Yankee or Britisher who will let himself be moved by the German propagandist, or any of the breed, to dislike the other uniform.

WELL CHOSEN.

Governor SMITH has added nobly to what is getting to be a series of admirable appointments. Among the thirty-six members whom he has named of the Reconstruction Committee to ponder many large questions—military, financial, economic, sanitary—with which the State must deal are five competent women and some of the ablest and most distinguished men; the best specialists, fittest by talents, character, and service that could be found for the work. Since they are to get no pay, a modest word of praise is not too much to give them.

The chief acknowledgment, however, should go to Governor SMITH. He keeps on picking out people for office or keeping them in office because they are qualified. There is a certain danger in such a course. It may make a Governor too popular with the people at large—and unpopular with bossikins of his party.

WHAT DO THEY KNOW ABOUT RUSSIA?

What does Mme. BRESHKOVSKAYA, "the Grandmother of the Russian Revolution," know about Russia? She has arrived in the United States and is touring the country denouncing the Bolsheviki and describing LENINE as a "criminal despot." You can meet on any street corner glib individuals who have never been in Russia, but know all about it, and they will tell you that the newspapers and the American Government are in a "conspiracy to suppress the truth" about Russia; that all the things printed to the discredit of the Bolsheviki are "lies." With what superior scorn they must read of the words of BRESHKOVSKAYA! What can she possibly know about Russia, compared with them?

What does MAXIM GORKY know about Russia? He, after a vain effort to tolerate the Bolshevist régime, has exposed it as a despotism deadlier than that of the Czar. What does he know about Russia, compared with EUGENE V. DEBS? DEBS, who comes from Terre Haute, Ind., says that free speech is dead in the United States but lives on in Russia. GORKY, who hails from Petrograd, says that free speech is dead in Russia; but what does GORKY know about it?

What does MARIA SPIRIDONOVA know about Russia? She was for years regarded as the living martyr of the revolution. The overthrow of Czarism liberated her from her captivity in Siberia, and she returned to European Russia to become leader of the Social Revolutionists of the Left. In that capacity she allied herself with the Bolsheviki, and remained their ally until she saw that they were trying to erect not liberty, but despotism. Then she arraigned them as autocrats, and they put her in prison, as their predecessor in autocracy, the Czar, had done. But what does she know about autocracy? New York is full of individuals who have never been east of Mineola, and they can tell you that she is ignorant of conditions in Russia.

What does PETER KROPOTKIN know about Russia? He is not a Czarist; he has been for many years the foremost Anarchist in the world. But he denounced the Bolsheviki as autocrats and despots. If he is out of prison, which is unlikely, he should come to the United States and meet some of our intellectuals. They can tell him all about Russia, and convince him to his face that he is the victim of "lies" published by the American newspapers and the American Government.

There is lying and suppression somewhere, without a doubt. We should like to see the actual falsifiers and suppressors undertake to face CATHERINE BRESHKOVSKAYA.

FEWER AND BETTER STUDENTS.

That day seems lost which does not see some cherished tradition of American life discarded. Now comes Columbia University with the theory that there is a considerable waste in using the expensive plant and operating force of an institution of higher education on great numbers of students who are incapable of profiting seriously by higher education. Columbia will try to weed out its students before they enter by a psychological and physiological inquiry similar to that used in the selective draft, and to the famous Binet tests for discovering and culling out defective children. The old entrance examination is apparently not to be dropped, but candidates for admission who can present certificates that they have done the necessary preliminary work may elect the new test instead of the examination, if they prefer.

In this option there seems to lie a weakness, for the student of subnormal mentality who might be coached to pass the entrance examinations, but would be of no use thereafter, is likely to elect the test which he can pass by cramming rather than the psychological inquiry which would reveal his unfitness. But whatever the defects of the plan, its very adoption is an indication of the tendency of educational authorities to revolt at the hampering of able and willing students, and the waste of the teacher's time, which comes from the prevalence in past years of the notion that college was a convenient, if temporary, asylum for harmless morons.

It is a wholesome reaction, but a reaction which may perhaps be carried too far. From the point of view of scholarship, and certainly from that of the interest of the abler students, it is true that those who can and want to make progress should not be hampered by inclusion in classes with the idle and the dull. But if a college be regarded as an instrument of service to the community it is a serious question whether more service would be rendered by the intensive cultivation of a few, or by the present method of doing some good to a great many. No doubt for the great universities a more exacting admission test will be a good thing, for the mere fame of an institution such as Harvard or Columbia draws students to it in such multitudes that it is beginning to be a serious problem what to do with them. But in the newer parts of the country the universities, and even more the small colleges, perform a very considerable service by their effect upon men who may never graduate, but who still leave college better equipped for life than when they entered. Students from rural or semi-rural environment who leave college without a degree, but with better standards of taste or deportment, with business experience such as might come from managing the football team or the glee club, with ability to talk, to "mix," to reason on problems for practical decision—even with such minor bits of knowledge as what fork to use—they may not have got all that college has to offer, but they have got a good deal that will be useful in their future life.

The British universities have compromised by the institutions known as "pass schools" and "honor schools," whereby those who go to the university to live up to tradition, or to spend their time in agreeable frivolities, undergo a course of instruction which makes no great demands on deficient mentality; and those who want to work, or for some reason have to work, are freed from the handicap of association with men who only retard the instruction of others. Perhaps we may ultimately come to this; in any event, the old system was unfair to the abler and more industrious students, but it ought to be remembered that the great majority even of the dullards come away from college better off than they entered. Whether their profit was worth what it cost their parents and the college is a question that can hardly be answered by a generalization.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

War Problems Brightly Illuminated.

That nothing is easier to explain than somebody else's failure, unless it be to tell what the somebody else should have done to achieve success, was beautifully illustrated by the remarks, printed yesterday, of Captain VON SCHWINK, a German officer hitherto unknown to fame outside of his own country. The Captain followed the method invariably chosen by those who undertake the task he essayed to perform. The German offensive of 1918 came to its dismal termination, he said, in effect, because the German High Command did what it did, and the campaign would have ended in a brilliant triumph if the great Generals had done something quite different.

These statements are of an accuracy far beyond question, and Captain VON SCHWINK has earned the right to take himself, and to have others take him, as a military critic of the first rank.

That the German campaign was not well planned—that its originators overestimated the strength of their own forces and underestimated the fighting ability of their enemies—is proved by the event. Of course, the Captain is not the first to notice these facts, but he is justified in mentioning them again, and his rehearsal of them has an interest it would lack if it came from a different source, for, made by a German officer, they constitute one of the very few confessions of military imperfection in either planning war or carrying it on that have yet been heard from anybody of his race and class.

When Did He See All This?

After Captain VON SCHWINK turns from condemning what his superiors did to telling what they should have done, he is still on safe ground, though it is ground not quite as solid as was that occupied by him while he was engaged in the other part of his task. For then there is no event to vindicate his judgment. He need not worry about that, however, and probably does not, for, whatever doubt anybody may have as to the possibility of winning the war by adopting the measures he says should have been adopted, still he cannot be proved wrong, and that is always a comfortable position to be in.

The Captain—presumably because he is a modest man—does not reveal whether or not he saw, while the campaign of 1918 was in progress, all the things now so plain to him. By an implication perhaps unintended he apparently would have us believe that he did not share the ignorance of HINDENBURG and LUDENDORFF as to what the Allies could and would do before they began to think of surrender, and that he was well aware of the inadequacy of the forces sent against them to compel submission.

It may be that such is the case. Again disproof is impossible, but it does seem a pity, if the Captain was really thus wiser than the other German officers, he could not have brought his knowledge somehow to the attention of his countrymen. It would have been lots of money in their pockets, saved some hundreds of thousands of their lives, and made the future considerably brighter for them than it is now.

It Causes Never a Thrill.

In other days it would have been easier, and much easier, than now to become excited over the finding over in Africa of a diamond weighing 388¼ carats. Even with the added information that the big stone is of the soft or blue-white lustre that commands the highest market price, present inclination is to ask, "What of it?" and for attention then to turn away to any one of a hundred subjects the greater importance of which is now appreciated by almost everybody.

There are several other forms of that common but highly valuable substance, carbon, that interest the world far more deeply at present than do diamonds, and it is with something different from pleasure that one thinks of the only people who can be expected to invest large sums of money in the several pieces into which this monstrous crystal will probably be cut to make it seem a good investment even for the least sensitive and most splurging of war profiteers.

Once a place could have been found for those pieces among what are called "crown jewels," but additions to those rather dubious collections are not likely to be made for some time, if ever, by the more judicious of such monarchs as have survived Germany's effort to vindicate the divine right of Kings to do and have what they want at any cost. The royalties that retain the valuable asset of popular approval did not preserve it by the possession of diamonds, nor will the others gain it by purchasing and wearing them.

To Whom Should He Apply?

So far as can be gathered from reading the, as yet, incomplete reports of the speeches made in the Senate by the vehement critics of Mr. HOOVER, the chief, if not the only, cause of their animosity to him is their discovery that, needing large quantities of meat for distribution among the hungry Europeans, he is intending to buy it of the corporations that have it for sale! What other source of supply he should utilize is not named or even hinted in these impassioned orations. That is strange, too, for the problem created if the meat packers are not to be patronized when meat by the hundreds of tons must be bought is so difficult that those who impose the ban certainly should be ready to name other dealers who are ready to do business of this sort.

That the big packers will make some money if Mr. HOOVER goes to them for the meat he wants seems probable, but in the probability there is nothing obviously criminal, nor does it create even a shock of surprise anywhere outside of the Senate—not at once, at least, except, perhaps, in Senator PENROSE's own State, where, as is well known, big business, from preference, is always done at a loss.

An Ancient Race Is Awakening.

With a Prince representing an Arab King present as a duly accredited and officially recognized delegate at the Peace Conference, memories are revived of the days when the successors of MOHAMMED ruled a vast empire, which, after the fashion of the time, they had conquered with their notably good swords. They ruled it, too, for centuries, about as well and wisely and justly as any empires were ruled then, and much better than some of the other empires were ruled.

The Caliphs, however, showed the lamentably human inability to stand prosperity, and the hard-fighting Turks reduced them to a subjection in which they have remained until now. GIBBON tells magnificently the story of the Arab rise and fall, and present events make him better than ever worth reading.

This hardly seems a propitious time for a new King to set up in business, but the Arabs probably know what they want, and of course they are not to be deprived of "self-determination" any more than anybody else. They are at least fortunate in occupying a country with few or no attractions for other peoples, and if the Hedjas person will only develop a few of the picturesque qualities of his remote predecessors, he will add a much-needed element of the romantic to the grim happenings of this momentous era.

But it is to be feared that HAROUN-AL-RASCHID is very, very dead.

RAILWAY REGULATION.

Mr. Morawetz Advocates a Government Guarantee of Profits.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of Jan. 21 you did me the honor of discussing and criticising editorially a plan submitted by me to the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce for the solution of the railway problem. In discussing my plan you did a public service, because only through full public discussion will it be practicable ever to reach a solution of the problem. However, I believe that you have failed to recognize certain fundamental facts that cannot be altered.

It is a fact that the power of the Federal Government to regulate railway rates cannot be taken away or abridged.

It is a fact that to make the validity of rate regulation depend upon the so-called "reasonableness" or "adequacy" of the rates, or upon the application of any formula that can be devised, furnishes no real protection to the owners of railway securities. All such tests of the validity of rates are impractical and illusory. No court and no commission and no railway man has ever furnished any definite or practical standard for determining what rates are reasonable, or adequate, or fair.

If the validity of rates imposed by a commission is made to depend on their reasonableness, or adequacy, or upon any other formula, the question whether in fixing rates the commission has exceeded the statutory limit would have to be decided by the courts. Yet it is a fact, shown by thirty years' experience, that the courts are not fitted to supervise the regulation of the railways or the making of their rates. Even if the courts were competent to supervise rate regulation by commissions, the delays of court procedure would make a resort to the courts ineffective.

It is a fact that the security of railway investments cannot be restored and that the capital necessary to the development of the railways cannot be obtained so long as the power to fix railway rates is left in the hands of a governmental commission, unless the Government in some way guarantees a fair return on the investments.

In your editorial article you say: "The only guarantee the railways require is that of a fair opportunity to earn profits." Profits on what? The law now says that the railways are entitled to earn a fair return or profit on their invested capital. Everybody recognizes that this furnishes no safe or practicable standard for fixing rates. Would the situation be improved if Congress enacted some new standard to be applied by the Interstate Commerce Commission subject to review by the courts?

My plan is based upon the assumption that the railway problem cannot be solved without full recognition of unalterable facts, or by merely tinkering with those features of the present situation which are radically wrong.

Washington Invited to Europe.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Has any one happened to quote, regarding President Wilson's visit to Europe, a letter Benjamin Franklin wrote George Washington in 1780? Here it is:

"Should peace arrive after another campaign or two, and afford us a little Leisure, I should be happy to see your Excellency in Europe, and to accompany you, if my Age and Strength would permit, in visiting some of its ancient and most famous Kingdoms. You would, on this side of the Sea, enjoy the great reputation you have acquir'd, pure and free from those little Shades that the Jealousy and Envy of a Man's Countrymen and Cotemporaries are ever endeavoring to cast over living Merit. Here you would know, and enjoy, what Posterity will say of Washington. For 1000 Leagues have nearly the same Effect with 1000 years. The feeble Voice of those grovelling Passions cannot extend so far either in Time or Distance. At present I enjoy the Pleasure for you, as I frequently hear the old Generals of this martial Country, (who study the maps of America, and mark upon them all your Operations,) speak with sincere Approbation and great Applause of your conduct; and join in giving you the Character of one of the greatest Captains of the Age."

Fruit Trees for France.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Let me express to you the thanks of the New York Bird and Tree Club for furthering its work of planting fruit trees in France and at the same time keeping alive the memory of our young manhood who there gave their all for freedom.

We issued 1,000 memorial tree cards late in November bearing the poem "Trees," by Joyce Kilmer, each guaranteeing a fruit tree planted in France, and our hope was to sell this number before Christmas. On Nov. 24 the Sunday TIMES published an account of our work, and as a result we were literally deluged with letters from Maine, Canada, California, Texas, Florida, Porto Rico, and all the territory in between, mentioning THE TIMES article or inclosing a copy of a local paper in which the article had been printed.

By Christmas 10,000 trees had been sold, and orders are coming in daily, so that the French Government officials and the American Forestry Association are encouraging us to go on with our work until France shall have all of her ruined orchards restored.

FUTURE HOMESTEADERS.

Angus McPhail, who sold linens at Stacey's,
Would find it gey tame to return to the store
And measure out towels and sheeting to housewives—
He who in France, for a twelvemonth and more,
Has tugged at a stretcher—been cited for valor
Because of his grit, on the Ambulance Corps!

The pharmacy lad who used to mix sundaes,
In natty white coat, as neat as a pin,
Since then in the trenches has neighbored with "cooties,"
And studied machine guns without and within.
Of course, now war's over, he must find a new job,
But somehow—he doesn't know how to begin!

Percival Poore, lounge lizard and wastrel,
Who lived but to one-step and follow Jazz bands,
Has learned that a year in the navy breeds manhood,
As well as strong muscles and tough, calloused hands.
It's life out-of-doors that will suit him hereafter;
His viewpoint has altered—and, likewise, his plans!

To all of these men, and hundreds just like them,
Whose vision has changed, who are ready to roam—
"Come back to the land," 'tis old Earth's invitation,
"Clear out my waste forests, and plow my rich loam!
There are acres for all—join the land army forces!
Come, stake out your ground claim, and build you a home!"

ASSAIL FAMINE FUND.

Senators Assert President Plans to Feed Bolsheviki.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The Senate again today debated the bill to appropriate $100,000,000 to feed starving nations of Europe, advocated by President Wilson. Senators Penrose of Pennsylvania, Johnson of California, and Poindexter of Washington, Republicans, declared that the President's idea was to subdue the Bolshevists of Europe by feeding them, and that this was the wrong way to do it.

The three Senators, with others who assailed the President's program for supplying food to Europe adverted to conferences Herbert C. Hoover had with the packers last October, as revealed in a Senate committee inquiry, in which the Food Administrator, it is alleged, agreed to help dispose of the packers' products abroad so as to stabilize prices for them here. They condemned the alleged agreement made by Mr. Hoover.

Senator Penrose expressed the belief that Mr. Hoover intended to stay in Europe after the Peace Conference, and by staying there would avoid service of any subpoena that might be issued to get him before a Congressional inquiry. The Pennsylvanian indicated that Congress intends to subpoena other heads of departments after March 4 and that exhaustive investigation in the conduct of the war would be initiated by the Republican majority in the next Congress.

Senator Penrose was moved to his attack upon the Administration by a statement of Senator Hollis, Democrat, of New Hampshire, who charged the Republicans with intent to "humiliate the President."

"The opponents of the Administration are conducting poison gas attacks upon the entire conduct of the war by the President," said Mr. Hollis.

The Pennsylvania Senator spoke of the airplane production program, the Hog Island shipyard enterprise, and the contract for the Ford ships, "which every shipbuilder in America pronounces to be failures and hardly capable of keeping afloat upon the ocean," as legitimate subjects of investigation and added:

"I do not know what the Senator means by branding investigations universally demanded by the American people, and as inevitable as the sunrise, as partaking of such methods, unless he secretly has friends to protect."

Senator Penrose spoke of Mr. Hoover's conduct of the Food Administration as having provoked "a universal outcry of protest" throughout the country.

Senator Johnson of California denounced the project to appropriate the $100,000,000 as too vague for Congress to act upon. The President had not indicated what peoples were to be fed. Alluding to the statement of a packer appearing as a witness before the Agriculture Committee that Mr. Hoover had agreed with the packers to help dispose of their surplus stocks in Europe and that the $100,000,000 appropriation was to be applied to this purpose, Mr. Johnson proceeded:

"When I heard that, the sentiment which I had with respect to the passage of a measure of this kind, the tugging at my heartstrings by appeals to feed the hungry of the world ceased and were wholly at an end.

"In Europe today we are creating a multitude of small nations, the very names of which not five members on this floor ever heard of before we entered the war. Today we are building Esthonia and Livonia and Lithuania and creating a new Poland and Finland, a Jugoslavia and a Czechoslavia, Assyria and Albania, Montenegro, Armenia, and various other nations, the props of all of which, we are told, are to be in the future American bayonets. While building castles in the air in Europe let us make our foundations firm at home."

"In the interesting list the Senator from California gave," Senator Penrose interpolated, "I regret that he made an omission. So that no feelings shall be hurt in international relations, I would suggest that he include the Sultan of Hejaz. That potentate ought not to be overlooked; because it might lead to an interruption in the amity of nations and the concert of humanity."

"Quite so," assented Mr. Johnson. "It undoubtedly will be necessary for us to maintain that nation. But I insist that it is a crime for an American policy, for American business, for American social life, for American economic life.

"As we are asked to pay $100,000,000 to those abroad who might require food I have thought of America at this time and of the cloud on the horizon, perhaps no bigger than a hand today, the cloud of unemployment which may in the next few months swiftly engulf this country and present an issue such as never before has been brought to our doors. The American soldier who has looked into the muzzle of a machine gun must not be compelled to look into an empty dinner pail."

Senator Poindexter spoke of Bolsheviki having gotten into the American Army abroad and of having declined to carry out orders or to eat food supplied by the Americans.

"How are we going to curb Bolshevism when the Bolsheviki won't eat?" he demanded.

"This whole scheme to feed Europe, coming the way it has, smacks of royalty," commented Senator Hardwick of Georgia.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21, (Associated Press.)—A definite development of the opposition to the Famine Fund bill today was the introduction of an amendment by Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, proposing that the administration of the $100,000,000 fund be placed in the hands of a commission of three members to be named by the President, subject to confirmation by the Senate, and to be responsible to Congress.

NEED FOR KINDERGARTENS.

George McAneny Says They Take Only One-Third of City's Children.

At the annual meeting of the New York Kindergarten Association, at the Ritz-Carlton yesterday, George McAneny, President of the Association, presided. Mr. McAneny said that only one-third of the children in New York could be accommodated in the kindergartens and that 17,000 of these children were in private kindergartens. There should be a free kindergarten for each child whose parents desire to have it attend one, Mr. McAneny added.

"Many people think that children have a period of hanging around and waiting until they are 6 years old," said Dr. George E. Vincent, President of the Rockefeller Foundation, "and the time for beginning their education comes. Most of our institutions were organized for rural populations. It is well for children on a farm to wait until they are six before beginning school. The farm with the animals and many things for them to study is a good kindergarten in itself. With urban conditions it is different and the children begin educating themselves with the things they see around them."

Dr. Vincent said that he hoped there would never be a return to the previous condition of individualism and that it was not possible to talk of democracy among people who did not have equality of opportunity. He said he hoped for smaller classes in the schools to enable the teachers to give more individual attention to the children and that beginning with the kindergarten the children would be guided through opportunity into development of character. Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin also was a speaker.

TO REPUDIATE IRIGOYEN.

Radical Party in Argentina Will Reject Acts of its Nominee.

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 21.—La Provincia says that the Radical Party is reorganizing and is preparing to issue a declaration that it will no longer be responsible for the acts of Dr. Hipolito Irigoyen, the President of the republic.

Dr. Irigoyen was elected President of the Argentine Republic in June, 1916, as the candidate of the Radical Party, being the first of his party to become President. He took office in October, 1916, for a term of six years.

Since assuming the Presidency, Dr. Irigoyen has had to reform his Cabinet several times. His attitude during the war caused much political dissension in Argentina and at times even led to hostile demonstrations against the Administration.

DEMANDS WILSON ABANDON IDEALISM

Senator Harding Says President Must Adopt Practical Methods to Avert Chaos.

SEES DANGER IN DELAYS

Criticises His Pre-Peace Journeyings in Europe While Bolshevism Menaces America.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Affairs of government in the United States are "drifting into chaos," Senator Harding, Republican, of Ohio, declared in a speech in the Senate today, in which he urged that President Wilson and those closely affiliated with him in the Administration "give up their idealism" and resort to sound practicality in the conduct of the nation's after-war reconstruction work.

Mr. Harding's speech, in view of the recent talk of him as the Republican nominee for President in 1920, created a profound impression in the Senate. When he had concluded Senator John Sharp Williams, Democrat, of Mississippi, went across the aisle to shake the Ohio's Senator's hand.

Senator Harding criticised the President for not having devoted himself immediately upon arriving in Europe to the task of bringing about a speedy peace. The President, he said, might better have waited until a conclusive peace was made before going abroad to Europe to receive the acclaim of the multitudes.

The speaker also found fault with the President for not having started reconstructive work for America before going abroad. Mr. Wilson, he said, while opposing a program for reconstruction evolved by Congress, had forced his own program through, but had not "lifted a hand" to carry it out.

"Because of the lack of action on the part of the Executive we are drifting into chaos," declared Senator Harding. "That is why I am urging that the Government give up the idealism it has pursued and get back to practical work."

Senator Harding said it was "a mistake from the beginning" for the United States to allow the impression to go out that we were in the war "for democracy's sake."

"We ought to have let the world know we were in the war because American rights had been violated by Germany," he said. "I don't agree with the President that we must establish a new internationalism," paralyzed by Socialism. The world today, trembling with the menace of Bolshevism, owes a good part of its difficulties to the policies of the Chief Executive."

The Menace of Bolshevism.

The Ohio Senator referred to President Wilson's cablegram asserting that the spread of Bolshevism in Europe must be stopped by feeding Europe's starving nations.

"You cannot buy permanent tranquillity anywhere in the world," he said. "You cannot shower the world with gold and harvest contentment. You cannot reach practical results through an avenue of dreams. There is no rhetorical route to the establishment of normal conditions.

"A good deal has been said about the destruction of 'class rule.' It is significant that autocracy is vanishing, but I want to know if we are going to establish another form of government based on force. You can't have popular government dictated by the force of physical numbers. The rule of physical force might well wreck the world's civilization.

"In this uncertain pursuit of a modern idealism we are drifting in that direction. I am not imputing any questionable motives to the President's trip abroad. I am only doubting the practicability of that trip. If the President had gone abroad as the American Premier or as the head of the American Peace Commission, to which he has appointed himself, and, after concluding the peace treaty, had made a triumphal tour of Europe, I would have rejoiced, for there is no jealousy in my soul. But he should have gone abroad to conclude a treaty of peace as soon as possible. In chasing the dreams of idealism he has neglected that great essential. He has neglected the practical things here at home in the United States. We have been infinitely more neglectful in preparing for the duties of peace than in preparing for the duties of war."

One vital problem before the country which demands the President's attention now, Senator Harding said, is that of wages and the cost of living.

"You cannot reduce the present cost of living," he said, "and keep up the present American wage. It is demagogy to say otherwise. I think the war will have been waged in vain if we do not go back to the old conditions that prevailed before the war.

Labor at a Dollar an Hour.

"If you do not have a fairer division of profits of business here you will have more Bolshevism in the United States than you have in Russia. Common labor in some cases is now receiving $1 an hour. It is time to be practical. We can fix an American policy for ourselves at home. We have taxed the big industrial enterprises until they are almost paralyzed. Why not, instead of giving so much attention to the expenditure of $100,000,000 to feed the people of Europe, give more attention to the taxpayers?

"America needs a policy. America must understand that, above everything else, orderly government is the first essential. I do not forget that the Executive and the legislative during the war preached the doctrine of revolution in the Central Empires. The doctrine was preached that revolution was necessary to bring about tranquillity in the world. You started a fire then that is difficult to put out now.

"If we must have anarchy on the one hand or hateful autocracy on the other I choose autocracy. We can best stay the march of Bolshevism by appealing to the deliberate American understanding. The man who expects to stop it by the application of charity is chasing a rainbow that has no end.

"If you don't get back to a peace basis in the next ninety days you will be more concerned about putting out the fires of Bolshevism in the United States than about the starving peoples of Europe. I want to cry out for the practical things. We are building $3,000,000,000 worth of American ships, at war prices, ranging from $220 to $250 a ton. It is proposed to spend $2,000,000,000 more. While we are building on this basis the head of the Shipping Board says we must 'write off' a billion dollars. Practical builders say that is not enough. Where is this magic treasury that makes it possible to write off two, three, four, five or six billions? If we had any confidence in ourselves we would say 'not another ship at war prices.'"

Senator Harding said that while the Shipping Board had been paying $220 to $250 a ton for steel ships Great Britain was paying only $90.

EXPECTS EXTRA SESSION.

Mann Believes Democrats in Congress Are Trying to Force It.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—James R. Mann, the Republican leader, reminded the House today that only four of the fourteen appropriation measures had been passed in the first seven weeks of the short session, and that only six weeks remained for passage of supply bills and other legislation.

"Now, I do not know," said Representative Mann, "whether the President has directed the Democratic side of the House to force an extra session of Congress or not, but it looks as though he had. In addition to the appropriation bills we have an unusual bill, a census bill, yet to be disposed of, and the revenue bill, also a bill providing for the purchase of wheat at the price guaranteed by the Government, and a number of other unusual bills which must be disposed of."

THREE SHIPS BRING 5,000 TROOPS HOME

Transports George Washington, De Kalb, and Giuseppi Verdi Dock Here.

INDIAN CHIEF DECORATED

Sioux Brave Stopped Four Germans and Was Twice Wounded.

Nearly 4,000 troops and 1,000 navy men from the seaplane, mine sweeping, and destroyer bases in France and the shores of the Mediterranean, arrived yesterday on the United States transports George Washington and De Kalb, and the Italian liner Giuseppe Verdi, and were enthusiastically welcomed down the bay by the committee on the Police Boat Patrol, and by the crowds waiting outside the piers at Hoboken.

The Italian liner went to her own pier in Jersey City, near the Pennsylvania Ferry Slip, as she had a number of civilians on board, in addition to the 480 navy men. There were 3,047 troops on the George Washington, including the 49th Infantry, numbering 28 officers and 1,860 enlisted men.

Included in the total were about 900 sick and wounded, of whom 121 were stretcher cases which were sent to either the Greenhut Hospital or to Camp Merritt.

There was also the Headquarters of the 81st Division, Brigade Headquarters of the 166th Infantry, 308th Supply Train, 110 casual officers, 15 army nurses, and 43 civilians. Commander Perkins, the executive officer of the George Washington, said that she was a day late because of bad weather, but that the wounded and sick patients in the wards did not suffer much discomfort, as the vessel did not roll or pitch very much.

General Chamberlain Returns.

The senior army officer was Brig. Gen. Chamberlain, who commanded the United States Coast Artillery Corps, which included three brigades, and operated all heavy railway guns from eight to sixteen inches calibre. Brig. Gen. Wilber E. Wilder of the Headquarters Staff was also a passenger.

Corporal Walter Snow of the 172d Infantry, an American Indian chief known as "Little Drop," who also arrived, wears a Croix de Guerre, which was pinned upon his breast by a French General. The Indian fighter was on outpost duty one night on the Verdun sector when he saw four German soldiers carrying a machine gun toward their trench. He dropped two with bullets from his rifle, and the two others beat a hasty retreat to their own lines. He bears two wound stripes on his right arm, is a Sioux, and was born in Oklahoma twenty-four years ago.

There were a number of soldiers from New York and Brooklyn on board, who had been wounded in the St. Mihiel and Argonne sectors, and were returning home convalescent. One of them was Captain James B. Loughborough, formerly a well-known New York newspaper man, who fought with the 306th Infantry in the Vesle and the Aisne sectors, and was severely gassed on Aug. 24.

Lieutenant W. P. Erwin of Chicago, attached to the 1st Aero Squadron, has nine Hun machines to his credit, and at Verdun last September he was wounded while fighting three enemy planes, and fell 1,000 feet. He has the D. S. C., the French War Cross, and the Aero Club gold medal. Another passenger was Major M. A. Hall, Wing Commander of the First Army, who served with the British forces before America entered the war and has the Croix de Guerre with palm, the D. S. C., the Belgian War Cross twice, and also the Order of Chevalier of the Order of the Crown. He was transferred to the American Army in December, 1917, and took part in the fighting at Château-Thierry, the Marne, the Vesle, St. Mihiel, the Argonne, and Verdun. He has arranged with Lieutenant Erwin to fly across the Atlantic when they are discharged from the army.

Several Aviators Return.

The Giuseppe Verdi brought back officers and men from the American naval air service, among whom were several aviators who had distinguished themselves in air fighting. Among them were Ensigns Ludlow and Hamman of Evanston, Ill., and Baltimore, Md. On Aug. 21 they were two aviators out of four who went up in single seaters to act as escort to a big bombing plane, and they also dropped bundles of propaganda matter on Pola, the Austrian naval base. The bomber was 10,000 feet up and the planes 2,000 feet higher still. Five Austrian Phoenix planes attacked the bomber, Lieutenant Hamman said, and the escort went for them hard. The guns on the two other American planes were jammed and Ludlow had to tackle three, leaving two of the enemy planes to Hamman. Ludlow said:

"I shot one plane, and he went down in a crash from about 7,500 feet, but the remaining two made it hot for me. We had 'dog fighting' for a while, and at last a machine gun bullet broke through the crank case to my engine, and within a few moments two more found the wires to the magneto, and the magneto as well, and the short circuit set fire to oil on the engine.

"As the motor caught fire I took the only chance that I knew of—one chance in a million, I guess—and started downward at a speed of probably 200 miles an hour in a spiral nose dive. Half the way down the rush of air put out the flames, and I leveled out at a height of 1,500 feet.

"I had two cylinders working out of the six, and home was seventy-five miles away. Then a shot from one of the fellows who had stuck to me tore away my propeller and another 'pinged' the top of my helmet, and I went down in my seat in a heap, wounded, I thought, but I wasn't. It was only a scratch, and the blue Adriatic was my last chance. Luckily my steering controls were intact, and although I landed kerplunk into the sea I was only shaken up.

"The Austrian chased me down, but he didn't fire. I guess because his gun had jammed. Suddenly Hamman appeared and dropped into the sea forty yards away. It was a handsome thing to do with a choppy sea running, but he had seen my difficulties and had followed me down. Later I learned he shook off the two Austrians by going into a cloud."

ORDERS 27TH HOME; PLANS PARADE HERE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The homeward flow of American fighting units which had the opportunity to distinguish themselves in action will soon begin. The War Department announced today that three famous National Guard divisions—the 27th (New York,) 30th (Wild Cat,) and the 37th (Buckeye)—had been ordered to prepare for embarkation.

There was no information as to when the divisions would start from French ports, but heretofore it has required several weeks for units to embark after being assigned to early convoy.

Divisions having a distinguished fighting record and others having a distinctive local identity in the United States will be kept together after their return from France until they can be paraded at home and receive the welcome that the people are anxious to bestow upon them.

No definite plans as to the three divisions now designated for early return have been made here, but it is assumed at the War Department that the various units of each division will be sent home close together, so that it will be no hardship upon the men who arrive first to keep them organized until the entire division can be paraded.

Other divisions which will be paraded on their return are the 26th (New England) and the 42d (Rainbow.) Secretary Baker indicated today that he had practically determined to have the Rainbow Division, which is composed of troops from nearly all States, march in review both in New York and Washington. The 26th probably will parade in Boston.

27th to Go Into Camp.

It is assumed here that the 27th Division, commanded by the only National Guard officer who retained the rank of Division Commander throughout the war, Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan, will be sent to a camp or cantonment convenient to New York. Similarly the 30th Division will go to a Southern camp where it can be reviewed by the people of North and South Carolina and Tennessee, from which States came its original personnel. The 37th, under this policy, will be concentrated at Camp Sherman, or some other point in Ohio.

The 27th and the 30th Divisions were commended by Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, the British Commander in Chief, whose official report at the close of the war gave to these American troops, then serving with the British Fourth Army, credit for breaking the Hindenburg line in Flanders.

MISS JESSIE ASHLEY DEAD.

Socialist, Suffragist, and Lawyer a Victim of Pneumonia.

Miss Jessie Ashley, lawyer, writer, speaker, Socialist, and woman suffrage worker, and one of the three founders of the National Birth Control League of America, died Monday at her home, 102 East Fifty-second Street, of pneumonia.

Miss Ashley was born in New York City, a daughter of the late Ossian and Harriet Nash Ashley, and after attending school in New York and in Berlin, she studied law at the New York University Law School, where in 1902 she received the degree of LL. B., and a year later the LL. M. degree. Miss Ashley had filled the position of private quizzer for men and women for the New York Bar Association and for the University Law School examinations. She was also lecturer in the woman's law class of the New York University.

Miss Ashley was for two years President of the Collegiate Equal Suffrage League and one time Treasurer of the National Woman's Suffrage League. She was a member of the New York County Lawyers' Association, the Women Lawyers' Club, and the Woman's Municipal League. She ran for Associate Judge of the Court of Appeals on the Socialist ticket in 1912.

She is credited with having been of much benefit to the labor movement in the strikes at Lawrence, Mass.; Little Falls, N. Y.; Paterson, N. J., and the first women's waist makers' strike in New York.

In October, 1910, Miss Ashley was fined $50 in the Court of Special Sessions for preaching birth control and distributing the literature of the propaganda to a crowd in Union Square.

In April, 1917, Miss Ashley received considerable notoriety when she and her escort, Frederick Boyd, a writer for The Call, a Socialist newspaper, refused to stand when the orchestra played "The Star-Spangled Banner" in Rector's restaurant. Sentence was suspended on Boyd when arraigned in the Men's Night Court.

Fair quantities of several constructions were sold by first hands at lower levels than obtained before the break in cotton on Monday. Among the transactions in print cloths reported were sales of 39-inch 72-76s and 68-72s at 14¾ and 12½ cents, respectively; 38½-inch 64-60s at 10¼ cents, and 32-inch 64-60s at 9 cents. In sheetings 36-inch 6.50s went at 8¾ cents.

Sales of Table Linen.

The sale of table linens at present is considered fair by firms handling this class of merchandise. In view of the shortage of raw materials used in these goods, there are still some retail houses which are under the impression that there will be a decline in the market. According to one of the leading linen firms this is not likely to happen. Owing to the depleted stocks now on hand, the prices are more apt to advance. It is very difficult at present to secure lines of table cloths with napkins to match.

Silks Women Are Buying.

Silk buyers in the city are only nibbling, the big houses say. They are looking around trying to decide what lines will be the most to their advantage. They might strike anything and not go wrong, according to the taste of the public as is shown in the retail buying. All lines are going equally well, the retailers say—prints, fancies, plain, and sport silks. The rough sports silks are stunning, white always taking the lead. Some have a broad satin stripe and in one which is apparently an all-over rough silk shows in certain lights a block pattern. As a contrast to the brilliant sport colors there is shown a strong tendency among the women buyers for black in satin and charmeuse, a fancy that has been in the background for some years. These will make up into suits as well as gowns.

Anticipating the Strike.

Anticipating the strike that began in the garment trade yesterday morning, there was a decided increase in the sale of women's cotton waists. Retailers throughout the country were told of the existing conditions in the trade by salesmen on the road. The result was that large orders were placed, especially in the South and on the Pacific Coast. During the latter part of last week out-of-town buyers who were in the city devoted much attention to these lines.

Jobbing Trade Holding Off.

Manufacturers of men's wool sweaters find that there is a tendency on the part of the jobbing trade to hold off to some extent. Orders that are now being received for Fall are fairly good, but are not in proportion to those taken last season. Despite these facts, the retailers are said to be buying very liberally. One seller in this line said that if the jobbers continued to hold off he would dispose of his merchandise direct to the retail trade.

Disposing of Camisoles.

There is a wide difference of opinion in the women's undergarment trade regarding the present outlook for the sale of camisoles. Some firms in this line say that that the men on the road find that there is but little demand for this merchandise, and that buyers are waiting until there is a reduction in price. Other firms selling the higher class trade are of the opinion that these articles are selling as well as ever, especially in the local trade where there is a good sale for camisoles retailing for $2.50 each.

Looking for Price Reduction.

The call for crêpe de chine and satin underwear in the retail trade appears to be slowing up, according to firms in this line. Salesmen who are now in various sections of the country report that smaller orders are being placed, and lower prices are anticipated by the retail stores. Although there are a number of out-of-town buyers in the city who are interested in these goods, the orders that are being received are comparatively small. In regard to the question of prices some of the manufacturers claim that these are more likely to advance than decrease.

New York's Next Fur Sale.

Announcement has been made of the offerings of the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation, which will be auctioned off without reserve beginning on Feb. 3 at 10 A. M. at Masonic Hall, 71 West Twenty-third Street. The sale will probably continue until the evening of Feb. 8. Purchasers will be allowed a discount of 1 per cent. on all amounts paid before prompt day, which is March 3, and, in addition, interest at 8 per cent. on such amounts. Goods will be on show on and after Jan. 29. The pelts are varied, including both foreign and domestic, and there are a number to be sold for A. Mitchell Palmer, Alien Property Custodian. The largest of the offerings is one of 650,000 muskrat and the next largest that of 280,000 mole. Foxes, the cats, mink, marten, opossum, skunk, nutria, &c., are well represented in the collection.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Baer & Lillenthal, resident buyers, 1,150 Broadway, have added the accounts of Mayers-Arnold Company of Greenville, S. C., and Meyers Brothers of Newport News, Va.

P. S. Farmer, resident buyer, has engaged Miss M. H. Bourke to assist as buyer of women's ready-to-wear. She was for four years buyer of such goods in the local office of the Associated Dry Goods Company. On Jan. 27 Mr. Farmer will remove to larger quarters on the twentieth floor of the building at 212 Fifth Avenue, where he is now located.

The Ely & Walker Dry Goods Company of St. Louis will on Feb. 1 remove from 395 Broadway to 56 Worth Street.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

The further decline of railroad stocks yesterday appeared to reflect considerable confusion of mind among owners of these securities over developments at Washington, a condition which made easier the success of professional traders on the downward side of prices. The discussion pro and con of possible freight rate increases the day before was switched to consideration of the Interstate Commerce Commission's action in overruling the Director General in case of particular Western rates. A superficial reading of the commission's findings made them appear more comprehensive in application than they will probably prove to be, but the uncertainty caused by the indefinite state of the whole railroad situation reacted on sentiment in the market. The Commerce Commission evidently acted to even up competitive rates in case of certain lumber shipments, a step which it had the right to take under the law. The stock market as a whole lost considerable ground, with marked irregularity showing here and there among industrial issues of a sort to indicate that traders were perplexed over various factors affecting speculative opinion. Steel common moved forward at the same time that some of its companion stocks were inclined to be weak. The copper group displayed a fairly firm front much of the time and closed not greatly changed from the final quotations of the day before. It was in case of the railroad shares, automobile stocks, and a number of specialties that the weak character of the market was most clearly expressed.

Discussion of the Commerce Commission's ruling had as one of its chief points the reference to the war ending "when the armistice was signed." It was felt in security market circles that if this construction of the armistice should be upheld a marked alteration of the railroad outlook would come about. It would tend to limit the period in which a plan for a return of the carriers to their owners was to be completed, and the imagination of speculators went further, making reference to the status of Government control of telegraph and cable lines in case the armistice could be considered as actually ending the war emergency. Needless to say, the point raised by the commission was looked upon in conservative quarters as something by no means final and which supplied no cause for the radical unsettlement of former ideas about the time when peace shall actually be considered as complete. The weakness of stocks was felt in the bond market, but to a small extent only. Liberty bonds continue to show in unimportant price changes the moderate balance which has existed for some days past in favor of selling pressure over investment demand. It is significant of the attitude of institutions toward Liberty bonds at current prices that large investment purchases are being reported.

Call money was somewhat firmer, the rise from 4 per cent. to 4½ per cent. for the majority of loans reflecting, apparently, the heavy withdrawals of Government deposits which were made during the day. The steps taken by representatives of many banks and business organizations to promote the use of acceptances, which occurred at a local meeting, is worthy of reference in connection with the money market in view of the importance they may have later in the financing of domestic and foreign business.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Some Bonds Show Weakness.

The bond market was sluggish yesterday, with some of the traction issues selling to new low records. Interborough Rapid Transit refunding 5s and Interborough-Metropolitan 4½s moved off steadily, while Brooklyn Rapid Transit 7 per cent. notes again touched their previous low established about a week ago. In the general bond market dealers reported that, while there are inquiries for short-term issues, the railroad bonds and industrial offerings which cover a term of years are not in favor. The new issue of Pennsylvania Railroad 5s, maturing in 1968, sold off to 97¼ on the Stock Exchange. No large issue of long-time bonds is expected in this market until after the final offering of Victory Liberty bonds in April.

Baltimore & Ohio Notes.

As Feb. 1 approaches railroad operators and bankers show increasing interest in the manner in which the $22,500,000 notes and bank loans of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company will be met. No definite statement has as yet been made by the company's bankers, but it is generally believed in authoritative quarters that a further extension of the notes will be requested. It is also understood that the matter rests entirely with the War Finance Corporation and the Railroad Administration, and it has been suggested that the former will probably decide to take up the Baltimore & Ohio notes that holders do not want to extend. In the case of other railroad note and bank loan extensions this method of meeting the situation has been resorted to. The Baltimore & Ohio Directors met yesterday and declared the regular 2 per cent. quarterly dividend on the common and preferred stock without making its payment dependent upon the receipts of funds from the Railroad Administration. Just how long an extension will be arranged has not been decided upon as yet, but it is reported that it will carry over the next Liberty Loan campaign far enough to allow for some substantial financing by the company.

Railroad Shares Drop Sharply.

The wave of selling which served to depress prices of the standard railroad shares in the stock market on Monday was evident shortly after the opening yesterday, and there were persistent offerings of stock. This increased in volume about the middle of the day and prices dropped from fractions to 3½ points. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul preferred moved off from a high at 69 to 65½ at the close. The opening quotation was 68⅜. New York Central, New Haven, Great Northern preferred, and others among the railroad stocks were under pressure and sold at lower figures. There were some recoveries before the close, but the market for these issues remained apathetic. The liquidation of the rails was generally attributed to the lack of positive news from Washington on the railroad situation.

Marine Insurance Market Active.

There is a refreshing quality about the continued increase in the activity of the local marine insurance market when the stock market appears to be only moderately busy. Underwriters report that business is developing so rapidly that the one thing they fear is their inability to handle it. In 1914 there were fifty-eight companies or associations authorized by this State to write and carry on the business of marine insurance, according to the State Insurance Department. On Jan. 1, 1918, there were 109 companies or associations of the same character, and a still further increase is indicated.

Hope to Salvage Wooden Ships.

In shipping quarters there has been considerable discussion recently regarding the wooden ships constructed by the Government during the war period. It is hoped that some way will be found to salvage these vessels which have become known among shipowners as "lame ducks," and it has been suggested more than once that they can be converted into sailing ships. This, it was said, would mean the ripping out of engines at prohibitive cost, and would not be practical. In marine circles there is every hope that the ships will survive, and not go to the junk pile.

Hide and Leather Is Lower.

The quarterly report of the American Hide and Leather Company, which was published yesterday, compared unfavorably with the corresponding period in the preceding year, and while it was much better than had been expected in certain quarters in the financial district, the preferred stock felt the pressure of selling orders and moved off to 80⅛ after opening at 83. In the later trading, however, there was some good buying which served to aid the issue in the recovery of a part of the loss. The closing quotation was 81⅛.

City Bank Wants More Power.

The National City Bank has applied to the Federal Reserve Board for permission to assume certain trust and fiduciary powers, which were provided for by an amendment of the Federal Reserve act several months ago. The Hanover National took similar steps some time ago. The banks may act as trustees, administrators, &c., under the statute, powers which formerly were exercised by trust companies alone among banking institutions.

Convert United Kingdom Notes.

J. P. Morgan & Co. announced yesterday that with the approval of the British Treasury they have completed the organization of a group of banks and bankers which has underwritten the conversion on Feb. 1 of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland 5½ per cent. notes which may remain unconverted upon that date. It was also learned that about half of the original issue, or $143,000,000 of the notes, have been converted into twenty-year 5½ per cent. bonds of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

To Issue New Air Reduction Stock.

Stockholders of the Air Reduction Company will be asked at a special meeting scheduled for Feb. 19 to approve an increase in the common stock of the company to 258,320 shares of no par value. Subject to the approval of the stockholders, the Directors will offer 47,082 shares of the common stock to common stockholders of record on that date at $50 a share, this being 40 per cent. of their respective holdings. The Directors urge that common stockholders subscribe for only 20 per cent. of their holdings, so that part of the new shares which is not subscribed, to the number of 10,504 shares, will be set aside for the conversion of 5,252 shares of preferred stock which is held by French holders who did not feel that they could convert their stock into common when other holders of the preferred did so. This conversion will eliminate all of the company's preferred stock. The company has trebled its business and earnings and is now operating twenty oxygen plants.

WANT PEACE PARLEY TO AID IN MEXICO

Powerful Banking Interests Join in Move to Send Delegation to Versailles.

FIVE GROUPS REPRESENTED

Some of the most powerful banking interests in the city, among them J. P. Morgan & Co., the Guaranty Trust Company, the First National Bank, and the National City Bank, have become identified with the National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico and will lend support to the determination of the association to send representatives to the Peace Conference at Paris in the hope that a solution of the difficulties can be decided upon there. The proposal of the association to send such delegates abroad, which has been under consideration for several weeks, was formally ratified at a meeting of the Executive Committee yesterday morning at the offices of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company. As yet no delegates have been named. The Executive Committee decided that each of the various groups of interests identified with the association should have the privilege of designating a representative, so that there would be a delegation equipped with all of the facts regarding each phase of the Mexican question.

The association now represents five distinct interests in Mexico, namely, mining and smelting, petroleum, industrial, and banking, and two more may be added shortly, transportation and labor. E. L. Doheny, President of the Mexican Petroleum Company, it is believed, will be selected as the delegate to represent American oil interests. It is the belief that the mining men will have as their representative Cornelius F. Kelley, Vice President of the Anaconda Copper Company, which is interested in the Mexican situation through its holdings n Greene-Cananea. Mr. Kelley is already planning a trip to Europe in the interests of the recently formed Copper Export Association. Thomas W. Lamont, one of the partners in J. P. Morgan & Co., is to sail for Europe shortly in the interest of the Treasury Department, and for this reason it is improbable that he will act for the National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico, although he may be an adviser to the delegation. It is known that Mr. Lamont has been keenly interested in Mexican affairs and that, while he has not attended all of the meetings of the National Association, he has usually had present as his alternate Martin Egan, also of Morgan & Co. The latter was in attendance at yesterday's Executive Committee meeting.

It is said that there has not been thus far any active co-operation between the National Association and similar associations which it is known either are forming or have been formed, in other countries, notably England, France, and Canada. It is understood, however, that there will be closer co-operation in the future, and that whatever action is taken in Paris will be the result of concerted action by all interests which have affiliations in Mexico. E. L. Doheny, speaking for the National Association, said:

"We sincerely hope and believe that the consideration of the problems which will arise in the new countries that will be created will also furnish a solution for the vexed question existing in Mexico.

"In my opinion there will be involved in the discussions a question which is applicable not only to Governments already established, but particularly to Governments which may be established on the ruins of those that have lately ceased to exist. Out of the territory of the four great empires that have recently disintegrated in Central and Eastern Europe will be constructed many different States, with entirely new and perhaps different forms of government than those which formerly existed.

"The question which has been raised by the Mexican Government is one which will necessarily arise in each of the new score or more of countries that will be formed in Eastern Europe. Will the people holding the reins in these new Governments act as though they had descended by means of some great space navigating craft, from Mars, the moon, or other celestial body, on an uninhabited planet, and proceed to appropriate for the Government which they may form, all of the land and other forms of property which exist, or will they be compelled by the decent public opinion of mankind to conform to the well established usages of all civilized nations when occupying conquered lands and respect the rights both in person and in property ofthe inhabitants thereof?

"In the expansion of the United States over the area which it now occupies, outside of the original thirteen colonies, whether acquired by purchase or by conquest, the rights both in person and in property of all the inhabitants have always been fully recognized. Our courts have even confirmed in the holders of Spanish grants within the boundaries of Arizona New Mexico, and California greater privileges thanu were given by either the Spanish or Mexican Government to the original grantees.

BRITISH LOAN RECOVERS.

Announcement of Conversion Rights Causes Rise in 4½% Issue.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The 4½ per cent. war loan today recovered from yesterday's decline of 8 points to 91½, and was quoted at the opening at 99 in consequence of an announcement by the Government that the loan would have conversion rights in the new issue of 5 per cent. National War Bonds for five or ten years.

The issue of new war bonds completely surprised the financial market where it had been thought for some time that any fresh borrowings would take the form of a long-term loan at a lower rate of interest.

Much dissatisfaction was expressed on the Stock Exchange at yesterday's quotations on the 4½ per cent. war loan which slumped when the conversion rights lapsed with the withdrawal of the seven-year war bonds. The unexpected announcement by the Government last night that the new war bonds would carry equally the valuable conversion rights for the 4½ per cent. war loan caused a sharp recovery in the 4½ per cents today and it is believed that yesterday's transactions will be canceled officially.

Corn Exchange Capital Increased.

Stockholders of the Corn Exchange National Bank, at their annual meeting yesterday, ratified the proposed increase in the capital of the bank from $3,500,000 to $4,200,000 by the issuance of 7,000 shares at $100 each. Retiring Directors were re-elected.

COTTON SLUMPS, THEN RISES

Reports of Exports Indicate Larger Takings to Run Through Month.

After breaking to some new low records for the present movement, yesterday's cotton market turned, and on buying of a rather good character recovered well, finishing the day at gains of 5 to 45 points over Monday's closing. The buying which turned the market upward came from local trade and ring sources, with some of the so-called Wall Street houses participating. The selling was mostly for Southern account. Liverpool appeared to be more or less out of the market for the moment.

The technical position yesterday was considerably strengthened by the early selling, coming, as it did, on top of heavy selling on Monday, and a fairly large amount of short covering was reported in the afternoon. In addition, trade advices were somewhat more reassuring, especially with regard to the export movement, which shows signs of expanding to very respectable proportions. Yesterday's reports of exports were good, and it was generally believed that from now to the end of the month efforts will be made to forward more of the staple than has been moving in the recent past.

The early break in the January option was credited to the circulation of notices, estimated at 2,000 bales. When these were stopped, however, the price quickly recovered to around 25.50c, a gain of more than $5 a bale. This rally carried other old crop options up, and the more popular new crop options also improved, so that at the close the market showed a better tone and higher prices than those of the previous day.

THREE GUGGENHEIMS RETIRE AS OFFICERS

Relinquish Active Management of American Smelting Co. to Younger Men.

SIMON TO BE PRESIDENT

Daniel and Murry Will Continue on Directorate, While S. R. Guggenheim Will Withdraw Entirely.

The active management of the great mining and smelting interests of the American Smelting & Refining Company and the American Smelters' Securities Company has been relinquished to younger hands by Daniel Guggenheim, Murry Guggenheim and S. R. Guggenheim. Their retirement was announced yesterday. Daniel Guggenheim was succeeded as president of the two companies by Simon Guggenheim, a younger brother, who was formerly a United States Senator from Colorado. The retiring head of the metal concern plans to leave for California next week for an extended trip, and on his return his only connection with the corporations will be as a director. Simon Guggenheim was formerly Chairman of the Board of Directors and was succeeded in this office by Edgar L. Newhouse, previously First Vice President.

Murry Guggenheim retired as Chairman of the Finance Committees of the companies, which have always been closely affiliated, and as a member of the Executive Committees and was succeeded by Simon Guggenheim. The former will continue as a director. S. R. Guggenheim withdrew from both the Chairmanship of the Executive Committee and from the directorate, the office of Executive Committee Chairman being filled by the new President.

"For many years the senior members of the firm of Guggenheim Brothers have been the dominant factors in the management of the affairs of the American Smelting & Refining Company and of the American Smelting Securities Company," said Daniel Guggenheim in a statement to stockholders yesterday, "and have occupied a number of the most important official positions in these companies. They feel that if these companies are to retain and improve their business positions it is advisable to turn over the management and control to younger and more aggressive men. They believe the time has now arrived when they are warranted in making a change in the management of these companies, and it has been decided that three of the older members of the firm of Guggenheim Brothers should retire, so that the important offices of President, Chairman of the Executive Committee and Chairman of the Finance Committee may be filled by others.

"It is the expressed wish of the Board of Directors that the Hon. Simon Guggenheim, formerly United States Senator, who for the past six years has been active in the management of these companies, as Chairman of the Board of Directors, should succeed to the Presidency of the smelting company and the securities company. He is a very capable merchant, experienced in the smelting business, and by temperament well qualified to fill the position of President. The other offices will be filled by men now connected with the companies, who are in every respect fully capable of filling the same. It is the intention of Mr. Murry Guggenheim and myself to remain as members of the Board of Directors, and we will place our services at the disposal of the Directors of the companies in an advisory capacity, but without compensation.

"In making the changes herein outlined we are doing so at a time when the earnings of the past fiscal year are satisfactory and the finances of the companies are in excellent shape. As to the immediate future, because of the problems of reconstruction confronting the whole world, some difficult months may be expected, but I am a great optimist as to the future, based upon the enormous demands that must be made for raw materials. These demands will be felt as soon as the various business interests realize that prices and supplies are at a low ebb.

"Those succeeding to our positions are contemplating putting into effect many excellent plans which will be of prime importance and which will, I believe, insure their signal success in directing the affairs of the companies. During the years of my Presidency many important reforms in the business have been inaugurated, and none more important, in my judgment, than permitting its important managing and operating officials and employes a participation in the profits of the companies. I consider this an opportune time, because of some unfriendly intimations which have reached me from a few shareholders of the companies, to state that no member of the firm of Guggenheim Brothers has ever participated in any way in such distribution of profits. I take this occasion to express my very best wishes for the continued success of these great corporations."

Ex-Senator Guggenheim has been associated with his brothers in the mining business for the last thirty years, except for the six years from 1907 on, when he was at Washington. He was born in Philadelphia on Dec. 30, 1867, educated in that city and in Europe, and became local manager of the Philadelphia Smelting and Refining Company's plant at Pueblo, Col., in 1888. Later he became interested in the Mexican operations of the Guggenheim properties. He is married and has two sons.

At the Guggenheim offices it was said yesterday that the new plans referred to in Daniel Guggenheim's statement comprised suggestions which the "younger blood" had made and did not bear on specific undertakings. It is expected that the expansion of operations in Mexico will be included in the measures in view.

In coupon form for $1,000 each with provision for registration of principal. Dividends payable January 1 and July 1. The Pennsylvania Company for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuities, Philadelphia, Trustee.

The Certificates represent, at par, only 70% of the cash contract cost of new railway equipment pledged with the Trustee, which retains title until all the Certificates have been paid. With this large initial cash payment and the retirement of 10% of the certificates each year, over 50% of the equipment cost will have been paid within three years.

Under the provisions of the Statutes of Canada relating to the Canadian Northern Railway Company, the rentals payable by the company under the lease of the trust equipment rank as a working expenditure of the railway, and thus constitute a claim against its earnings prior to both principal and interest of all its mortgage debt.

The Canadian Northern Railway is owned by the Government of the Dominion of Canada, which has acquired the outstanding $100,000,000 capital stock under authority of Acts of the Dominion Parliament.

PLAN CAMPAIGN FOR TRADE ACCEPTANCES

New Organization Will Urge Their Use by Bankers and Merchants.

LOCAL COUNCILS TO AID

Governor Harding of Reserve Board Says New Legislation May Be Sought to Expand Demand.

The American Acceptance Council, which springs from the American Trade Acceptance Council, was organized yesterday at a meeting in the rooms of the Merchants' Association in the Woolworth Building. Articles of association were adopted and an Executive Committee, which is ultimately to consist of twenty-four members, eight of whom will be chosen later, was appointed. This committee consists of the following: L. B. Pierson, Paul M. Warburg, Morton H. Fry, J. H. Tregoe of New York, D. G. Wing of Boston, William A. Law of Philadelphia, Forrest Ferguson of St. Louis, Jerome Thralls of New York, A. J. Sands of Richmond, Va., J. F. Holdsworthy of Pittsburgh, Charles W. Dupuis of Cincinnati, M. A. Taylor of Chicago, J. T. McCarty, Houston, Texas; Randall N. Durfee, Fall River, Mass.; Henry Burden, Cazenovia, N. Y., and Herbert C. Freeman.

The meeting was presided over by Mr. Pierson, and was addressed by W. P. G. Harding, Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, and by Paul M. Warburg, formerly Vice Governor of the Federal Reserve Board. Jerome Thralls, Chairman of the special committee appointed to draw up the plan whereby the American Trade Acceptance Council was reorganized as the American Acceptance Council, presented his report and plan, which were adopted.

Purpose of the Organization.

The purpose of the new organization, as set forth in the articles of association, is "to conduct a nation-wide educational campaign, designed to inform the business people and bankers as to the merits of trade and bank acceptances, the method of their use in foreign and domestic merchandising, and for the additional purpose of aiding in the establishment of a comprehensive open discount market and to assist in other matters that will improve the credit system and strengthen the financial position of America."

It is planned to organize Acceptance Councils in many cities throughout the country. To this end an Organization Committee will be appointed to make an immediate survey of the United States. The local councils will work with the central body and every effort will be made to popularize acceptances both with business interests and with banks and other possible investment interests.

Views of Governor Harding.

Governor Harding, in his address, laid stress on the desirability of popularizing the acceptance, and pointed out that with the withdrawal of the Government from the short-term market there was an unusual opportunity for accomplishing this at the present time. As for hostility toward the acceptance on the part of some large commercial houses, Governor Harding said he thought this arose from a fear that widespread use of acceptances might lead to abuses of the practice, and expressed the opinion that in preventing, or correcting abuses the Acceptance Council could do valuable work. Governor Harding also said that the Federal Reserve Board was contemplating asking for legislation which, he thought, would further expand the investment demand for acceptances. In this respect the plan now considered, he said, was to ask that national banks be allowed to "accept" to 200 per cent. of their capital and surplus, the whole amount being divided: 50 per cent. for domestic acceptances; 50 per cent. for "dollar exchange"; 100 per cent. for acceptances growing out of export or import business. This would apply, he said, only to banks whose capital and surplus were $1,000,000 or more.

Mr. Warburg, while agreeing with Mr. Harding on most points, took issue with him on the desirability of increasing the legal limits of acceptance by banks and advocated in place of this the creation of new companies whose business will be essentially that of accepting.

"There is nobody that is more ambitious than I in wishing the United States to become a leader in the acceptance business," said Mr. Warburg, "but I believe the basis for it must be furnished by a proportionate increase in capital and surplus, or by organizing a growing number of acceptance corporations, or by interesting a growing number of private banking firms, but not by unreasonably overextending the individual acceptance obligations."

As for the Acceptance Council, Mr. Warburg said he believed it could do invaluable service to the nation by informing business men of the use of the medium for financing their needs, and by enlisting the interest of banking firms and institutions in the investment possibilities presented.

WANT PROFITS DISTRIBUTED

Savage Arms Protective Committee Ask Proxies of Stockholders.

William Hamlin Childs, George C. Hollister, Neal Dow Becker, William D. Lyon, and Robert L. Kine, who have been chosen to act as a protective committee for holders of stock in the Savage Arms Corporation, have sent out a circular asking for proxies, in which they say that it is their opinion that the company, which was enlarged for war purposes, could and should distribute from $50 to $75 a share to the common stock holders.

The committee suggests that the distribution might be accomplished through a reduction of the capital stock. The circular, after stating the position of the committee, says in conclusion:

"If you agree with us that a substantial part of the assets accumulated during the war period through the manufacture of the Lewis gun should be returned to the holders of the stock now, we ask you to sign and return at once the proxy herewith inclosed."

Prices are sustained, but the market is barely steady at prices quoted. Buyers at top figures are very critical. Little doing in storage eggs on the open market. Some lots of very inferior stock are selling at any reasonable offers. Desirable qualities are still in demand and firm, with some sales of strictly prime Fall packings above previous quotations. ARMOUR CONDEMNS FEDERAL OWNERSHIP

Warns That Taking Over Packing Houses Would Dislocate Industry in General.

DENIES A MEAT MONOPOLY

Packer, at Inquiry, Says Earnings in 1918 Were Only 9 Per Cent. on Net Investment.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Appearing before the House Interstate Commerce Committee today in opposition to the bill providing for Government ownership of refrigerator cars and direction of stock yards, J. Ogden Armour, head of Armour & Co., denied that the so-called "Big Five" meat packers controlled the meat situation of the country and could regulate prices. He characterized the pending bill as confiscatory and intimated that in several features its constitutionality was doubtful.

Mr. Armour read a statement of more than 10,000 words in which he not only discussed the bill itself but referred to reports made on the packing industry by the Federal Trade Commission. Nearly every phase of the meat packing industry, including the financial aspect of his firm, was related by the witness. He submitted to cross-examination, but little was developed when the hearing adjourned to be continued tomorrow morning.

In denying the assertion that the packers could drive the small cattle dealers out of business and thereby control the price of meat, Mr. Armour said that this was physically impossible except by collusion among the big packers. There was no collusion, he said, and the markets were regulated entirely by business conditions. Control of the price of meats, he declared, rested upon the cost of production and supply and demand.

Denies Control of Prices.

"The so-called 'Big Five' cannot control the prices by reason of the fact that their business does not represent more than 40 per cent. of the business of the country," Mr. Armour said.

The witness saw in the pending bill, proposed by the Federal Trade Commission a move "to dissolve an alleged monopoly and decentralize the meat industry," and he warned Congress against disturbing present business relations.

"If a monkey wrench is thrown into the gears of this business its effects will not be confined to the meat packing industry," he asserted. "If the ability of the packing industry to properly function is impaired it will affect the live stock industry and it, in turn, will effect corn prices. Wheat will then be drawn in and so will bread and so will labor and so will everything that has for its basis the wealth produced by agriculture.

"The theories on which pending legislation is based are not constructive; they are not progressive. They are reactionary. They would disrupt the great manufacturing and marketing machines which half a century of enterprise has evolved and the results would be detrimental not alone to the leading industry of this nation, but even more so to that portion of the public which produces and which must have its product distributed, and to the entire public, which consumes food and which must have food brought within its reach to eat."

Touching upon the Constitutional question, Mr. Armour said:

"It is perhaps not becoming of me, a merchant and unfamiliar with legal problems, to even allude to the fact that a part of the proposed legislation may violate the Constitution. I may, however, be pardoned for saying that I have been advised by advisory counsel, who is now here for this company, that a part of the proposed legislation is probably unconstitutional."

Bacon was costing 70 cents a pound, whereas it cost 25 or 30 cents four years ago, because the price of hogs increased 245 per cent. between 1915 and 1919, said Mr. Armour. He asserted that in 1915 Armour & Co. paid for live hogs in Chicago on the average $7.10 a hundred pounds. In 1918 the price was $17.45 a hundred and it was even higher now, the witness testified. The increased cost of labor and fuel also entered into the present price of bacon.

Compares Sales and Profits.

In 1917 Armour & Co.'s gross sales amounted to $575,000,000 and the net profit on each dollar of sales was 3.7 cents as compared with a net profit of 1.8 cents on each dollar of sales in 1918, when the gross sales amounted to $861,000,000. The net income was at the rate of 9 per cent. on the average net invested capital.

Mr. Armour said that the company had been able to declare a 400 per cent. stock dividend in 1916 by reinvesting during the preceding years 71 per cent. of the aggregate earnings.

Discussing Goverment ownership, he said:

"Ownership by the Government implies red tape and restrictions which cannot help but add to the costs of the service—costs which must eventually be borne either by the producer or the consumer. Government ownership implies, too, the abolition of the private initiative and enterprise which has made it possible to erect efficient stockyards almost over night when occasion justified it.

"The Government, you know, does not make up its mind very quickly on such matters, as is evidenced by the years old controversies over the building of post offices or such comparatively trivial matters as to whether or not cities should have underground mail chutes. It is only because I fear less efficient operation and the consequent serious results that I make these comments, but I am entirely willing and ready to at once relinquish my holdings upon being allowed just compensation therefor."

In reference to a charge by the Federal Trade Commission that an attempt was being made to control the grocery trade, Mr. Armour described the development of by-products of the company's packing plants and declared the company had undertaken the sale of many lines which it did not manufacture only because of the demand from their customers, which could not obtain satisfactory service elsewhere. He denied that his firm had entered or intended to enter the retail business.

The packers' interests in stockyards and adjunct institutions, such as belt railways, rendering plants, serum plants, market newspapers and cattle loan associations, were declared by Mr. Armour to be a necessary outgrowth of the business, but not detrimental to the public welfare, as the Federal Trade Commission charged. All these things, the witness said, were essential to the successful marketing of livestock, without which the producer would suffer.

Ownership of Cars.

Questioned as to the Government ownership and operation of all refrigerator cars, Mr. Armour said that he believed the packers would suffer through decreased efficiency.

"The packers would have no objection to Government ownership or control of stock cars provided they could have some tangible guarantee that they would get the cars they need," he declared.

In reply to a question by Representative Esch (Wisconsin) on the effect of packer ownership of stockyards Mr. Armour said:

"If any one else can operate the stockyards as well as the packers I have no objection to their being operated by others. We think we get better efficiency out of our management than the railways get."

Representative Doremus asked Mr. Armour about the ownership of the Chicago stockyards and the increase in capitalization from $1,000,000 to $8,000,000. The witness declared that he was only a minority shareholder and that the increased capitalization was represented by property values in the yards.

"I think F. H. Prince is the other stockholder; as far as I know there are no others," he said.

In reply to questions by Representative Hamilton (Michigan), Mr. Armour replied that while meat prices would not be so high except for the European war, he did not believe they would have declined from the pre-war basis despite the increased production of cattle.

Representative Hamilton was particularly interested in Armour's connection with the Food Administration. The witness said that while many men had gone from the Armour firm to various branches of the Government, it so happened that none had gone to the Food Administration.

LOBBYIST IN OFFICIAL PARTY.

T. F. Logan Says He Went Abroad with Hurley and Hoover.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Thomas F. Logan, a Washington newspaper man and corporation agent for the packing house and other interests, told the Senate Agriculture Committee today of a trip he made to Europe in November with Herbert C. Hoover, Food Administrator, and Edward N. Hurley, Chairman of the Shipping Board, and of having participated in conferences with them over the food situation in Europe. Both Mr. Hoover and Mr. Hurley, he said, knew that he was lobbyist for the packers.

The Government paid Mr. Logan's expenses on the trip to Europe, he said, although he was still in the pay of the packers. His activities as agent in Washington, the witness stated, yielded a monthly income of $2,700, divided as follows: Swift & Co., $500; Atlantic Refining Company, $700; the General Electric Company, $500; the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, $500, and the Freeport Sulphur Company, $500. Besides this he receives an irregular salary of $500 a month from the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, while he is also Washington correspondent for The Philadelphia Inquirer.

Mr. Logan, in reply to a question, said he had "tipped off" to the packers the appointment of Mr. Hoover as Food Administrator three days before it was made by the President. Asked if he obtained the "tip" through Executive channels, he replied that he did not.

"Where did you get your information?" asked Senator France.

"From the newspapers and The Congressional Record, largely," replied Mr. Logan. "They cover the field admirably."

"That's all camouflage!" exclaimed Senator Kenyon, who asked if it were not true that Mr. Logan had written letters to the packers telling things that Joseph E. Davis, former head of the Federal Trade Commission, had revealed to him.

"There might be such a letter," admitted Mr. Logan.

"Then why do you sit here and try to tell this committee that you didn't know members of the Federal Trade Commission, as you did a few minutes ago?" demanded Mr. Kenyon.

The witness spoke of having known Mr. Hurley for four years. He explained that he was asked to go to Europe as an assistant to Mr. Hurley. The amount of money to be expended by the American Government to feed Europe was discussed at allied conferences that he attended, he said; but nothing was mentioned as to the allotment to be given individual packers in supplying American food products. He testified that when in Europe he had not communicated with the packers.

"Who paid your expenses abroad?" asked a Senator.

"The Shipping Board," was the reply.

"And you were still on the payroll of the packers?"

"Yes."

"What did these corporations do without you in Washington?" pursued Mr. Kenyon.

"That's why I came back; they needed me," replied the witness.

"And Mr. Hurley knew all about your connections with the packers?" asked Senator Kenyon.

"Oh, yes; he knew I was an adviser."

Mr. Logan denied that he used his friendship with Mr. Hurley to promote the adoption of an oil-burning boiler system for the American merchant shipping fleet.

HINES ADMITS POWER OF COMMERCE BOARD

Director General Denies There Was Any Controversy Over Railroad Rate Order.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—In his capacity as the new Director General of Railroads, Walker D. Hines tonight issued a formal statement in which he acknowledges the right of the Interstate Commerce Commission to review any of the rates initiated by the Director General on behalf of the President. He denies that the Director General "has sought to contest the right" of the commission to make such a review of rates, and insists that there is no controversy over their relative jurisdictions.

The statement was called forth by published accounts of the decision rendered by the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday in the Pacific Lumber Company case, in which the commission overruled the late order issued by former Director General McAdoo. It reads in part:

"It is distinctly unfortunate that several newspapers, in reporting this morning the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the Pacific Lumber Company case, have drawn the conclusion that there exists a controversy over the relative jurisdictions of the Director General and the Interstate Commerce Commission. It appears to be assumed in these stories that the Director General has denied or ought to contest the right of the Interstate Commerce Commission to review rates initiated by him on behalf of the President.

"As a matter of fact, nothing could be further from the truth. The Federal Control act places such power of review specifically in the hands of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Director General, time and time again, has recognized this authority by being represented before the commission by counsel who have argued as to the merits of contested rates.

"At no time since the Government took possession and control of the railroads has there been the faintest suggestion of any conflict in jurisdiction between the commission and the Director General. At all times the Director General has enjoyed the co-operation and assistance of the commission, and assurances to this effect have been most cordially given to the new Director General."

Of this amount $160,000,000 will be required for the Mississippi and its tributaries, James E. Smith, President of the association, said.

Hoover Plans Commissions for Trieste, Rumania, and Turkey.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—The Supreme Council of Supply and Relief at its meeting Monday, according to an official statement issued today, adopted a recommendation that interallied relief commissions be appointed for Trieste, Bucharest, and Constantinople. Herbert C. Hoover, the Director General of Relief, presided at the meeting.

The council decided to send a letter to Marshal Foch asking him to take immediate measures under the armistice to secure the transport of foodstuffs through Danzig for Poland.

Measures were taken to provision Finland, and also to obligate Germany to feed the Russian prisoners in Germany.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Industrials were firm and railroad issues reactionary at the close of the market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Trading, professional in character, was fairly active. With the exception of the rails, the market had little definite trend. Prices at the close were about the highest for the session in the leading industrials and about the lowest in the rails. Steel shares were firm throughout the day after the opening.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

In the lower downtown section an interesting deal was closed in the purchase by Baker, Carver & Morrell of the four-story commercial building at 87 Water Street, on a plot 28 by 83. It was bought from the New York Cotton Exchange, having been used for the inspection of cotton. It adjoins the eight-story building occupied by the buyers on the corner of Coenties Slip, and the firm was anxious to obtain it for additional space.

The Cotton Exchange offered to sell provided another suitable building in the neighborhood could be found for its use. The structure at 51 Water Street was acquired for that purpose by Baker, Carver & Morrell a short time ago, a five-story building on a plot 30 by 80, and nearer the Exchange than their former Water Street property. This was then given in exchange, closing a deal of mutual benefit.

William A. White & Sons were the brokers in both transactions.

Lively Bidding for Penn. Zone Property.

Several valuable parcels were offered at auction in the Vesey Street rooms by Joseph P. Day in the disposal of the properties of the estate of Charlotte Y. Ackerman. The chief competition arose for the gore-shaped plot at 135 West Thirty-third Street, opposite the new Pennsylvania Hotel. Bidding finally became a contest between Robert E. Dowling and Charles F. Noyes, the latter finally securing it for $42,000. The parcel has a frontage of 31.8 feet on Thirty-third Street, a depth of 98.9, and a width in the rear of 9 inches.

Other offerings included the three-story dwelling with a stable in the rear at the northeast corner of Riverside Drive and Eighty-second Street, an irregular shaped plot. It was started at $25,000, and after sixteen bids had been recorded was sold to Oscar Uns for $40,500; a three-story building at 260 West Twenty-fourth Street, on lot 16.8 by 98.8, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues bought by H. Leftin for $8,100, and the three-story building at 327 Seventh Avenue, bought by Ignatz Roth for $33,600. The lot is 24.8 by 99.9.

In speaking of the sale, Mr. Day said that the attendance evidenced the real awakening of an active real estate market that may be anticipated during the coming year, and that while prices will have to seek their level gradually, the fact that so many operators were interested in the sale and bid on the properties indicated that well-located properties can be successfully marketed.

Henry Van Arsdale Disposes of Another Heights Apartment.

Henry Van Arsdale of Newark, N. J., sold to Lauzner & Kahn the five-story apartment house, occupying plot 75 by 105, on the northwest corner of 178th Street and Northern Avenue. The property shows a gross annual rental of $16,000 and was held at $150,000.

On Monday Mr. Van Arsdale sold a similar property, adjoining, known as 42 Northern Avenue, to Vogel & Schulz. M. G. Strunsky and McDowell & McMahan negotiated both transactions.

Operators Buy Private Garage Held at $38,000.

Ennis & Sinnott, operators, purchased from the James Stillman estate, 170 East Seventy-third Street, a three-story private garage on a lot 25 by 100, held at $30,000. L. J. Phillips & Co. negotiated the sale.

In the Times Square section, the M. Morgenthau, Jr., Company sold for the Kineo Realty Company the three-story and basement altered dwelling at 150 West Forty-fourth Street, on plot 16.8 by 100.5. This completes the sale of the Kineo Realty Company's holdings in this section, the sale of its property at 141, 143, and 145 West Forty-third Street to the owner of the adjoining Hotel Woodstock having been announced last month.

A Harlem-Bronx Trade.

Matthew McNamara purchased from Frederick Brown, operator, 2,403 Grand Concourse, a four-story apartment on a plot 50 by 80, held at $40,000. In part payment the buyer gave 121 West 127th Street, a three-story dwelling on a lot 16 by 100, held at $9,000. W. R. Lowe negotiated the sale.

The properties are six-story structures, each on plot 49.2 by 99.11, adjoining the southeast corner of Eighth Avenue. The purchaser is a client of Freidus & Co. and Joseph Harrison.

The Bronx Market.

McLernon Brothers sold for a client to Vincent Riggio of the American Tobacco Company, a private residence at 2,282 Andrews Avenue, University Heights, on a plot of 88 by 100, just north of the Campus of the New York University. The same brokers also sold Regina Friedenberg, for investment, the five-story and apartment at 2,338 University Avenue, on a plot 44 by 100, located about 250 feet south of Fordham Road.

A Series of FACTS—3

Details

UNDER the constant supervision of the executive heads of this business, an experienced technical graduate directs the Management Department, assisted by a practical engineer, who study the operating requirements of our buildings to the smallest detail. The correction of even some minor mechanical fault in many instances has resulted in large savings in operating costs.

This is one factor that has made it profitable for owners of twenty-three leading apartment buildings in the Park Ave. Section to shift the entire burden of management responsibility to our shoulders.

Perhaps you'd like to know more about our service?

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Air pressure continues high east of the Mississippi River, and it is high and rising over the plains States, the Rocky Mountain and plateau regions. A belt of low pressure covers the Mississippi Valley, and has a fairly well defined storm centre at its southern extremity over the Rio Grande Valley.

Unseasonably warm weather prevails in practically all parts of the country. During the last twenty-four hours there were rains in Eastern Texas, Southern Louisiana, and the Pacific States, and rains and snows in the Western plateau and Northern Rocky Mountain regions.

Fair weather was general elsewhere, but with a widespread cover of clouds over the great central valleys and the region of the Great Lakes.

The weather will be generally fair and mild Wednesday and Thursday throughout the Atlantic States, the Upper Ohio Valley, and the Lower Lake region. In the Upper Lake region, the Lower Ohio, and Lower Mississippi Valleys the weather will be unsettled Wednesday and Thursday, with probably rain and lower temperature on Thursday.

Winds for Wednesday and Thursday along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate southeast and south; Middle Atlantic Coast, gentle to moderate east and southeast; South Atlantic Coast, gentle variable, but mostly east.

FORECAST, TODAY AND THURSDAY.

Eastern New York and Southern New England—Fair Wednesday. Thursday, cloudy; mild temperature.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Wednesday. Thursday, cloudy, probably becoming unsettled by Thursday night.

Western New York—Fair Wednesday, becoming unsettled Thursday; mild temperature.

Northern New England—Fair and warmer Wednesday. Thursday, cloudy.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

9 A. M.	12	38	9 P. M.	20	41
12 M.	21	44	11 P. M.	18	41

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 40; for the corresponding date last year it was 18; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 30.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 35; at 8 P. M. it was 41. Maximum temperature, 46 degrees at 11:15 A. M.; minimum, 34 degrees at 8:15 A. M. Humidity, 80 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 79 per cent at 8 P. M.

LABOR BOARD HEARS PORT BOAT OWNERS

WRANGLING MARKS HEARING

Expect to End Hearings in Time to Report to Full Board in Washington Next Week.

Counsel for the six unions comprising the marine affiliation yesterday finished the presentation of their evidence upon the demands for an eight-hour day and a 25 per cent increase in pay before the sub-committee of the National War Labor Board in session at City Hall. The Red Star Towing and Transportation Company and other boat owners immediately began to read their evidence into the records, and it is expected that the hearings will be completed this week, so that a report may be made to the entire War Labor Board in Washington next week.

Paul Bonynge, counsel for the boat owners, yesterday directed his line of questioning with all his witnesses to prove that the conditions of the tides in the harbor would not permit the operation of the actual eight-hour day because of the necessity of towing all ships and heavy scows when the water in the bay and the rivers was at its height. Part of his time also was spent in eliciting testimony to disprove the charges of profiteering by the boat owners and to show that the expenses of operation had increased more than 100 per cent since the beginning of the war.

Tiff Between Counsel.

A controversy between counsel for the opposing sides upon the demand of the unions that the profit sheets and all the books of the Red Star Company be submitted for inspection became so bitter at the afternoon session that Frank P. Walsh, counsel for the unions, criticised the rulings of Chairman W. L. Hutcheson, who is a member of the labor group on the board. Chairman Hutcheson listened to all Mr. Walsh had to say and then informed him that the committee would direct the hearing of evidence in its own way.

After further prolonged argument Chairman Hutcheson finally informed Mr. Walsh that inasmuch as the committee had already ruled three times that the company could not be forced to bring in its books, argument was futile, and the taking of evidence would have to continue. When counsel for the boat owners then introduced testimony to show that the charges of profiteering made by the union men had been unfounded, Mr. Hutcheson asserted his belief that if the charge were to be refuted he believed that it would be necessary to bring in the profit sheets and other books.

Vice President Smith of the Red Star Line testified that the cost of operating boats had increased from 75 to 100 per cent. since the beginning of the war. Fuel cost $3.15 a ton in 1915, he said, while the present price was $7.06. Rope and other supplies cost three times as much as in 1915, he testified, while the cost of repairs had increased more than 200 per cent. When the value of marine property advanced insurance companies required heavier insurance at higher rates, he said, while the rate of manual or employers' liability insurance had increased from 3.94 per cent. to 7.94 per cent. on the total payroll.

Says Tides Bar Eight-Hour Day.

Fred B. Dalzell, Treasurer of Fred B. Dalzell & Co., said that the insurance rates on ships in some instances had increased 300 per cent. In telling of the operations of the Dalzell tugs in docking ocean liners he said that the price had been increased only from $10 to $12.50 an hour for towing, despite the rise in the cost of materials, and that the cost of docking a large ship was $17.50 to the Government and $25 to private lines. He testified also that the necessity of working ships on high tides in this harbor would not permit the operation of the straight eight-hour day on his single-screw boats. When John Rugge, Jr., President of the Tice Towing Line, Inc., sought to show that the tides in the harbor would not permit the change from a twelve-hour crew to an eight-hour crew in transporting scow flotillas from the Hudson River to Newark Bay, Chairman Hutcheson took up the questioning himself, and finished by saying: "You're some manipulator, all right."

Arthur Knight, who owns a single tug now chartered to the Government, said that he received $125 a day for his boat. He testified that it cost $9,000, and was operated by a crew of twenty men, working in two shifts. The mates received $175 a month, he said, while the engineers received $165 each, and the deckhands and other employes $90 a month. Coal was furnished by the Government, he said, and water cost $10 a month, with heavy costs for other supplies. Replying to questions upon his profits, he said that the "Government had the service of his tug and part of his money every month." James Kennedy of the Kennedy Towing Company, operating six tugs, said that the increase of wages and the eight-hour day "would put him out of business," and he consented to bring all of his books into court.

The hearing will be continued in the Board of Estimate room at City Hall at 9:30 o'clock this morning, and an adjournment then will be taken over Thursday.

35,000 JOIN STRIKE OF DRESS WORKERS

Union Members, Chiefly Young Women, Leave Shops Quietly and Parade in Groups.

MANUFACTURERS SEE MAYOR

Demand for 44-Hour Week and a 15% Wage Increase Is Rejected and No Arbitration Is in Sight.

The great upheaval in the dress and waist industry which had been threatening for several months because of a deadlock between the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union came yesterday with a general strike of more than 35,000 dress and waist workers, the majority of them young women.

With the busy season at hand, both the members of the association and its independent supporters were faced at 10 o'clock yesterday with shops abandoned by the workers while the latter paraded in groups through Fourth and Fifth Avenues, prepared, said Benjamin Schlesinger, the President of the union, "to wait until the manufacturers come to their senses and agree to arbitrate our demands." The manufacturers' association is composed of 260 members, who represent an annual business of about $100,000,000. The independent firms affected by the strike, it was said, do a yearly business of about one-half this amount.

Union officials asserted last night that the full membership of the union in the dress and waist making trades had joined the strike. It was estimated that about 20,000 union workers for firms in the association quit promptly at the hour set by the union in its strike order, and from 10,000 to 15,000 workers had left the independent shops later in the day. Non-union shops, it was supposed, were not affected by the strike, although union officials pointed out that some sympathetic action might be taken by this minority.

The union seeks a forty-four-hour week for its members to make employment more regular and continuous; an increase of 15 per cent. in wages to meet the cost of living, and permission for a representative to visit the shop once a month to discover whether the standards established by the protocol are being carried out. The protocol under which peace reigned in the industry expired on Dec. 31. The manufacturers assert that two months before the document went out of existence labor leaders had laid plans for a strike.

It was reported yesterday afternoon that B. Marcheso, Labor Manager for the Manufacturers' Association, had declared that the association was ready to arbitrate providing the workers remained at work while the negotiations were going on. Mr. Marcheso later denied this.

"The union has given us no chance to discuss its demands," he said, "nor have we had opportunity to discuss the association's proposals with the union representatives. The union broke off relations with us as far back as October, 1918, while the protocol still had three months to run. The union levied an assessment on all its members for a strike fund. In August, 1918, we gave the strikers an increase in wages with the express stipulation that no increase would be asked for in wages at the time our agreement expired and was due to be taken up again. This was signed by Abraham Baroff, Secretary and Treasurer of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union."

Mayor Hylan held a conference at City Hall yesterday with Morris Weiss, President of the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association, and Harry A. Gordon, counsel for the association, and other officers. The Mayor will confer with representatives of the union today. Mr. Gordon said the union had greatly exaggerated the number of strikers, he added, as only 12,000 had voted for the strike.

"We explained to the Mayor that the issue in this strike was not a question of wages or a question of hours. The only issue is the doctrine of life tenure of employment which the union is seeking to impose upon us. Comparatively few of the workers have left their machines, while the largest shops in the city will run normally tomorrow.

The general walkout was conducted yesterday in an orderly manner, the police reported. In isolated sections of the city last night a number of arrests were reported and several workers were sent to the workhouse after complaints of disorderly conduct had been made against them. Picketing at all shops where union workers had been employed commenced early yesterday afternoon, young women remaining in the vicinity of the shops.

At 10 o'clock yesterday morning, when the strike notices were posted in the various shops in the industry by the Chairmen of the union shop committees, the majority of the workers were ready for the walkout. Many had gone to their work in holiday attire, and when the strike signal was posted they grouped themselves on the streets in the manufacturing district between Fourteenth Street and Thirty-eighth Street, and then when many such groups had been formed they marched to their meeting halls. About 90 per cent. of the workers were women.

"The entire waists and dress industry," said Benjamin Schlesinger, "is completely tied up. The strikers are assembled in twenty-two halls where they will meet until the strike is over."

Three strikers were sentenced to the workhouse for five days by Magistrate Nolan in Harlem Court yesterday after the men had been arrested on the complaint of William Fineman, a dress manufacturer at 2,082 First Avenue, who testified that the men had entered his shop and created a disturbance, charging that they had literally dragged women workers from their machines insisting that they join the strike. The men were Max Bernstein, 37 years old, of 54 East 103d Street; Harry Rabinowitz, 34 years old, of 9 Ludlow Street, and Max Scoller, 28 years old, of 1,561 Fulton Avenue, the Bronx.

What Is Clothing Worth?

That depends on so many things.

If a suit or overcoat doesn't please you as to style and fabric—if it fits badly—it isn't worth much to you.

If the fabric is not good and the tailoring is poor it isn't worth much to any one.

FIXED RAILROAD POLICY IS ASKED BY KRUTTSCHNITT

Urges Senators to Establish "One That Does Not Change Every Four Years."

TELLS EXECUTIVES' IDEAS

DENIES LINES BROKE DOWN

Southern Pacific Official Questions Superior Efficiency Claimed for Federal Control.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—A national railroad policy "that cannot change every four years" was urged by Julius Kruttschnitt, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Southern Pacific, when he appeared today before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, which is considering legislation affecting the future of the railroads.

"We are asking you," said Mr. Kruttschnitt, "to do what has never been done before, that is, to adopt a national railroad policy. If you do that the policy cannot change every four years. Recent occurrences have shown that the Interstate Commerce Commission has no hesitation in overruling the acts of an official who has much greater power than the proposed Secretary of Transportation. We are chiefly concerned with the establishment of a definite policy by Congress. Whether it is given effect through a Cabinet officer or through an enlarged and fortified commisseon is still a matter of discussion. Add to that a board for the adjustment of wages, which should be closely tied to the body which controls rates and revenues. We are not, however, held to a hard and fast plan."

Mr. Kruttschnitt declared that the economies which the Railroad Administration has said it has put into effect amounted in all to less than 1 per cent. the car-mile saving by direct freight routing being but 2-10 of 1 per cent. He said that at the time the roads were taken over the actual volume of freight traffic was larger, although the average tonnage per car in 1918 showed a 6.2 per cent. increase over 1917.

Objections to Standardization.

Senator Kellogg of Minnesota asked Mr. Kruttschnitt what he thought about standardization of cars. Alluding to a desire of the Railroad Administration to have the Southern Pacific use box cars of smaller capacity, yet 1000 pounds more weight than the system used, the witness replied:

"Acceptance of those cars would have meant hauling about 4,300 pounds of useless weight for the entire life of the cars. That would have been the same as loading each car with 4,500 pounds of sand before the rest of the load was put in.

"At one time the late Mr. Harriman became obsessed with the idea of standardizing all locomotives on his system and he charged me with the duty of devising a plan whereby this could be done. I opposed it for the same reason that I am opposing it now, namely, that in order to get the most efficient service you must have different types of locomotives to meet the varying conditions of grade, tonnage, fuel, water and character of traffic.

"In this connection, I might say that last year when I was using every effort to get the Railroad Administration to release ten of our locomotives which they wanted to use in the East, I was not able to make any headway until I brought it to their attention that these locomotives were all oil burners, for the fueling of which the eastern roads have no facilities."

Mr. Kruttschnitt told the committee that reductions by the Railroad Administration in train mileage in making economies of $79,665,000 in operating expenses and $6,000,000 in salaries had been effected by reducing service to the public.

The witness asserted that the owners of the rail properties would be able to serve far more efficiently than they have ever been able in the past, if they got the reasonable assistance "that Congress alone can give us."

Profiting by experience acquired under both private and Government operation," he said, "the carriers earnestly desire to provide a better system of operation by combining the initiative and beneficial features of competition inherent in private ownership with the benefits developed during operation by the Government unhampered by legal restrictions."

Denies Service Failed.

In denying that private operation had failed or broken down, Mr. Kruttschnitt declared that the plant provided by private owners "gave service that has never been equaled in the history of transportation, and with legislation permitting practices heretofore prohibited it can and will, by combining the good and eliminating the bad features of both Federal and private operation, give a service better than any that has ever been given in the past."

A press dispatch in THE NEW YORK TIMES of Jan. 1, 1919, credits to the railroad administration an estimate of the operating saving as of 1918 at $5,800,000.

Hungarian Peasants Loot Castle of Count Andrassy

VIENNA, Jan. 20, (via Geneva, Jan. 21.)—Depredations are reported on aristocratic country seats in Hungary. Count Julius Andrassy's castle, Tissea Club, has been pillaged by infuriated Bolshevist peasants, who caused enormous loss, spoiling valuable Gobelin tapestries, a Van Dyke picture, and other inestimable art works. Count Andrassy declared that he would never inhabit the castle again.

Yesterday strong monarchist manifestations occurred in Budapest, arranged by Clericals, officers of the former army, and students. Thousands paraded the streets, shouting for the monarchy, cheering for King Charles, and demonstrating against Karolyi. They invaded numerous coffee houses on the boulevards and attacked the Jewish guests, beating and robbing them, and disturbed the audiences in theatres. The crowds finally dispersed.

LARGELY AN ISSUE OF HOURS

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Three great British industries, coal mining, engineering, and shipbuilding, are now concerned in the dispute over the interpretation of the new forty-seven-hour week.

Over minor adjustments of working hours London is threatened with a strike in the engineering trades which would paralyze the tramways, electric railways and the electric light supply, causing chaos in many other directions; 200,000 members of twenty-five trade unions, including the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, are directly affected. A union official says the provincial workers would join in.

The issues in themselves are so comparatively small that it is hoped that an amicable settlement will be reached.

The Yorkshire coal fields, where 170,000 men propose to strike tomorrow, seek to enforce a demand for twenty minutes' interval for food during worktime.

Altogether 600,000 work people would be indirectly affected by the strike and be out of work by the end of the week. The situation is causing great alarm in commercial circles in West Riding where there are no reserve stocks of coal and many works would soon be forced to close if no supplies were forthcoming.

There are hopes of an adjustment of the dispute on the northeast coast shipbuilding yards over the interpretation of a forty-seven hour week but the situation is critical. A large number of ships are held up in the repair yards.

The Clyde workers threaten to strike next Monday to enforce a forty-hour week.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Industrial unrest throughout the United Kingdom is on the increase. In addition to the threat of a railway strike, the whole Yorkshire coalfield probably will be idle tomorrow, throwing 150,000 men out of employment, while preparations are being made in Scotland for a general strike for a forty-hour week.

Severe criticism of the "apathy" shown by Premier Lloyd George and the Government toward railway employes was heard at a conference of delegates of the National Union of Railwaymen last night. These delegates represent nearly 200,000 workers and are here for a discussion of the question of working hours, as well as other grievances. It was declared by union officials that unless the Government faced the issues before it with promptness drastic action would be taken by the organization.

Ex-Congressman Accuses Milton J. Trainor of War Department.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Ex-Congressman William S. Bennet of New York charged, before the Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, today, that Milton J. Trainor of Chicago, official of the Real Estate Division of the War Department, attempted to extort $100,000 from George H. Shank of Chicago, who had the contract for building a military hospital on the Speedway in Chicago. Mr. Bennet appeared as attorney for Edward S. Hines, a Chicagoan interested in the contract.

Mr. Bennet said that Trainor approached Shank, stating that he "wanted a commission of $100,000" on the project and that if it was not forthcoming the contract would not be awarded the Shank firm.

Later, Mr. Bennet said, Mr. Hines called upon Secretary Baker, laying before him the alleged attempt to extort the $100,000, but no action, so far as Mr. Bennet knows, was taken against Trainor. The contract for the project was never signed, Mr. Bennet said, the construction firm going ahead with the work under an informal agreement.

BERLIN DEPLORES CHOICE OF WEIMAR FOR CONVENTION

Danger of Outbreaks Asserted if Cabinet Is Absent Long at Assembly.

FEAR SHIFT OF CAPITAL

Intention to Change Denied—Aim to Escape the Prussian Spirit.

EBERT WINS 132 SEATS

Coalition with Democrats Would Control—Provisional Government to be Elected.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Jan. 21, (via Copenhagen.)—The Government's decision that the National Convention shall be convoked at Weimar, where it will open on Feb. 6 at the former Court Theatre, will meet with the fiercest opposition from the whole Berlin press, except the Socialist wing, while probably all the provincial newspapers, except the Pan German and other reactionary organs, will support it.

In deciding on Weimar, the Government has given way to the pressure of the South German States and Western Prussian provinces, which wish the convention to be removed as far as possible from the influence of the old Prussian spirit. Much the same motive actuated the revolutionaries of 1848 in calling their National Convention at Frankfort-on-the-Main.

The Government has made a public statement, emphasizing that it has no intention of displacing Berlin as the seat of the Central Government, and explaining that the National Convention is not a permanent parliamentary institution, but is merely required to outline the fundamental basis on which the new Germany is to be erected, and to adopt a Constitution, the condensed text of a draft of which was made public today.

Fears New Anarchy in Berlin.

The Tageblatt expresses the fear that if the National Convention is convoked at any other place members of the Government will be absent from Berlin during the whole session, and anarchy may once more lift its head in the capital. The paper ascribes the decision to fear of the Government not being able to protect the convention if held in Berlin.

The first part of this argument is met by the Government's statement that only the first few days of the convention will require the presence of a majority of the People's Commissioners. After that the convention's business, it is set forth, will be largely transacted by committee, which only one People's Commissioner will attend.

As to the Government's fear of Spartacide interference the official statement remains silent. Doubtless there is still much apprehension lest the Spartacides break out again.

Last night they made another attack on the Anhalt Railway station in Königgrazerstrasse, and when chased by troops fled across roofs and disappeared. There was a great deal of shooting again in various districts.

In view of this situation it is difficult to understand Governor Noske's order withdrawing most of the troops from Berlin, leaving only the Reinhardt Regiment and a somewhat doubtful group of marines for the protection of the city.

The National Convention will certainly be much more secure at Weimar, and the smallness of that city will be no impediment, as there are large hotels and other buildings easily made habitable for about 8,000 persons. The Government has appointed a commission, which left for Weimar this morning to provide for all necessary accommodations, including press facilities, telegraph, and railway service.

Measures to Guard East Front.

At a Cabinet meeting this afternoon with General Groener and Foreign Secretary Rantzau participating the removal of Grand Headquarters from Kassel to Kolberg of Konigsberg was considered.

Hindenburg and Groener will direct any military operations found necessary for the protection of the eastern front. Replying to a letter addressed to him by the Magistrate of Danzig praying his aid for the preservation of that old German city and West Prussia as integral parts of Germany, Hindenburg replied:

"Danzig's fate concerns me deeply. Be assured that I will do everything possible to prevent her separation from Germany. I have no knowledge that our enemies have decided against Germany so far as Danzig is con-

Krupp Plant Put at Work on Parts of Guns for Us

COBLENZ, Jan. 22, (Associated Press.)—The Krupp plant at Essen began working for the United States Government Tuesday. The task undertaken by the Krupps consists of making parts for seventy-two incomplete cannon rejected by the American authorities as part of the war material offered by the Germans under the terms of the armistice.

The German commission which has been in Berlin considering the question of the heavy guns rejected by the American authorities has arrived at Coblenz and reported that eighty cannon have been shipped to the headquarters of the American Army of occupation to replace big guns which failed to meet requirements. With the delivery of the parts for the seventy-two cannon and the arrival of these eighty cannon, the delivery of heavy artillery to the Americans will have been completed, the American allotment calling for 152 heavy guns.

BAKER RELEASES SOME OBJECTORS

Directs That Two Groups, Totaling 113, Be Freed from Fort Leavenworth.

THESE ARE CALLED SINCERE

All in Prison Known as Insincere Objectors to Army Service Must Serve Terms.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Secretary Baker today announced that he had ordered the release of 113 conscientious objectors held at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., the remission of the unexecuted portions of the sentences of the offenders, their "honorable restoration to duty" and their immediate discharge from the army.

In announcing this action Secretary Baker gave out the text of a memorandum which he sent to General March, Chief of Staff, under date of Jan. 16, in part as follows:

"Pursuant to the request made in my memorandum to you of Dec. 9, Judge Mack and Dean Stone have personally examined and reported to me regarding certain of the conscientious objectors now serving court-martial sentences. Group 1 of these men have heretofore been recommended by the Board of Inquiry for furlough, but because of the pressure of other work and the resulting delay in making the plan for farm furlough thoroughly effective throughout the country the men in this group missed the opportunity to apply for and to receive the furlough. Group 2 are men whom the Board of Inquiry now find to be sincere and who in their judgment would have been recommended for furloughs if they had had the opportunity of being examined by the Board of Inquiry before the court-martial proceedings.

"It will be recalled that this device of granting farm or other furloughs to such men as might be adjudged sincere was adopted in order that the country might have the benefit of such labor as they could conscientiously perform, instead of having to pay for their care and subsistence with no corresponding benefit; on the whole its adoption has been justified by experience, and if we were still actively engaged in warfare I should give my attention to the problem of ascertaining whether some plan could not be adopted for insuring the same treatment to these prisoners.

"The signing of the armistice, however, which took place while these cases were under consideration by my military associates, has changed the entire situation, and the War Department has since adopted and announced the policy of returning to civil life at the earliest practicable moment such conscientious objectors as are not serving court-martial sentences. (War Department Circular No. 97.)

"In view of this fact, and believing that essential justice will be rendered by so doing, for reasons stated in the above mentioned memorandum to you, I have decided to exercise the power of clemency intrusted to me by the President.

"I desire that the conscientious objectors, general prisoners, U. S. D. F., Fort Leavenworth, Kan., below enumerated be extended clemency in the form of remission of the unexecuted portions of the sentences of the offenders, honorable restoration to duty, and their immediate discharge from the United States Army.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 22.—The Svenska Dagbladet of Stockholm affirms that Leon Trotzky has telegraphed to Sinovien [this should probably read "has received a telegram from Sinovien"] that the Bolsheviki have been heavily defeated in the north, where the General and his whole army have gone over to the enemy, and that Petrograd probably will have to be evacuated.

A special edition of the Berlingske Tidende says Trotzky has sent the following dispatch to the War Minister at Petrograd:

"Deliver city without fighting." [This probably refers to Sinovien.]

Other advices to those papers say that the peasantry in the region around Petrograd have revolted against the Bolsheviki and blown up the railroad bridges. In the capital itself 60,000 workmen are reported to have gone on strike.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The Bolshevist forces in Northern Russia have suffered a severe defeat, according to advices received by the Exchange Telegraph from Copenhagen. The dispatch adds that great peasant revolts have been reported from many parts of the country, and that the Bolshevist Commander ordered his troops to surrender the town of Sinoveff without a fight.

REDS SHELLING OUR LINES.

Mobilize Peasants and May Start Big Drive on American Front.

ARCHANGEL, Jan. 21, (Associated Press.)—Bolshevist troops are heavily shelling the farthest south positions of the American and Russian armies at Ust Padenga, on the Waga River, thirty miles south of Shenkursk. They also are showing considerable activity west of Shenkursk on the Tania River. It has been impossible to determine whether the attack will develop on a greater scale. The enemy has mobilized the peasants in the vicinity of Vilsk and apparently is prepared for a general offensive in the Shenkursk sector.

Sunday the enemy, under cover of heavy bombardment, attacked with infantry the American and Russian positions at Ust Padenga. The allied outposts withdrew, but the Bolshevist attack on the main positions was repulsed with heavy losses.

There has been no infantry action since, though there has been a constant rain of shells on the village. The American artillery is vigorously replying. Flying in a temperature of 16 degrees below zero, one American airplane bombed the enemy and secured direct hits on important Bolshevist positions.

The fighting is going on in cold, clear weather, but the temperature is so low that it is difficult for the infantrymen to remain in the open for any length of time.

The Bolsheviki also are shelling the American positions on the Vologda Railway. With the exception of a few days early in January, when the allied forces attempted to improve their positions southward on the Kadish Railroad and on the Onega sector, the offensive on the Archangel front for several months has been in the hands of the Bolsheviki. They are boasting that in the vicinity of Kadish they will "drive the Allies into the White Sea in March."

Along the Murmansk Railway front the Russian and allied troops yesterday raided the village of Rugozerka, fifty miles southeast of Soroka, where they either killed or captured all the Bolshevist garrison. They took 110 rifles and other equipment and numerous documents. The allied forces did not suffer a single casualty.

Text of the Supreme Council's Announcement Of Decision As to Allies' Attitude Toward Russia

PARIS, Jan. 22, (Associated Press.)—This official communication was issued by the Supreme Council this afternoon:

The President of the United States, the Prime Ministers, and the Foreign Ministers of the allied and associated Powers and the Japanese representatives met at the Quai D'Orsay between 3 and 5:30 this afternoon and approved the proposal of President Wilson, which reads as follows:

The single object the representatives of the associated powers have had in mind in their discussions of the course they should pursue with regard to Russia has been to help the Russian people, not to hinder them or to interfere in any manner with their right to settle their own affairs in their own way.

They regard the Russian people as their friends, not their enemies, and are willing to help them in any way they are willing to be helped. It is clear to them that the troubles and distrust of the Russian people will steadily increase, hunger and privation of every kind become more and more acute, more and more widespread, and more and more impossible to relieve unless order is restored and normal conditions of labor, trade, and transportation once more created, and they are seeking some way in which to assist the Russian people to establish order.

They recognize the absolute right of the Russian people to direct their own affairs without dictation or direction of any kind from outside. They do not wish to exploit or make use of Russia in any way.

They recognize the revolution without reservation and will in no way and in no circumstances aid or give countenance to any attempt at a counter-revolution.

It is not their wish or purpose to favor or assist any one of the organized groups now contending for the leadership and guidance of Russia as against the others. Their sole and sincere purpose is to do what they can to bring Russia peace and an opportunity to find her way out of her present troubles.

The associated powers are now engaged in the solemn and responsible work of establishing the peace of Europe and of the world, and they are keenly alive to the fact that Europe and the world cannot be at peace if Russia is not. They recognize and accept it as a duty to serve Russia as generously, as unselfishly, as thoughtfully, as ungrudgingly as they would serve any other friend and ally, and they are ready to render this service in the way that is most acceptable to the Russian people.

In this spirit and with this purpose they have taken the following action: They invite every organized group that is now exercising or attempting to exercise political authority or military control anywhere in Siberia, or within the boundaries or European Russia as they stood before the war just concluded, except in Finland, to send representatives, not exceeding three representatives for each group, to Princes' Islands, Sea of Marmora, where they will be met by representatives of the associated powers, provided in the meantime there is a truce of arms amongst the parties invited and that all armed forces anywhere sent or directed against any people or territory [illegible] as they stood before the war, or against any people or territory whose autonomous action is in contemplation in the fourteen articles upon which the present negotiations are based, shall be meanwhile withdrawn and aggressive military actions cease.

These representatives are invited to confer with the representatives of the associated powers in the freest and frankest way, with a view to ascertaining the wishes of all sections of the Russian people and bringing about, if possible, some understanding and agreement by which Russia may work out her own purposes, and happy, co-operative relations be established between her people and the other peoples of the world.

A prompt reply to this invitation is requested. Every facility for the journey of the representatives, including transportation across the Black Sea, will be given by the Allies, and all the parties concerned are expected to give the same facilities. The representatives will be expected at the place appointed by Feb. 15, 1919.

The proposal will be sent tonight by wireless to the interested parties.

The meeting then decided to call a plenary session of the Conference for 3 o'clock on Saturday, Jan. 25, to discuss the subject of the League of Nations on the basis of the proposals made by Mr. Lloyd George, as well as other subjects which were examined this afternoon.

Washington Opinion Divided Over Allied Council's Decision

Senator Hitchcock Calls It a "Most Fortunate Agreement"—Senator Borah Applauds Letting Russia Settle Her Own Affairs—Senator King Deplores Any Dealings with the Bolsheviki.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Senator Hitchcock, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said tonight on being informed of the decision of the Supreme Peace Council at Versailles:

"It looks like a most fortunate agreement between the powers. It indicates a final agreement over the Russian policy which gives an appreciable hope of a start to solving the Russian problem. Certainly it shows that the powers are faithful to the policy of self-determination for Russia, and it will encourage the better elements in that country in reaching some form of agreement.

"I may say that this agreement upon the Russian policy has been expected for some days. The President was known here to have been working upon it. The result of today's conference comes as an agreeable outcome of his efforts.

"The powers, in taking the attitude they have today, make it clear that they will expect, as representatives at the proposed conference at Princes' Island, those of all political parties in Russia. They will expect representatives of the Soviet as well as the other elements that are striving for the upper hand in Russian affairs.

"The whole thing, as I view it, is an encouraging augury for the ultimate determination of the Russian problem by the Russian people themselves."

Senator Borah of Idaho, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said:

"I am thoroughly in favor of the fundamental principles involved in this action today by the Peace Conference, that is to let Russia settle her own affairs. The powers have put themselves on record as against any counter-revolution in Russia, and in doing it have recognized the existing Government. They go further than this, though, in saying they will expect representatives of all organized groups to send representatives to the conference.

"It is a very hopeful, a very encouraging thing. No one can, of course, foretell with any accuracy what the outcome of such a conference will be, but it is the right step. I have maintained, in the Senate that Russia ought to have the right of self-determination of her own affairs, and this action of the pacifist of today leads in that direction. For myself, I must say I am pleased over the news."

Senator King, Democrat, of Utah, said:

"I heartily oppose the decision of the Paris Conference. I approved the attitude taken a few days ago by Foreign Minister Pichon of France. Upon it being reported that England had suggested a similar plan to that adopted by the Paris Conference today—that is, that all factions in Russia, including the Bolsheviki, sent to Paris to submit their claims of recognition—he opposed any such move.

"With the record we have of the perfidy of Lenine and Trotzky, the conclusive proof that they acted as the agents of Germany, and in view of the bloody class warfare that they have carried out, and further, in view of their denunciation of our own nation and of the democratic principles upon which it is founded, and their avowed purposes to destroy it, as well as all other nations, I don't see how the Peace Conference, with honor to itself, or a proper regard to the nations it represents, could have any dealings with the Bolsheviki.

"If President Wilson or others of the American delegates have consented to treat with the Bolsheviki or receive them or accord them recognition, as this Paris dispatch indicated, either as a revolutionary party or a de facto Government, it does not meet with my approval. If the dispatch means that any opposition in Russia to Bolshevism is counterrevolution, then I cannot approve of the statement.

"If the idea to be conveyed by the cabled announcement is that Lenine and Trotzky represent a revolution and a revolutionary government with which we can treat, then it meets with my entire disapprobation. Lenine and Trotzky don't represent any revolution, or any Government. They are outlaws. In my opinion the Peace Conference should recognize the Omsk Government as de facto, and should have no commerce with the Bolsheviki either directly or indirectly."

Little Opposition to Plan.

PARIS, Jan. 22. (Associated Press.)—Led by President Wilson, the Supreme Council of the great powers today moved to unite the factions of distracted Russia and bring them into the Peace Congress. The council unanimously adopted a proposition brought forward by President Wilson, asking all the Russian factions, including the Bolsheviki, to meet the allied and associated Governments at Princes' Islands, in the Sea of Marmora, on Feb. 15, the contending factions meanwhile declaring a truce and suspending all military operations.

The Joint Commission of the associated Governments will be announced as soon as the Russian factions accept the proposal which was communicated to them by wireless tonight. The Russian commission will proceed to the meeting place, probably on a warship, by way of the Black Sea and the Bosporus.

General John J. Pershing, the American Commander in Chief, has been called to Paris, and it is expected that he will be the military member of the American representation of the joint commission.

Aside from the importance of the conclusions reached, it was especially notable as being the first time that the voice of the United States has taken the direction in the concert of European powers on the most serious European question now presented. There was added significance in the fact that an American President in person had taken leadership in the council, made up chiefly of European statesmen, and had pointed a way they had unanimously adopted.

The final result, came after three days of continuous discussion of Russia, which did not crystallize until the final hours, when President Wilson presented in writing the plan he had elaborated. There was little opposition, and this was based mainly on

PLAN MISSION TO POLAND

Will Send to Warsaw Eight Delegates—League Plan Up on Saturday.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—The Supreme Council of the Peace Conference this afternoon adopted a proposal submitted by President Wilson for bringing order out of the Russian chaos. The essentials of the plan are that representatives of all the Russian and Siberian factions shall meet representatives of the Allies at Princes' Islands in the Sea of Marmora on Feb. 15 and discuss the situation, in the hope of reaching a settlement of Russia's difficulties. As evidence of good faith the Russian factions must [illegible] hostilities prior to the [illegible] conference.

This proposal is the outcome of a week's discussion among the chief delegates of the five great powers. It is a reflection of the plan of Premier Lloyd George that an interallied commission be sent to investigate the Russian situation, but the plan itself appears to be President Wilson's, for to him was given authority to prepare the formula adopted today.

The President's proposal, which was furnished to the press and wirelessed to all the Russian factional governments, gives the most careful assurances that the Allies have no selfish purpose in seeking an ending of the disturbances in Russian territory. The Russian Governments are told that the Allies recognize the absolute right of the Russian people to direct their own affairs "without dictation or direction of any kind from the outside."

It is evident that, while some doubters are not convinced, a considerable opinion exists in the Peace Conference that this is the best solution offered with any hope of success. It is pointed out that the Allies' proposal applies to the Bolsheviki as well as to the factions that oppose them. The assurances contained in the proposal paraphrase sentiments uttered by President Wilson from time to time.

doubts as to whether the proposition would be accepted. In reply it was pointed out that the contending factions were well-nigh at the end of their resources and that their needs likely would lead them at last to a combined appeal to the associated powers.

Besides the definite proposal as given in the official communiqué, the joint commission of the associated powers will lay down four conditions, indispensable in bringing about an adjustment; first, peace at all points; second, removal of all economic barriers, which restrain the free circulation or exchange of food and other commodities between the factional zones and the outside world; third, general elections on a representative basis, and, fourth, some adequate arrangement for the payment of debts.

Even if eventually the proposal is not accepted, members of the Council expressed the view that their proposition was before the world and that it would pave the way for such other measures as their own action had brought about.

The Princes' Islands were chosen for the eventful meeting because they are outside the zone of any of the contending factions. They are also allied headquarters, and are not obnoxious to any of the factions, as would be other points, having better material facilities for the meeting.

Feb. 15 was designated as the time of the meeting, so as to give time for representations to come from the remotest sections of Siberia and other distant localities.

To Send a Mission to Poland.

The Supreme Council took up the Polish question when it assembled. Marshal Foch, the allied Commander in Chief, was present, and was consulted on this subject. The discussion resulted in a decision by the Council to send at once to Poland a mission comprising eight delegates from the United States, Great Britain, France, and Italy, one military and one civil delegate from each of those countries.

The Council then took up again the Russian situation, President Wilson reading his proposal on the subject to the Council.

The official statement on the morning proceedings of the Council read:

"The Supreme Inter-allied War Council met this morning at 11 o'clock at the Ministry for Foreign Affairs. The President of the United States of America and the Prime Ministers and Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the allied and associated powers, as well as Baron Makino and Baron Matsui, the Japanese delegates, considered the Polish question, on which they consulted Marshal Foch. They decided to send at once to Poland a mission composed of two delegates, one civil and the other military, of the United States, the British Empire, France, and Italy.

"The Ministers then resumed the examination of the Russian question, and President Wilson read a proposal which will be discussed this afternoon. The meeting will take place at 3 o'clock."

After the morning session President Wilson went to the headquarters of the American Peace Mission for a conference with the delegates.

When the Supreme Council met for the morning session there were present, in addition to all the members of the council and Marshal Foch, General Weygand, the Marshal's Chief of Staff, and Rear Admiral Hope, Deputy First Sea Lord of the British Admiralty Board. It was assumed from the presence of these military and naval officers that the Russian situation on both the Baltic and the land front was discussed. W. F. Massey, the Premier of New Zealand, was present with the council for a short time.

France favors immediate armed intervention by the Allies in Poland, according to authoritative unofficial information. The French view is said to be that only military assistance can save Poland from being crushed by the Bolsheviki, and that such assistance must be given within the next few weeks. It is contended that the sending of food or munitions to Poland would only strengthen the Bolsheviki, since they would ultimately capture the supplies.

It will be difficult, Le Temps thinks, for the Entente mission to Poland to make its investigation and report to the conference before three weeks.

Russian Suggestions Discarded.

Le Temps says that, with regard to Russia, it is understood that two suggestions were discarded by the conference, the first proposing to hear in Paris representatives of all the Governments in Russia, including that of the Bolsheviki, and the second the sending to Russia of a mission analogous to that to Poland.

According to Le Temps, the Peace Conference has under contemplation the creation of two interallied commissions, one on a league of nations and the other on the compensation Germany must pay for damages done. The newspaper adds that the American plan contemplates the forming of three other commissions, one on territorial questions, the second on overseas territories, and the third on responsibilities.

The Supreme War Council will hold two sessions tomorrow. The full Peace Conference will probably meet Saturday.

Princes' Islands, where the conference with the Russian representatives is to be held, consist of a group of nine small islands in the Sea of Marmora, from ten to fifteen miles southeast of Constantinople. The largest are Prinkipo and Khalki. On the latter are a naval academy and a Greek school of theology. The population of the islands numbers about 10,000, for the most part Greeks, Turks, and Armenians.

RUSSIAN PROBLEM WAS GIVE AND TAKE

Peace Conference Approached the Preliminaries in a Spirit of Compromise.

By ERNEST MARSHALL.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—The question of Russia still engrosses the attention of the Peace Conference. Premier Lloyd George is reported to have said that the information about Russia comes from fifty different sources and that there had not yet been found a common denominator which would make it possible to appraise the respective values of all these reports.

Incidentally it may be stated on authority that the differences between the British and French viewpoints of Russia are not so extreme as might be inferred from the published statements. M. Pichon's letter, as printed in L'Humanité, was a partial statement severed from the essential context. It is an interesting sidelight on the publicity regulations which are governing the Peace Congress that L'Humanité obtained the document in question from a French civil servant who sought to eke out an inadequate income by hawking about to the press such documentary information as he came across.

As stated a few days ago, the American attitude in regard to the Russian problem was found on examination to approximate fairly closely to the British view, and on their side the French fully realize that it is of dominant importance to arrive at unity of decision. Compromise may be said to be the watchword of the hour so far as the greater powers are concerned, and whatever decisions the representatives of the great associated powers come to will necessarily determine the general policy of the conference.

You have already had an outline of the three policies toward Russia which were advocated in the allied camp, and I need not repeat them in another form. The chief difficulty confronting the allies has been to construct any program of intervention which would be at once limited and effective.

The Russian Committee in Paris, which was at first of a very conservative character, has now been enlarged and liberalized, while at the same time the Polish Committee in Paris has undergone a similar modification parallel with the construction of the Paderewski-Pilsudski Ministry. It will be remembered that a deadlock was foreseen from the circumstance that the Polish Committee in Paris, which claimed to have the fullest support of the Polish elements in the United States, did not see eye to eye with Pilsudski's Government. It is of good augury for other similar differences that some measure of understanding has been reached by the two Polish parties, thanks to Paderewski, whose wholehearted and unselfish patriotism has been the bond of union.

Similarly, in regard to Russia, there has been a considerable modification of the idea that the Russians who were in Paris prepared to represent their country were all reactionaries. The French Socialist papers declaimed against what they called "the policy of émigrés", but it is pointed out that Sazonoff, now a delegate of the Omsk and Koudan Governments, got on extremely well with the last Duma; that Prince Lvoff, who was at the head of the first two Cabinets of the Russian revolution, is liberal in policy, and that Boris Savinkoff, Kerensky's representative, is a Socialist, like Tchaikovsky, the head of the Archangel Government, now on his way here.

The Russian claim that the Russian people should have some representation at the conference was voiced today by one of those above mentioned, as follows:

"Russia must be heard through her only possible representatives—the sooner the better. There are the gravest dangers of misunderstanding. Events have carried us from the extremity where men said Russia had betrayed her allies to the opposite extremity, where men are saying the Allies are betraying Russia.

"We ask, first, for moral recognition and representation; secondly, we ask for economic assistance; thirdly, the constituents of the democratic Governments of Russia ask for help in arms and ammunition. It is only fourthly that we ask for the aid of a small military force, totaling 150,000 volunteers, which could be raised in equal proportions by the Americans, French, and British."

In both British and American quarters there is a good deal of sympathy with this point of view, and further information which the chief delegates of the great powers are obtaining about the Russian situation is likely to bring about a concerted policy.

Map Showing Princes' Islands.

The Princes' Islands (indicated on the above map by an arrow) are nine in number. They lie in the Sea of Marmora, ten to fifteen miles southeast of Constantinople, and near the coast of Asia Minor.

The largest islands are Prinkipo, or "Red Island," and Khalki. On the latter are a naval academy and a Greek school of theology. The beauty of the scenery, similar to that of the Maine coast in Summer, attracts many visitors. The climate is most agreeable. Greeks, Turks, and Armenians, to the number of 10,000, form the population.

LITVINOFF TELLS AIMS OF RED PROPAGANDA

Admits Activity in Germany, but Not in Neutral or Entente Countries.

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 21.—Maxim Litvinoff, former Bolshevist Ambassador in London, admitted to The Associated Press today that Bolshevist propaganda had been carried on in Germany, but denied any such activity in neutral or Entente countries.

"This talk of propaganda is rather fantastic and does not conform to facts," he said. "While I represented the Russian Government in England, neither I nor any of my staff engaged in any illegal propaganda. The same applies to Bolshevist diplomats in Scandinavia. Now, when the Entente nations are waging war on Russia and in Russian territory, we feel justified in engaging in propaganda work among the allied troops. Any Government in our place would do the same.

"With the end of hostilities and the withdrawal of these troops, there will be neither opportunity nor desire on our part to make foreign troops or citizens the objects of our propaganda.

"In regard to Germany, we do not deny propaganda work, but prior to the revolution Germany, despite the formal peace, continued to be the greatest danger to the Russian revolution, and our propaganda was an act of self-defense. Even now, the Allies are attempting to make Germany a jumping off ground for attacking Russia, and are using for this purpose even German troops with the connivance of Scheidemann's Government. This is instanced in the Baltic provinces, Lithuania, and Ukraine.

"With the ceasing of the allied war against the Soviet and the resumption of diplomatic intercourse and relations, Germany and Russia will be put on a more formal footing, and then the German Government will have little cause for complaint about propaganda as any other Governments at peace with Russia. Of course we shall continue to express our views through our press and literature, but this will not take the form of a direct appeal to the citizens of other countries, and will be conducted by political parties, not the Government."

M. Litvinoff assured the correspondent that "the Bolsheviki were great friends of the freedom of the press and political liberty, and that the present suppression of all opposition in Russia was due only to the fact that other parties, in a treacherous way, invited foreign troops to invade the country to fight the Bolsheviki. In concluding, he said he was sorry that Paris had been chosen for the Peace Congress, because it was the least suitable place for Soviet representatives to go. He was sure, he said, that it was not President Wilson's fault that the Russian Government, which has now been in power fifteen months, is not represented at the Congress."

RUSSIANS HERE PROTEST.

Object to Admitting Bolshevist Delegates to Peace Conference.

In a statement issued yesterday in the form of an advertisement in the newspapers by the Russian Economic League, founded by Russian business men at present living in New York, regret is expressed over the reported proposal to admit to the Peace Conference as representatives of Russia the agents of the so-called Bolshevist Government. Alexander W. Behr is the acting President of the league, and the Vice Presidents include W. Washkiroff, A. A. Boublikoff, E. Ljubovitch, S. Novosloff, and B. Samolienko.

The statement declares that only through a monstrous misunderstanding could the thought of admitting to the Paris Conference the Bolshevist representatives be entertained. The Bolsheviki were charged with "speculating on the lowest instincts of the population," and of being "the scum of human society."

"The theorists bluff the world with the highness of their ideals, and the practitioners, in the meantime, organize the All-Russian gang of thieves and robbers," the statement said. "The Russian Economic League steadfastly keeps in remembrance the promise of President Wilson to stand by Russia.

"Awaiting how and when this help will take form, the Russian Economic League cannot but loudly give expression to this sentiment—that it could not even imagine that help to Russia could take the form of admitting the theorists of Bolshevism to the world's tribune, from which to preach their corrupting lies, and of allowing the practitioners of Bolshevism a breathing space for the further strengthening of their organization.

"The Russian Economic League considers it its civic duty to the Allies once more to remind them of the handwriting on the wall. Russian Bolshevism is a danger to the civilization of the world."

OPPOSES U. S. IN ARABIA.

Sir Francis Younghusband Attacks Suggestion of American Control.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Sir Francis Younghusband, in a letter to The Morning Post, condemns the proposal, as reported in a Reuter Paris telegram, to form a "great federation of all Arabian States from the Red Sea to the Persian Gulf, free from any Turkish domination and under the protection of the United States." Younghusband says:

"It was we who freed the Arabs. It was by our sacrifice that Turkish domination was broken. By the tenacity of our people, the skill of our Generals, and the valor and endurance of our troops—British, Australian, and Indian—we have won our present position in Mesopotamia, Palestine, and Arabia. Why should the Americans enjoy what we have won? * * *

"The Americans at this very moment are taking steps to construct what in the words of their Secretary of the Navy will be 'incomparably the greatest navy in the world.' If we weakly connive at their occupying such a position at the crucial point of our line of communication with India, Australia, the Malay States, and East Africa—a position which by every right is ours rather than theirs—then we may be perfectly certain that our spirit will slowly decline, and our pre-eminence in world affairs gradually pass from us to them."

New Zealand Wants Two Peace Seats.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—W. F. Massey, Premier of New Zealand, and Sir J. G. Ward, Minister of Finance of New Zealand, arrived in Paris today and expressed disappointment at the decision of the Supreme Council to give the country only one delegate at the peace congress. The New Zealand Ministers represent two different parties in New Zealand politics, and both wish to be present at the conference. They said they would endeavor to have the decision changed so that both could attend the peace sessions.

FRANCIS ASSAILED FOR RUSSIAN POLICY

La Guardia and Miller Charge in House That Envoy Is Incompetent.

SHARP DEFENSE BY CLARK

Speaker Wins Applause by Demanding Return of Our Troops from Russia, France, and Germany.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—David R. Francis, Ambassador to Russia, was charged on the floor of the House, today with inefficiency in the conduct of the affairs of his office. Major La Guardia, a former army aviator who is one of the New York Representatives in Congress, and Clarence Miller of Minnesota, a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, attacked the Ambassador, criticising particularly his backing of Kerensky. So bitter became the debate, which hinged upon the Diplomatic and Consular bill, that Speaker Clark left his chair and went to the floor to defend Mr. Francis.

"The gentlemen intimate that Francis is afraid," said the Speaker. "Let me tell you something! A man born in Kentucky and raised in Missouri is not afraid of the devil himself!"

During the debate, Speaker Clark brought applause from the House by demanding the immediate return of all troops from Russia, France, Germany, and all Europe.

Mr. La Guardia said Ambassador Francis's reports in no way agreed with those submitted by North Winship, formerly Consul General at Petrograd, nor with those of Lieutenant Commander Crowley, once Naval Attaché in Russia.

"If there is one man in the United States who does not understand and never did understand Russian conditions, it is Mr. Francis," said Mr. La Guardia. "He is hopelessly incompetent. If the Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee will read the reports of Mr. Winship and Commander Crowley, he will get the facts. I hope the committee will compare these reports with those of Mr. Francis.

"If I have a friend in the Chairman knew that our Allies had to call the attention of the State Department to the personal conduct and associations of our Ambassador with a lot of his Teutonic friends.

"Both Winship and Crowley informed our Government that the eastern line would break and we would lose the whole eastern front. Any man could see that. The British and French backed Kornilov, but we backed Kerensky and brought pressure on our allies to do so. After Mr. Winship put in his reports, Ambassador Francis said, 'I don't want this man here.'"

Representative Miller said that Mr. Francis had failed to form the proper associations when he went to Russia, and was therefore unacceptable to the Russian people.

"He not only had a complete lack of understanding of the Russian character," said Mr. Miller, "but completely failed, possibly due to his circumstances, to know what the Russian people were thinking about or what they were willing to do, or could be made to do. He did not put himself in a position where he could acquire this knowledge."

"How did you get it into your head that you knew what would happen over there better than our Ambassador did?" asked Speaker Clark of Miller.

"I never had that in my head," retorted the Representative.

"You talked that way," commented the Speaker, who continued:

"I hold no brief for Ambassador Francis. These gentlemen bring generally nebulous charges against him. What did he do that the representatives of other great powers did not do, or in what did he fail? The truth is that there is not a man on earth that really knows what is going on in Russia. All those Ambassadors over there could do was to take care of Americans as well as they could.

"I suggest to these critics of Mr. Francis that they could be in better business than backscapping the American Ambassador to Russia."

The Speaker's demand that American soldiers be withdrawn from Europe followed his speech defending the Ambassador.

"I am in favor of bringing every American soldier out of Russia," he said, "and I will say also that I am in favor of bringing every American soldier out of Europe. A few weeks ago General du Pont, who made more money out of selling powder for this war than you could stack up in this chamber in dollar bills, said we would have to keep our soldiers there for two years to tear down barbed wire fences and entanglements.

"We did not put up those fences, and, if the Belgians and French do not want them, they will tear them down. Some one else suggests we ought to keep our soldiers there to police Europe. After we kicked the Germans for them, surely they ought to police Europe themselves.

"I am willing for my boy to go there and fight, but I am not willing to have him stay there and interfere with life's work to tear down fences or be a policeman.

"The most sensible thing President Wilson has said since he has been in Europe is what he intimated a week or two ago—that he was going to bring those soldiers there back home."

WILSON CALLS WAR CABINET.

Will Confer with Advisers in Paris on Peace Problems.

PARIS, Jan. 22, (Associated Press.)—President Wilson has decided to resume the sessions of his War Cabinet, his "Wednesday Cabinet," so called because this is the regular meeting day at the White House of the heads of the war boards, military advisers, and members of the Cabinet.

The purpose of the meeting in Paris is for the discussion of economic problems involved in the armistice and the peace negotiations. The meetings will be attended by Bernard Baruch, Herbert C. Hoover, Vance McCormick, and Edward N. Hurley, all of whom have been summoned to Paris by the President, and such other of his diplomatic, political, economic, and military advisers as the President may designate to attend.

Blockade, shipping, food relief for Europe, and the provision of raw materials for the restoration of the devastated regions are among the problems which will come before the meetings, and the Cabinet will probably also give attention to the Russian question.

Plans for co-operation with the Entente Powers in the solution of economic problems are also taking shape. The British Government expects to designate an economic representative to work with the American delegates on this aspect of the peace negotiations. Italy and France will probably follow suit.

The American Peace Commission is depending upon its specialists in international law for the preparation of the American view of important questions raised in the agenda adopted by the Peace Conference Saturday. These are, first, responsibility for the war, and second, the framing of a policy for international co-operation in legislation directed toward the interests of labor.

Wide differences exist at present regarding the first question, particularly as to the responsibility of individuals, rather than of Governments, for the war, and likewise violation of the rules of war by the Central Powers. It is believed to be by no means certain that the American delegates are willing to accept the views of the French legal authorities quoted by Premier Clemenceau respecting the personal responsibility of the former German Emperor and his Generals, in the absence of precedents and until there is a clearer understanding of the limitations within which such a doctrine can be exercised.

There is a possibility that recommendations upon labor will be withheld until opportunity is afforded to study the developments of the Berne labor congress.

WOMEN SEEK PART IN LEAGUE.

Also Asks Condign Punishment of Perpetrators of Atrocities.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—A request that a place be given to women in whatever bodies may be created for putting into effect the idea of a League of Nations is made in a resolution presented to the Peace Conference by an organization of Frenchwomen under the Presidency of Mme. Juliate Adam. This resolution accompanied one passed by the organization in which the demand was made that those responsible for atrocities during the war be punished as criminals, so as to prevent the recurrence of barbarities. The text of this latter resolution reads:

"In violation of the primitive law of humanity, thousands of women and girls, even children, of all social conditions, have been systematically torn from their families and submitted to inhuman tortures and treated as slaves.

"With broken and bleeding hearts, we women of France and the allied countries come before the Peace Congress to ask justice in the name of our martyred sisters. To prevent a recurrence of similar atrocities, we ask that those who have directed them and ordered them may be condemned as criminals."

The other resolution sets forth the work women did during the war and demands that women "claim their place in all future institutions of the League of Nations in legislative and executive branches of government."

CHINA SEEKS A FREE HAND.

Wants Peace Treaty to Free Her from Foreign "Influence."

PARIS, Jan. 22.—Discussing the position of China with regard to the Peace Conference, C. T. Wang, a member of the Chinese delegation, who has been prominent in the South China Government, said to The Associated Press correspondent today that the two portions of China were thoroughly united on the question of foreign policy. The delegation now in Paris, he declared, represents China as an allied nation, independent of other nations, seeking the full restoration of its sovereignty and asking the conference to free it from treaties and agreements which prevent its economic development.

"China's greatest handicap," said Mr. Wang, "is the present system of making loans and letting railway concessions. Under the bane of the 'influence' system forced upon China by outside Powers, it is impossible for China to get money for railway or other extensive developments. Existing contracts and agreements make it possible for the various Powers to prevent China from entering the world's market for the money required. Consequently the great nation is lying dormant through lack of transportation. There are abundant opportunities for all nations to make investments in China if the Peace Conference will remove the barrier in the form of foreign agreements.

"China also confidently expects to have the rights of extra territoriality removed. The delegates realize that the present courts of law in China are not sufficiently modernized to satisfy the demands of such advanced nations as Great Britain and the United States, but they can be improved gradually, just as the Japanese courts were."

Mr. Wang said that China would seek the right to regulate her own customs service, and would ask the restoration of that territory in China formerly held by Germany. The Chinese delegation is hopeful that the peace treaty will result in the opening of all China to equal commercial opportunities for all foreign citizens.

WANTS SWEDISH REPUBLIC.

Socialist Proposes Popular Vote on Form of Government There.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 22.—The National Tidende learns from Stockholm that Wennerstroem, a Socialist, has proposed that the Government bring in a provisional bill for a popular vote of all men and women above 21 years of age to show if the people want a monarchy or a republic. He thinks that the majority would vote for a republic.

According to another Stockholm dispatch, the Social Democrats will propose a bill abolishing compulsory enlistment service for the classes of 1919 and 1920.

Mr. Baker also gave out the text of the report made to him by Judge Mack and Dean Stone. This says in part:

"The undersigned members of the Board of Inquiry on conscientious objectors pursuant to the request of the Secretary of War, proceeded to the United States Disciplinary Barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, on Jan. 4, 1919, and there personally examined prisoners claiming to be conscientious objectors detained in the Disciplinary Barracks.

"Group 1 includes those men whom the Board of Inquiry has heretofore examined and classified as one, that is to say, men who are found to be conscientious in their objections, both to combatant and non-combatant service in the army. Thereafter these men were placed on trial by court martial and sentenced for terms of imprisonment in disciplinary barracks. They have never had opportunity to apply for the farm furlough in accordance with the recommendations of the Board of Inquiry. The undersigned have examined the court martial records in the case of each of these men, and in the opinion of the undersigned, clemency should be promptly exercised in their cases.

"Group 2 includes those men who claim to be conscientious objectors who were not brought before the Board of Inquiry for examination prior to their court martial conviction and sentence to disciplinary barracks.

"The undersigned having now examined them report that in their opinion these men are conscientious in their objections, both to combatant and non-combatant service in the army and that they would have been so classified by the Board of Inquiry had they been examined by the board. The undersigned have examined the court-martial records in the case of each of these men, and in the opinion of the undersigned, clemency should be promptly exercised in their cases."

The Secretary's action does not affect the status of those conscientious objectors, who, having been examined by the Board of Inquiry, were found to be insincere in their objections. Men included in this class are left to serve the sentences which have been imposed upon them.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS COMES UP SATURDAY

CECIL OUTLINES PROGRAM

PARIS, Jan. 22.—The plenary session of the Peace Conference will take up on Saturday, according to official announcement today, the proposal for a league of nations as presented by Great Britain.

Lord Robert Cecil, who has in charge for Great Britain the task of aiding in the formation of a league of nations, said today that he had submitted to the Peace Conference the draft statement of the British views on the subject, which in its broad line did not differ much from the ideas expressed by General Jan C. Smuts, the South African leader.

"It is certain," said Lord Robert, "that public opinion of the world is in favor of a decision that will not only make a world peace real, but ordain that international recognition of a League of Nations is an essential part of modern civilization. It is absolutely impossible to proceed on the old arrangement, everybody pulling for his own side without any regard for the others.

"This, of course, does not mean that the international body shall have anything to do with the internal affairs of the countries concerned, because all sorts of organizations already exist for this purpose, and these will grow in number after the war. The best way to solve all problems of this kind would be the creation not of a Parliament with majorities and minorities, but the creation of some commission comprising representatives of the great nations. Not diplomats, but influential members of each Government, sitting at regular intervals.

"The commission, which would not lay down any rigid rules, but rather would give the greatest publicity to its work, would more likely on all problems reach by compromise or mutual agreement a decision which would prevent a clash in many if not in all instances. No treaties could be passed unless in conformity with the rules of the league.

"Peace would thus be rendered possible, and if mutual sacrifices were made an agreement would be reached without having to throw all the forces of the united nations against one or two who wished to break the commonly arrived at law.

"The question of the admission of Germany to the league will be discussed at length, but it is probable that no settlement will be reached until after the signing of the peace—a peace which probably would not have been broken in 1914 if a league of nations had existed and a conference had taken place."

FRANCE WARMER TO LEAGUE.

But Wilson, by Return to France, Will See Plan Through.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—In some quarters the decision of President Wilson to return to France, which is not yet known generally, is bound to bring statements that he has changed his mind. This view is borne out, in a measure, by the circumstance that when the President came to Paris it was with a rather indefinite idea as to the tardiness of diplomatic procedure. Even when this was realized there remained in the minds of many of those concerned in making peace quickly a feeling that dilatory efforts were being made to prevent an early solution of the problems confronting the allied statesmen.

Since then there has been an improvement in this regard, so that now it is generally accepted that the best thing to do is to formulate a peace agreement with the greatest possible speed and to let the nations of the world return to a normal basis.

But the President, it is evident, does not intend to take any chances on his principles being sidetracked or emasculated on account of his absence, and it is mainly on this account, it is believed, that he has definitely determined to come back for the finish.

One of the most encouraging signs of the success of the plan for the formation of a League of Nations on practical lines is afforded by the knowledge that the interview on Monday between President Wilson and Leon Bourgeois was productive of an agreement on the most important particulars of the formula for the organization of the league. M. Bourgeois is one of the foremost advocates of the league idea, and he has been designated as the French representative on the commission which will draft the plan for adoption by the Peace Conference.

The French Government had shown rather a cold attitude toward the league proposal as President Wilson conceived it—as, for instance, was shown in Clemenceau's recent advocacy in the Chamber of Deputies of a balance of power combination with America, Great Britain, France, and Italy as members, which President Wilson opposed indirectly in his addresses in Manchester and Rome.

But now, judged by what is learned in the best-informed circles as to yesterday's consultation between President Wilson and M. Bourgeois, there seems tangible ground for believing that France is willing to agree to an organization of as many nations as will be practical in its deterrent effects on the disposition of any nation or nations to resort to hostilities.

All circumstances point to the drafting in the near future of a working plan for a league that will combine the features of the formula prepared by Lord Robert Cecil, General Smuts, Leon Bourgeois, and the American delegation under President Wilson's direction.

BETHMANN DEPRECATES RIGOR IN PEACE TERMS

BERLIN, Jan. 21, (Associated Press.)—Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg, German Chancellor at the outbreak of the war, has made the following statement to The Associated Press concerning peace questions:

"I am asked what constitutes a peace of justice. I answer gladly. President Wilson has announced an exalted program for the future regulation of international amity and that there shall be an arrangement similar to that which has long been the aim of the policy of all individual States.

"Just as a constitution guarantees to a citizen in the exercise of his fundamental rights as a human being protection against violence, and freedom and integrity of person and property and honor, so the new League of Nations shall assure to all States, great or small, those rights which are consequent upon mutual recognition and respect.

"Only if the peace to be concluded is animated by this spirit can it deserve the name of a peace of justice. If the victor exploits the distressed condition of the conquered, violates his body, compels him to employ his forces of blood and property in enslaved service, he can then, it seems, boast his power, but justice will veil her head and the ideal of a League of Nations will sink into dust and ashes under the domination of a new international Bolshevism.

"What do I think about the division of responsibility for the war? My answer is plain. I have precisely the same opinion today which I always have had and which as Chancellor I repeatedly expressed in the Reichstag. I have never carried on a spurious propaganda, but have always endeavored to serve the truth."

Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg admitted in an interview which he gave in Berlin last November, it may be recalled, that the Germans erred in the administration of Alsace-Lorraine and in paying too little heed to Pan German activities. He blamed also what he called a lack of energy in German foreign policy, and "many deficiencies in international policies."

Preparing Labor Proposals.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—In the discussion of labor problems before the Peace Conference, it is said, British labor leaders, headed by George N. Barnes, a member of the British peace delegation, are preparing proposals to be handed to the congress. It is not known here what value the International Labor Conference in Switzerland will have in this respect, but it is understood that the British Government does not object to the meeting, which might be useful in an advisory capacity.

The amount therefore so far realized by the national war bonds is £1,640,562,055.

WILSON AIDS BRITISH FUND.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—President Wilson has sent an autographed copy of his famous fourteen points, set out on official White House notepaper, to be sold on behalf of a fund for the dependents of British soldier and sailor journalists.

The document will be auctioned from the stage of the London Coliseum on Feb. 2, when a matinée performance on behalf of the fund is to be given. Hope is expressed here that British interest will result in the document's being retained in this country for presentation to some public institution.

At Sotheby's on Feb. 4 there will be auctioned a mass of correspondence of great political and social interest. It consists of letters exchanged between Delane, editor of The London Times, and some of the most famous of his contemporaries during the period from 1841 to 1877. It includes letters from the Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Palmerston, Disraeli, &c.

Over ten years ago Arthur Dasent, nephew and biographer of Delane, used many of the letters in his book. The Dossier now offered for sale contains these and others hitherto unpublished.

FAVORS AIR MINISTRY.

Senator Chamberlain Advocates Keeping Up Aerial Preparedness.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Creation of a separate Air Department with a Cabinet member, as its head was advocated today by Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, Chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, in a statement in which he expressed the belief that the control of the air would "unquestionably be the deciding factor in the next war, overshadowing in importance the forces on either land or sea."

"The United States," said Senator Chamberlain, "ought to profit by the experiences of the war with Germany and formulate a constructive program accordingly. We ought to continue to manufacture airplanes in reasonable quantities, but more than all we should endeavor to develop mechanical flight so as to be able, should the emergency arise, to achieve and maintain control of the air.

"The air problem in the future seems to rest on efficient co-ordination. It is for this reason that we—speaking for a majority of the members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee—recommend a unification of effort and still see what is best for the development of aerial navigation, whether it should be the creation of a separate air branch, or department, whose head should sit in the Cabinet along with the Secretaries of War and Navy."

DALMATIA INDISPENSABLE.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—The Italian delegation to the Peace Conference held a conference with General Diaz, the Italian Commander in Chief, who arrived in Paris today, to discuss Italy's aspirations from a military and strategic point of view, with special attention to the possession of what the Italians call "the key of the doors on land and sea."

To realize this object, the Italian delegates, it is said, consider it indispensable that Italy possess the Brenner Pass and also the Dalmatian coast and Zara and Sebenico. Without this territory, they say, it would be impossible for Italy to control the Adriatic, as otherwise the coastline of Central Italy would be at the mercy of any nation possessing Dalmatia.

We could have saved her many times our fee

The relatives of an elderly woman who had been ill for a long time told us that her fortune consisted chiefly of securities which were in another city in a safe-deposit box. It had not been opened for two years, since no one but herself had access to it.

In that time her income had been held up and she had lost considerable in interest, since no coupons had been cut or collected and many bonds were overdue.

Had these securities been placed in our care for safekeeping, we would have collected principal and interest promptly, re-investing the principal if so directed.

Our charges for such services are very reasonable. We shall be glad to give you an estimate if you will write for estimate sheet and booklet "The Modern Method of Caring for Securities."

PIQUED OVER POWER OF FIVE NATIONS

Smaller Countries Feel They Should Have More Voice in Peace Preliminaries.

LOCAL PROBLEMS INVOKED

Russia, the Scheldt, and Adriatic Among Them—Present System Aims at Expediency.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—There is already considerable rumbling of discontent among the representatives of the small nations at the Peace Conference because of what they consider the too great predominance of the five big powers in the plan to arrange all questions before they are submitted to the full conference for final decision. It is assumed that this final decision will be necessarily a mere perfunctory approval by the other nations of what America, England, France, Italy, and Japan have already determined upon and that any attempt to do anything but approve will be futile. Incidentally there is some curiosity as to who is dominating what suddenly became the "Big Five" instead of the "Big Four."

At the outset of the preliminaries it was only America, France, England, and Italy that counted; and then, without explanation, Japan gets added to the list of the big powers. This fact has added much to the resentment of some of the small nations who suffered most from the war and who took a far more active part in the war. The objection on the part of the small nations, "oppressed" and otherwise, is to the principle of the thing. None of them contends that every question could or should be threshed out in a full meeting of the more than sixty delegates of all the nations; but those who are dissatisfied with the present plan believe there should be some middle ground, and incidentally there is some revival of talk concerning the rights and equality of small nations.

Questions of Representation.

Some feeling of this sort was shown just before the opening of the conference, when Belgium and Serbia were credited with only two delegates each and, in spite of their war sufferings, put in the same category with Siam. That was remedied by their getting three each, but not until after three had been allotted to Brazil, upon the insistence of the United States, because Brazil is the largest South American nation participating in the conference.

But that is another detail. The real complaint of the small nations does not touch so much upon the numerical strength of their delegations as upon the plan of the five big powers to keep them out of the most vital discussion at which the real decisions will be reached.

As already intimated, they think there should be a middle ground considered, an elastic committee system by which any small nation or group of small nations would have full equality with the big ones in deciding each question which directly concerned it or them. For example, the investigation of the Russian question which is now being made by the big five preliminary to arriving at a most vital conclusion is being cited today as an illustration of the exclusiveness that ought not to be.

Rumania borders on Russia, and therefore is vitally interested in what happens to and in the latter country, but she has no part in the discussion. There is not much love for Rumania, as a matter of fact, by the other small countries, but as a matter of principle they declare she should be considered in all matters pertaining to the State across her own borders.

Another illustration which is given by those who object to placing the entire work of remaking the world in the hands of the men who are the Premiers or Foreign Ministers of the five countries is the Adriatic Sea question. That involves a dispute full of war possibilities between Italy and Serbia. Each of these two countries is fully as much concerned as the other, but under the present arrangement Italy will have a place at the table when the matter is decided, while Serbia will be outside, or, at best, in as a witness.

Another question for the conference to decide is that of the rights of Holland and Belgium in the use of the River Scheldt. Although they are rated as small nations, Holland and Belgium feel they should have as much to say in this matter as Japan and Italy, for example.

On Plea of Expediency.

The chief argument put forth in favor of the plan to let the five big powers dominate is that of expediency. A French advocate of this system put the matter to me this way:

"If all the nations delegated were given an opportunity to discuss we would never get through. There would be no peace signed at all. Furthermore, there would be too much opportunity for intrigue, trading, and corruption. To put it brutally, if every small State had a voice there would be too much temptation in some quarters to sell out or dicker.

"As it is, the world is much safer with all responsibility fixed in the five chief powers. The views of the representatives of those five powers are sufficiently divergent on the great fundamental questions to assure us that there can be no collusion, no sacrificing or exploiting of small countries. There is no sense in all this talk about a repetition of the crimes of the Vienna Congress. No such repetition is contemplated, nor would it be possible.

"There is no small nation in the world that will not have one or more sponsors at the meetings of the Big Five to guard her interests. For example, President Wilson is there. Although Mr. Wilson himself has said so much in favor of publicity, thereby causing the present discontent, he has since admitted privately that there must be limitations if any practical results are to be reached in the life of the present generation. We are not making this peace in heaven, but on earth, where everybody is human."

REPORT EX-KING MANUEL ON SHIP OFF LISBON

If He Won't Take the Throne, It May Be Offered to Anita Stewart's Husband.

PARIS, Jan. 22, (Havas.)—Former King Manuel of Portugal is at present on board a steamship off Lisbon, a dispatch from Madrid says. Le Matin says that Manuel has left London for an unknown destination.

The monarchist movement in Portugal, according to advices received here, appears to be making progress. A monarchist proclamation was read at Valenca-do-Minho in the presence of the garrison. The republican flag was then torn down and burned and the monarchist flag hoisted in its place.

Portuguese circles here have learned that if former king Manuel is not ready to head the monarchical movement in Portugal, his followers will offer the throne to Dom Miguel of Braganza, husband of Anita Stewart, an American.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—A semi-official statement received today from Lisbon says:

"Tamagnini Barbosa, the Premier and Minister of War, who is ill, has been replaced by General Hipolito, commander of the Coimbra force."

Dispatches from Madrid yesterday giving the make-up of the monarchical Government proclaimed by the Portuguese revolutionists in Oporto, listed Barbosa as Minister of War in the monarchical Cabinet. Senhor Barbosa had been for several weeks the Premier of the Government established at Lisbon after the assassination of President Paes in December, and he was mentioned in Lisbon advices, dated Monday, as continuing his duties as Premier in the Government.

ARMS AND 1,000 REDS SEIZED IN WARSAW

Germans in East Prussia Organizing an Army to Resist the Bolsheviki.

WARSAW, Jan. 21. (Associated Press.)—Several thousand rifles, many machine guns, and thousands of hand grenades, intended for use in an attempt to overturn the Pilsudski Government which has now been succeeded by the Paderewski Government, were discovered in Warsaw today. The Government authorities also arrested 1,000 Bolsheviki. The arrests were made in an effort to secure orderly elections to the National Assembly.

Prince Sapieha, who led the brief and futile attempt against the Pilsudski Government a fortnight ago, is still in prison. He will be released when the political situation becomes settled. However, there is no law under which he can be prosecuted.

That the German population of the East Russian Provinces not only are anti-Bolshevist, but are organizing an army to protect the frontiers is the main fact found during a journey from Warsaw over the Polish frontier to Danzig and Memel. It was also found that the army of General von Hoffman, both men and officers, while uncontaminated by Bolshevism were demoralized and indifferent to the fact that the arms and munitions they were selling to Lithuania will later be used against the Germans.

From conversations picked up aboard trains, which were crowded with civilians and soldiers, it seemed apparent that the new army has been organized locally, but is under vague direction from Berlin. The single district of Ostrowo furnished 30,000 soldiers. It is affirmed that two divisions of the new army are gradually working to the frontier of East Prussia, there to halt the Bolshevist troops, against which feeling is bitter. These troops have experienced officers. Though young men they are paid six marks a day.

Although the Bolsheviki are now near Libau and also have occupied Riga, they will be resisted at Memel. Eylau Tilsit, and other towns, and also the country, are orderly. There have been no peasant uprisings.

CRIME WAVE IN PARIS.

The Matin Lays Robberies to Deserters, Including Americans.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—Thefts, acts of violence, and armed attacks are increasing daily in Paris, according to the Matin, which declares that the demobilization of the troops is bound to have the effect of further increasing acts of lawlessness. The Matin continues:

"Many former prisoners now freed from the army are hurrying to make up for lost time. This band of lawbreakers is now increased by contingents from the armies of our allies. Such a statement need not offend the susceptibilities of our friends beyond the Channel and across the Atlantic. A national army means the recruiting of all classes, good as well as bad.

"During the last week 130 night assaults in the Paris district were reported as having been committed by deserters from the American Army. The task of handling this scum of an energetic and hard-working population has been entrusted to Deputy Police Commissioner Evans, one of the best New York police experts, who will act in conjunction with the Provost Marshal's Office, which employs nine companies of 150 to 200 men each as well as three companies of patrolmen. In addition to these police there will be a company of detectives in uniform, but not wearing special marks, neither the armlet marked 'M. P.' which the military police wear nor a revolver visible. Six detectives in private clothes will work with the French detective service."

At Police Headquarters it was said that the department had no official representative in Paris and that no authority had been delegated to any one of its members in war service in France to assist the French authorities in the work mentioned in the cablegram. There is no "Deputy Police Commissioner Evans" connected with the New York Police Department. It was the opinion of police officials here that General Pershing or some member of the American General Staff may have assigned some one of the former New York policemen, who are now in overseas service, to assist in this special work.

BIG LOSS IN WAR MATERIAL.

Thorne Foresees Years of Work in Selling Government Property.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Explaining to the House Military Committee today plans for disposing gradually of the enormous stocks of supplies on hand when the armistice was signed, R. J. Thorne, the War Department's Assistant Director of Purchase and Storage, said there necessarily would be great loss to the Government, and that it probably would take several years to sell all of the surplus. He said from now on the 1918 wool clip probably would be sold at the British issue price, or far below its cost to the Government.

Among the things Mr. Thorne said the Government had on hand were 45,000 tons of heavy barbed wire, 150,000 horses, 2,000,000 pairs of rubber hip boots, and great supplies of food and clothing of every description. He said the department could not avoid having large surplus supplies, as the armistice was signed at a time when preparations were being made for feeding and clothing 2,50,000 additional drafted men monthly.

MARTIAL LAW IN TIPPERARY

DUBLIN, Jan. 22. (Associated Press.)—The Sinn Fein Parliament provided only a one-day sensation. Its members held a brief meeting at the Mansion House this afternoon, but behind closed doors. Afterward Count Plunkett told the reporters that a statement of the business transacted would be furnished to the press later, thus following the precedent of the Paris Conference.

The official report of the meeting says that twenty-four Deputies were present. A temporary Prime Minister was elected unanimously, and four other Ministers, nominated by the Speaker, were approved by the Parliament.

According to the provisional constitution the Ministry is to consist of a President and four executive officers, Secretaries of Finance, Home Affairs, Foreign Affairs, and National Defense. All revenues will be raised on the vote of the "Dail Eireann." The Constitution may be altered upon seven days' notice.

Count Plunkett, Professor Edward de Valera, and Arthur Griffith will probably be appointed Irish delegates to the Peace Congress.

A group of a hundred young men gathered outside the Mansion House during the secret session, but no excitement of any kind was shown. The public was far more interested today in the murder of two policemen in Tipperary yesterday at the time the Parliament was meeting. This is taken to signify the beginning of a new period of terrorism, which veteran Irish politicians expect will include other assassinations and attempts to destroy Government buildings and public works. The extremists are exceedingly anxious to get explosives.

Two policemen were guarding a cartload of gelignite which was being taken to a mine when they were surrounded by masked men. The policemen were shot dead and the explosives carried off. The immediate sequel was a proclamation placing Tipperary under the Crimes act, which means a régime much like the occupied German cities are undergoing.

All meetings are prohibited and nobody can pass in or out of the district without permits. None of the residents may be outdoors after 7 o'clock in the evening without a permit. No letters may pass in or out without censorship. Enough troops were quickly sent to the district to enforce these regulations.

The Clare district was recently proclaimed under the Crimes act, and the measure was enforced with apparent success.

Comments of the Irish papers on the "Parliament" are to the effect that it was an empty beating of the air and that its special purpose was to attract the attention of the world, particularly of the Peace Conference, to the Sinn Feiners' case. In the opinion of the papers most of the Dublin people believe that the Sinn Feiners expected and desired the congress to be suppressed by the police or the military.

The gist of the newspaper comment is that if Count Plunkett presents the Sinn Fein's declaration of Irish independence the Peace Conference will merely put it in the archives without discussion, under the rules adopted permitting any one to present petitions.

The Irish censorship prevented the appearance of the Sinn Fein's declaration of independence in the Dublin papers.

Without interference, the Lord Mayor of Dublin, Laurence O'Neill, having obtained passports from the government, will proceed to Paris to tender to President Wilson the freedom of the city of Dublin, recently voted by the corporation.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—Although no official notice has been received that the committee named by the Irish Parliament in Dublin yesterday, comprising Count Plunkett, Professor Edward de Valera, and Arthur Griffith, was coming to Paris to present the claims of Ireland to self-determination to the Peace Conference, it has already been determined that if the delegation secures passports its application for admission to the conference to represent Ireland as an independent nationality will be passed upon by the Committee on Credentials, under the rules.

This committee is the sole judge initially on all applications for admission to the conference, although possibly an appeal might lie to the full conference in certain circumstances.

Thus far the Credentials Committee has held no meetings, but as it is anticipated that there will be a flood of applications from minor nationalities or races, it is the intention of the committee to hold a meeting shortly for the purpose of adopting a code of rules to be followed.

Calls Ireland Peace Congress Test.

Supreme Court Justice Daniel F. Cohalan said yesterday that the meeting of the Irish Constitutional Assembly was the logical sequence of events in Ireland, the results of the intensive Sinn Fein campaign and the recent elections in that country.

"No greater test can be made of the capacity and sincerity of those who control the Peace Conference," he said, "than their disposition of the case of Ireland. If they reject her claims they will alienate a large section of liberty-loving people throughout the world and arouse fears that their conference will no more effect a permanent and just peace than did the conference of Vienna."

GERMANY ORDERED TO LET POLES ALONE

British Note Says Future of Eastern Frontiers Depends on the Peace Conference.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 22.—In reply to a British note requesting the German Government to refrain from further provocation of the Polish population in East and West Prussia, Posen, and Silesia, the German Government, according to a dispatch from Berlin, expresses agreement with Great Britain that the future of the German eastern frontiers depends upon the Peace Conference. The German note expresses surprise at the request to refrain from provocation and says that the request "can only be attributed to the fact that the British Government is inadequately informed of events in the East."

The German note declares that Germany has done everything to redress Polish grievances and accuses the Poles of continually provoking the Germans. It says that Posen is in a state of upheaval and that the German population has appealed for help to the German Government, which has been forced to take military measures to restore law and order. The note asserts that while the German Government has refrained from action against Polish Nationals who "planned and committed treason and revolt," it cannot "suffer ambitious imperialism to reign supreme."

Events in Upper Silesia, the German note contends, have nothing in common with national questions, and regarding East Prussia there can be no talk of a national Polish movement there. The note concludes:

"All measures of the German Government since the conclusion of the armistice have only served to carry out the prescriptions of the treaty, toward unjustifiable Polish attempts to bring the Polish question to a head before the Peace Conference."

cerned. Danzig's citizens may rest assured that the highest war councils long since prepared measures for protection of the threatened province."

The division of the old Kingdom of Prussia into seven or eight new States, which is part of the program of the Socialist Government, has aroused a storm of indignation among the reactionary elements, which immediately made it the main issue in the elections for the Prussian State convention, coming Sunday. Even the Socialist Provisional Cabinet governing Russia now has grave apprehensions concerning that division and will meet tomorrow to consider the question. The Cabinet's principal objection is to the clause providing that any section counting over 2,000,000 in population may obtain Statehood. This, some Cabinet members fear, might lead to the splitting of Germany into more States and Statelets than even the most liberal interpretation of self-determination warranted.

The reactionary argument is that it is doubtful if the German Federation can be preserved, and Prussia, if split up according to the Government plan, could never be reunited. Prussia's preservation, however, must be the highest duty of the partriotic parties.

While I am writing this the electric lights all over the city have been suddenly extinguished, the men in the electric works having struck punctually at 5 P. M. They threatened to strike Saturday demanding higher wages, but were persuaded to give the Government's mediator one more chance to settle the differences between the workmen and administrators of various electric works. The mediator, however, failed and the city was thrown into dense darkness with here and there an island of illumination in houses that have private electrical installations. Many families will have to spend all the evening and night in darkness, for candles and lamp fuel of any kind are absolutely unobtainable.

All street cars were stopped in the streets where they happened to be. There soon were immense numbers of pedestrians in the streets, the stores and business houses pouring forth their multitudes of employes two hours earlier than usual.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 22.—The first work of the National Assembly at Weimar on Feb. 6, according to advices received from Berlin, will be to elect a provisional Government.

The assembly will then consider the draft of a Constitution, which is expected to occupy the remainder of February.

SOCIALISTS STILL LEAD IN GERMAN RETURNS

Majority Party Has 132 Seats So Far, Not Enough to Control Without Coalition.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 22.—It is reported unofficially from Berlin that 319 delegates were known to have been elected to the German National Assembly from twenty-eight districts up to 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. They were distributed as follows:

Majority Socialists, 132; Democrats, 58; Centrists, 57; National Party, 28; Independent Socialists, 22; People's Party, 14; scattering, 8.

Potsdam returned to the National Assembly five Majority Socialists, one Independent Socialist, two Democrats, one National Party delegate, and one from the People's Party.

Partial reports from the elections in lower Bavaria and upper Pbalz show that the Bavarian People's party won five seats, the Majority Socialists two and the Peasants' Alliance two.

In Schleswig-Holstein and Lubeck, the Majority Socialists won five seats and the Democrats three. The Independent Socialists and the Christian People's party failed to win a single seat there.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 22.—The final results of the German elections in the Cologne-Aix-La Chapelle District show the success of eight Centrists, three Majority Socialists, one Democrat, and one member of the People's Party.

Although the Majority Socialists obtained an absolute majority in Berlin and the suburbs, according to a Berlin dispatch to the Handelsblad, they cannot consider the results satisfactory, as the bourgeois parties found more support than had been expected. The Lokal-Anzeiger estimates that the bourgeois parties up to Tuesday afternoon were assured of as many seats as the two Socialist parties combined.

One of the great surprises of the election was the success of the Socialists in East Prussia, where they were formerly detested by the voters. The Conservatives polled a heavy vote throughout the country.

WORKMEN CONTROL BREMEN.

Occupy Public Buildings and Disarm Soldiers in Barracks.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 22.—The City of Bremen is virtually in the hands of the workingmen, according to a dispatch to the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger from that seaport.

The workingmen have occupied the barracks, the Town Hall, the telephone office, and the banks, and have posted machine guns in the market place and in public buildings. The soldiers in the barracks were disarmed by the workers.

A general strike has been proclaimed at Remscheid (Rhenish Prussia) as a protest against the killing of Dr. Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, a Barmen dispatch states. The factories have been closed and traffic has been stopped.

The officials and workmen on the railways in the district of Halle have also gone on strike. They demand higher wages and a shorter work day.

FORESEES AIRSHIPS IN OVERSEAS TRADE

British Ministry Predicts Their Use as Freight Carriers Throughout the World.

CROSS OCEAN IN THREE DAYS

Hopes to Develop Craft That Will Carry 200 Tons and Cruise 20,000 Miles.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Visions of mighty aircraft soaring over continents and oceans at a speed greater than that of an express train and carrying freight equal to the contents of twenty trucks are conjured up by the "Notes on Airships for Commercial Purposes" issued by the Air Ministry.

Among the striking points contained in this document are future airships which, it is predicted, will be of 10,000,000 cubic feet capacity, or about five times the capacity of the German Zeppelin, and 6,000 horsepower, carrying freight of 200 tons at a maximum speed of more than eighty-five miles an hour. These leviathans, 1,100 feet long and 150 feet high, could stay in the air for three weeks, and possess a range of 20,000 miles, or nearly once around the world. With a crew of six officers and twenty-six men they could go over or around storms, link up continents and oceans by means of stations 2,000 to 3,000 miles apart, and bring New York within a leisurely three days' journey of London. The larger the airship, the greater its efficiency.

Nine airship stations and a number of airships now used by the Admiralty may soon be available for commercial purposes. It is made clear in these notes that there will be no commercial competition between the airship and the airplane. The airship, says the report, is essentially a long-distance, weight-carrying craft, as compared with the short-distance, high-speed airplane. The airship, it is held, is worthy of consideration for commercial flight involving nonstop journeys of 1,000 miles and upward. It appears that for commercial purposes large rigid airship stations should be established at distances of 2,000 or 3,000 miles apart, mainly for transoceanic traffic, while the airplane would be used for bringing passengers and merchandise to these from neighboring countries.

For example, the Continent service could run from Lisbon to New York, passengers being taken to Lisbon from Paris, Rome, &c., by airplane. In this the war airplane would compete with the train and the airship with the steamer, over which she would have the advantage of reducing the average time of transit by at least 50 per cent. In addition to this, airships would be used for linking up railway lines in such places as Central Africa, where the country is difficult, both for airplanes and land transport.

Although airships are generally considered to be fair weather craft, up to the end of November there were only nine days in 1918 when no airship flight took place in the British Isles, which are notorious for possessing almost the worst weather conditions in the world. Successful experiments have been made in mooring airships in the open. For instance, an airship has been moored out for six weeks in a perfectly open expanse to a specially designed mast. Only two or three men were required to look after the ship, and winds of up to fifty-two miles an hour have been ridden out without any damage whatever resulting.

The possibilities of using floating sheds on the water are also being inquired into, and appear to be promising. The use of the mooring mast will very greatly increase the regularity of any airship service, as the chief difficulty at present consists in taking airships in and out of sheds.

In 1914 the average endurance of the German rigid airship at a cruising speed was under one day, and the maximum full speed about fifty miles an hour.

In 1918, with the German L-70 class of 2,195,000 cubic feet capacity, the endurance at forty-five miles per hour has risen to 177.5 hours, and the maximum full speed to seventy-seven miles per hour. The British R-38 class, of 2,720,000 cubic feet capacity, has an estimated cruising endurance at forty-five miles an hour of 211 hours, thirty-four hours greater than the German L-70 class.

The cost of a 10,000,000 cubic feet airship is estimated between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000. Official statistics show that only one airship has been lost in this country owing to catching fire in the air, although 83,360 hours have been flown, and over 2,500,000 miles were covered during the war. In the case referred to the flight was an experimental one, with a new type of ship, and the cause has since been ascertained and eliminated.

DEMOCRATS PLAN FIGHT AGAINST PROHIBITION

Assembly Committee Reports a Referendum Bill Together with the Ratification Measure.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—Anti-Prohibitionists have not yet given up hope of staving off ratification by the New York Legislature of the Federal Prohibition Amendment. The Judiciary Committee of the Assembly today reported out for discussion on the floor the ratification resolution and a referendum bill, an unlooked-for action by the "drys." Democrats in the House revived the referendum bill. The Senate Taxation and Retrenchment Committee, which is Republican, brought out the ratification resolution by a party vote.

The last stand of the "wets" probably will be made in the Assembly tomorrow morning when the Republican majority will attempt suspension of the rules in order to bring the two liquor propositions to a vote. The action of the Judiciary Committee upset the Republicans to the point where Majority Leader Adler moved for a call of the House with the intention, if sufficient number of Republicans were present, to caucus on the proposals and make the ratification resolution a party measure, as was done in the Upper House. The caucus, however, was not held and instead the suspension of the rules will be attempted tomorrow.

The Assembly Committee voted seven to five to put the ratification proposal before the House. Those in favor of reporting the measure out were Assemblymen Martin, McNab, Pierce, Lown, Jenks, Everett, and Wilson. The five members who opposed its being reported were Pellett, Goldberg, Bloch, O'Hare, and Fertig. In favor of reporting the referendum measure were Rowe, Everett, Pellett, Wilson, Goldberg, Bloch, O'Hare, and Fertig; against this proposal were Martin, McNab, Pierce, Lown, and Jenks.

Assemblyman Goldberg of New York moved for the reporting of the referendum bill in order, he said, that "the entire liquor question may be freely discussed on the floor of the House."

The vote in the Assembly Committee was taken just after Lemuel E. Quigg, counsel for the New York City hotel interests, had argued for an hour against the Constitutionality of the amendment. Even if the Constitutionality of the proposal was sustained by the United States Supreme Court, the country would never be dry, he declared, until patent medicines were brought under the ban.

The Senate unanimously passed today Senator Foley's bill to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors to men in military or naval uniforms. The measure was requested by the War and Navy Departments.

BERLIN LIGHTS OUT; TRAMWAYS CRIPPLED

BERLIN, Jan. 21, (via Copenhagen.)—Darkness reigned this evening in most parts of the city which are supplied by the municipal electric works, whose employes went on strike, and in other parts, where the strikers cut the electric cables.

Most of the cinema theatres, not having their own electric installations, had to turn away their audiences. The telephone service was partly affected.

Most of the restaurants and hotels were completely dark and closed. The Mayor of Berlin is now negotiating with the strikers, who may return to work soon.

BERLIN, Jan. 22, via Amsterdam, (Associated Press.)—The tramway men of Berlin are also on strike and that service has been partially suspended.

$16,859,356 ASKED BY B. R. T. RECEIVER

Garrison Applies to Court for Permission to Issue Notes for Company's Needs.

$1,100,000 IN WRECK CLAIMS

Appropriation for New Surface Cars Ordered by Court Is Included in the Budget.

Lindley M. Garrison, Receiver of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, the New York Municipal Railway Corporation and the New York Consolidated Railroad Company, made application yesterday to the United States District Court for permission to issue receiver's certificates in the amount of $16,859,356.96. On the filing of the application, Judge Julius M. Mayer gave notice that he would hear all parties interested in the application on next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Copies of the application were served upon the following lawyers, representing the clients named:

Cravath & Henderson, for the note holder's committee; Rushmore, Bisbee & Stern, for one stockholder's committee and Cullin & Dykeman, for the other; William L. Ransom, for the Public Service Commission; William P. Burr, Corporation Counsel, for the City; George S. Franklin, for the War Finance Club Corporation; Walter F. Taylor, for the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company and The Central Union Trust Company, trustee under certain underlying mortgages. Copies of the application were served also on fifteen banks and trust companies, holding bills payable of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company to the amount of $3,850,000.

The sum asked for would provide, not only for all current obligations of the three companies, but for extensions of power station facilities, the purchase of additional subway and surface cars, construction now going on and additional contracts for construction and equipment to be entered into within sixty or ninety days. After giving all the lien obligations of the companies in receivership, except real estate mortgages, Mr. Garrison, in his application, says:

"Your petitioner has made an investigation of the possibility of obtaining the funds required, and is of the opinion, and so represents to this court, that it will be impossible for the necessary funds to be obtained unless receiver's certificates are issued therefor which shall have a lien upon part or all of the property of the companies whose property is in possession of your receiver, superior to the liens of some or all of the said mortgages of the said companies hereinabove set forth, * * * wherefore, your petitioner prays that he may be authorized * * * to issue receiver certificates * * * in such an amount, in such denominations and series, maturing at such times, bearing such rate of interest and secured by such lien or liens as to the court may seem best."

For the Tunnel Accident.

Of the total amount asked for, $1,100,000 will be needed to pay the claimants in connection with the Malbone Street tunnel accident last November. In commenting on these claims, the application reads:

"I beg leave to repeat the statement contained in my report as temporary receiver, submitted to this court on Jan. 15, 1918, which was as follows: On Nov. 1, 1918, a deplorable accident occurred on the Brighton Beach line at Malbone Street, resulting in 94 deaths and 208 persons injured. Prior to my appointment settlements had been made in 12 death cases and 102 personal injury cases at an aggregate cost of about $138,000. While only an approximation can be given of the amount of damages still accruing, the sum will probably not be less than $1,100,000."

"It will clearly be impossible for the amount of these claims to be settled and paid for out of the current receipts of the properties in the receivership in the judgment of petitioner it is desirable that these claims should be settled so far as settlements can be entered into, and that the amounts agreed upon in the settlements should be paid all at the earliest possible date."

The application specifies the immediate need of about $2,300,000 for obligations maturing up to and including Feb. 20, 1919. These payments are: For the account of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, $948,024.02; for the account of the New York Consolidated Railroad Company, $847,092.82; for the account of the New York Municipal Railway Corporation, $537,818.04. The items for the account of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company are as follows: Power station contracts, $235,512; taxes due Nov. 1, 1918, with interest at 7 per cent. 1, 1918, $87,512.02; vouchers prior to Jan. 17, 1919, excluding interest on notes and loans, $625,000. The amount needed for the New York Consolidated Railroad Company is to cover the following items: Taxes due Nov. 1, 1918, with interest at 7 per cent. from Nov. 1, 1918, $308,817.22; interest due Feb. 1, 1919, on Kings County Elevated bonds, $140,000; interest due Feb. 1, 1919, on Brooklyn Union Elevated bonds, $399,175.

The immediate needs of the New York Municipal Railway Corporation are: Vouchers for construction and equipment, rendered Jan. 17, 1919, $140,426; purchasing agent's orders for January and February, estimated, $50,000; payrolls, January and February estimated, $38,000; contractor's estimates due Jan. 20, 1919, $135,844; contractor's estimates, due Feb. 20, 1919, $150,000; taxes due Nov. 1, 1918, with interest at 7 per cent. from Nov. 1, 1918, $23,648.04.

Needs of the B. R. T.

Of the total amount asked for, $16,859,356.96, the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company requires $6,438,833.02; the New York Consolidated Railroad Company needs $1,947,992.23, and the New York Municipal Railway Corporation requires $8,452,531.62. The $6,458,833.02 for the account of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company is needed for the following purposes: To provide for enlargement of power stations, $2,986,321; to provide for fifty additional surface cars already contracted for, and improvements to existing equipment, approximately $710,000; to purchase and equip 200 additional surface cars to comply with court orders affecting an additional car equipment, $2,000,000; taxes now due and payable, with interest from Nov. 1, 1918, at 7 per cent., $87,512.02; for work done and in progress in replacement of storage and dock facilities, approximately $50,000; to pay audited vouchers for operation and unpaid payrolls and supply accounts incurred in operation within four months prior to the receivership, approximately $625,000.

The $1,947,992.32 for the account of the New York Consolidated Railroad Company is required for taxes not in litigation, with interest from Nov. 1, 1918, at 7 per cent., $308,817.32; payments to claimants in connection with the Malbone Street accident, approximately $1,100,000; interest due Feb. 1, 1919, on first mortgage bonds of the Kings County Elevated Railroad Company, $140,000; interest due Feb. 1, 1919, on Brooklyn Elevated Railroad Company, first mortgage bonds, $399,175.

The total amount to be expended for the account of the New York Municipal Railway Corporation, $8,452,531.62, will be expended for payment of purchasing agent's orders, $971,820.01; payment of purchasing agent's orders in connection with the Brighton Beach line, $174,-330.84; amount of outstanding obligations covered by existing formal contracts, $3,782,812.73; additional contracts to be entered into within the next sixty or ninety days for construction and equipment and miscellaneous expenditures, $1,000,000; taxes not in litigation, with interest from Nov. 1, 1918, at 7 per cent., $23,548.04; purchase of 100 additional subway cars, $2,500,000.

The item of $2,000,000 for 200 additional surface cars attracted attention, because Mr. Garrison is not receiver of the surface lines. But the application gives the following explanation for inserting this item in the B. R. T. account:

"The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company owns all, or substantially all, of the stock of the street surface railroad companies for which the cars are to be acquired, and in accordance with its previous operations it has already made arrangements as such holding company to take care of the financing of the acquisition of fifty of the cars, and would, in ordinary course, handle the financing of the remaining 200 cars."

Mayor Hylan sent a letter to Mr. Garrison yesterday calling his attention to the wooden cars used in the Chambers Street subway. In his letter the Mayor said:

"The operation of wooden cars in the subway, in which thousands of people are compelled to ride, is a grave public menace. Further, the headway of trains in the early part of the rush in the morning and at night should be shortened, so that there will be less overcrowding. If the heavy traffic schedule morning and evening were placed in operation a little in advance of the rush hour and continued during heavy traffic and steel side-door cars substituted for the old wooden cars now in use, a great deal of the scandalous overcrowding and delays would be eliminated."

TRACTION EARNINGS FALL.

Theodore P. Shonts, President of the Interborough Consolidated Corporation, said at the annual meeting of stockholders yesterday that as long as the Interborough Rapid Transit Company's dividends could be continued, receivership for the former company would be avoided, but that in time the question of a receivership must be faced unless the existing situation was remedied. He told the shareholders that the municipal authorities, in holding to the five-cent fare, were losing sight of the most important point involved in the local traction dispute.

"The question of fare had nothing to do with the negotiations regarding the dual subway system," said Mr. Shonts. "The five-cent fare was established as the standard, simply because it was the prevailing rate. Whether the rate was 4, or 5, or 10 cents was not taken into consideration by us. We entered into the contract with the city because of the fixed return which was promised us on our money through a preferred lien on subway earnings.

"If the public authorities continue to maintain their present position of refusal to increase the rate of fare and the Interborough Rapid Transit Company shall find itself unable to realise an amount sufficient to enable it to carry its debt, to the lean period, as extended by the conditions due to the war, they will have violated the spirit of the city's contract with the Interborough Company; and will have destroyed its credit and by that all basis of all future investment of private capital necessary for the development of the city's transportation, and they will not have advanced by a day the city's right to operate the property itself."

The annual report of the Interborough Consolidated Corporation, which is the holding company and controls the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, the Manhattan Railway Company, and the New York Railways, was made public at the meeting. It showed decreases in almost all departments for the year ended Dec. 31. Total income for 1918 was $4,402,175, compared with $6,955,866 in 1917, a decrease of $2,553,691. Expense, taxes, and interest decreased in the course of the year $14,795 to $3,677,261, and net income amounted to $724,914, which was equivalent to $1.58 a share earned on the $45,740,500 preferred stock.

In 1917 net income was $3,262,910, which, after the deduction of 6 per cent. preferred dividends, left a balance equal to 55 cents a share on the 932,626 shares of common stock of no par value. After the payment of the preferred dividends in 1918 the company's surplus was $38,-807, compared with $519,480 in the preceding year, a decrease of $480,673. Total surplus for the year amounted to $1,134,163, a decrease of $511,194 from the 1917 figures.

Refers B. R. T. Application to Deputy.

State Attorney General Newton, it was learned yesterday, has referred the application of Leslie J. Tompkins and Edwin M. Otterbourg to ask permission of the Supreme Court to begin an action to declare forfeit all the charters of the subsidiary companies of the B. R. T. system to Deputy Attorney General Cheney, until recently a Public Service Commissioner for the Second District. Attorney General Newton, it was said, will take no action until he has received Judge Cheney's report.

SENATE REPUBLICANS ADOPT HARMONY PLAN

Lodge, on Vote of Caucus, Selects Committee to Frame a Reorganization.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Senate Republicans in caucus today voted for a committee of seven to be appointed by Senator Lodge to frame rules for reorganizing committees when the Republicans assume control of that body. The caucus was called to settle differences between the Old Guard and Progressives.

Senator Lodge appointed on the committee Senators Lenroot, Cummins, Smoot, Norris, Harding, Knox, and Hale, four "regulars" and three Progressives.

Senator Penrose, who insists that he must have the Chairmanship of the Finance Committee, did not attend the caucus. He announced, however, that he would demand the seniority rule in the naming of the Chairman of the committee, and that he would fight for the place. Beyond that he made it known he had no particular interest in the caucus. Senator La Follette also remained away, as did Senator Borah of Idaho, who has announced himself as opposed to Senator Penrose as Chairman of the Finance Committee.

The Senators discussed the resolution offered to the caucus some time ago to provide that no Senator holding a Chairmanship on any of the ten more important committees be allowed to serve on any other committee.

A substitute was offered by Senator Cummins to provide that no Senator should be assigned to more than two of the ten leading committees and that no Senator who is Chairman of any such committee be appointed to a conference committee unless the bill to be considered is reported by the committee of which he is the Chairman. This resolution, it is expected, will be accepted by Senator Norris.

The Republicans profess not to be worried over the opposition of Senator Borah to the appointment of Senator Penrose to the Finance Committee. An important Chairmanship will be offered to the Idaho Senator. The Republicans will need his vote, having a bare majority in the Senate.

MRS. LEBAUDY LEAVES HOME

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., Jan. 22.—Mrs. Jacques Lebaudy, who was released from the Mineola County Jail yesterday after the Grand Jury had failed to indict her following its investigation of her killing of her husband, left her home at Westbury today and went to Glenwood with her thirteen-year-old daughter Jacqueline, to spend a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Weder, parents of the nurse of Mrs. Lebaudy.

According to attorneys for Mrs. Lebaudy, little progress has been made in tracing the scattered affairs of Lebaudy, whose fortune of several millions is said to be represented by papers in safety deposit vaults and other places of security in various cities.

ATTACK 8-HOUR DAY AT HARBOR HEARING

Boat Owners Also Tell War Board That Their Workers Are Being Well Paid.

CAPTAINS GET PILOT FEES

Testify Men Get Full Wages While Vessels Are Repairing or Awaiting Cargo.

Officers of companies operating tug boats and other harbor craft yesterday gave testimony to the sub-committee of the National War Labor Board in City Hall to show that the operation of the eight-hour day on most of their craft would be impracticable and to refute the assertions of the 16,000 men that they were receiving insufficient wages for their work. A great part of the testimony yesterday was upon the operation of the scows, coal and grain boats, and other non-propelled boats manned by the members of the Harbor Boatmen's union who have abandoned their demand for an eight-hour day but seek higher wages and better working conditions.

All the witnesses summoned by the boat owners told the members of the subcommittee that hundreds of the union men were receiving large pay in overtime charges. They said also that all classes of boats, but particularly grain and coal boats, would not be in continuous service, and that the men were not required to exert their full efforts all the time, although they received full pay. Boats often are laid up for repairs or repainting, they said, while many scows and similar craft wait several days at coal ports for their loads, and frequently are tied up at docks for several weeks. They said that the pay of the men continued in such instances, although there was little work to do aboard the craft. They told the board, under cross-examination, that the fees of the boat owners also continued when a boat was tied up with cargo.

Instances of tug boat captains receiving large sums in pilotage fees in addition to their regular pay from the companies, also were read into the evidence by the War Labor Board. Robert G. Anderson, a tug captain for the Lee Towing Line, testified that for the last eighteen months the captains of their three tugs had earned an average of $167 a month in this service. In the last month two of the captains received $250 a month each. They drew also from the company their regular wages.

Mayor Hylan yesterday wrote a letter to James McGuire, President of the Lighter Catpain's Union, who had written to him demanding an explanation for his action in ordering policemen to run the municipal ferries during the three days when practically all harbor traffic was tied up by the strike of the 16,000 marine workers in the six unions of the Marine Affiliation. In his letter the Mayor said:

Answering your peremptory demand to know why I took the stand I did in the recent sympathetic strike of certain city employes, who had no grievance of their own as to wages or hours, I can only offer in explanation, but without apology, a certified copy of my oath of office as Mayor of this city.

Representatives of the municipal ferries yesterday gave out a statement denying that they had no grievance against the city and that they went out only in sympay with the demands of the other workers. They said that the wage award of the Harbor Wage Adjustment Board, signed last July, called for time and one-half for overtime but that the city had not paid the overtime claims. Back claims from November, 1917, to the date of the July award also remained unpaid, the statement said. The statement denied that the city was paying the prevailing wage scale.

REPORT STRIKE SETTLED.

Clothing Workers, It Is Said, Will Return to Work on Monday.

It was reported last night at the dinner of the National Association of Clothiers at the Hotel Astor, that the strike of workers in the men's and boys' clothing industry of this city had been settled, and that the workers in all probability would be back at their benches on Monday.

It was said that the grievances between the employers and employes have been adjusted. These workers have been on strike for the last three months.

Max Freedman, who was a member of the Board of Arbitration appointed to settle the differences, refused to deny or affirm last night that the strike had been settled, and that the employes would return to work on Monday. He said that Louis Marshall, the attorney, would probably issue a statement today.

SAYS STATE AND CITY FACE FINANCIAL CRISIS

E. R. Seligman Tells Tax Experts Expenditures Are Increasing While Revenues Are Smaller.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—Tax problems affecting the State and its municipalities are being discussed at a three-day conference of tax experts gathered here for their eighth annual meeting, which opened tonight. The conference is being held under the auspices of the New York State Tax Department and the State Tax Association.

Many New Yorkers appear on the program, including Controller Craig, who will address the conference tomorrow morning; L. A. Tanzer, New York lawyer; Robert E. Dowling, Chairman of the Tax Committee of the Real Estate Board of New York, and Edward N. Goodwin and Henry N. Powell, both lawyers. Speaker Sweet of the Assembly, Senator Sage, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and various State tax officials will address the meetings.

The opening session tonight was featured by an address by Edwin R. Seligman, Vice President of the State Tax Association, who said that both the State and New York City were confronted with a financial crisis.

"We are met everywhere," he said, "by the fact of increasing expenditures. And side by side with the increasing expenditures we find a narrowing of the base of revenues. In our State finance the adoption of prohibition will remove a fruitful source of revenue. What is still more important, the not improbable assumption by the Federal Government of the telegraph, the telephone, and perhaps even of the railways, will destroy another most important category of revenue not alone in the State at large but in all localities.

"In New York City the base of taxation is being narrowed almost every year until real estate has come to bear the overwhelming share of local taxation. This has brought with it such a continually increasing tax rate as finally to constitute an intolerable and crushing burden. So far as the tax is imposed on buildings it leads to an increase of rents, which is becoming a grave factor in social unrest.

"For the State simply to increase the direct tax would be of little avail, because the direct tax as actually administered is overwhelmingly a tax on real estate, and the result would be simply to intensify still further the burdens, not only on the farmer, but on the property owners and tenants in our cities.

"Since real estate is already bearing more than its share, it follows that we must resort to business and to income taxes. New York State has taken the first step in the business tax by the Emerson law, which, however, instead of being confined simply to corporate business, must be extended to firms and partnerships. There still remains, as a necessity, the adoption of the income tax."

FIXED RAILROAD POLICY IS ASKED

000, or $1,000,000,000 more than 1917. This expenditure was made to increase efficiency. Nevertheless roads that are alleged to have been run down at the end of nine months of unified private control show:

"1. A larger volume of freight traffic handled in nine months under private than in the same period under Government control.

"2. The largest volume of freight traffic ever handled in any one month.

"3. Loaded-car mileage 7.5 per cent. larger than under Government control.

"4. Greater number of loaded cars per train than under Government control.

"5. Miles run per locomotive per day 7.2 per cent. higher than under Government control.

"6. Miles run per freight car per day 6.1 per cent. higher than under Government control.

"7. The physical condition of freight locomotives better than under Government control.

"8. The condition of freight cars equally as good as under Government control.

"As weather conditions both at the end of 1917 and the beginning of 1918 were unusually severe, the comparison of the two periods is not unfair. Whence it follows that increased efficiency under Government control is, to say the least, not proven."

Outlines a National Policy.

Mr. Kruttschnitt said that the plan for a national railroad policy had been evolved after a period of six years' study, and that the plan, as submitted by Chairman Cuyler, has been adopted by the Association of Railway Executives, representing about 92 per cent. of the earnings of the country.

"In it," said Mr. Kruttschnitt, "we ask Congress to make it possible for the carriers to give the public the advantages of conservation of capital by requiring unification of lines and terminals, when required in the public interest, by promoting useful consolidations and permitting agreements as to rates and practices, the benefits of which have been proved during Federal operation, but which the carriers by law have been prevented from supplying. Its fundamental features, to which details of organization and operating machinery are subordinate, are:

First—The creation of a Department of Transportation headed by a Secretary, who would sit at the President's council table, who would relieve the Interstate Commerce Commission of executive duties, and in whose jurisdiction would be centred rate regulation subject, to revision by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the fixing of wages, which would use the power of the Administration to maintain proper service, to create the necessary credit for the carriers, and to maintain harmonious relations between employers and employes.

"Second—The adoption of a fixed policy as to the revenues of the carriers by requiring that the influence of the President, through his Secretary of Transportation, shall be put behind movements for increased rates which he finds proper, and the establishment of a statutory rule for rate making, which shall require that rates be not only reasonable but adequate and sufficient to protect existing investment and to attract such capital necessary to maintain existing properties up to the standard of the public need, and for the construction of extensions and branches.

"Third—To provide for compulsory Federal incorporation and for the elimination of the conflict of regulating power between the States and the Federal Government as to all essential matters, including rates, State and interstate, with as little interference as possible with the State commissions in carrying out the intended purposes.

Offered as a Suggestion.

"Our plan is not presented in the shape of a hard and fast bill, but is offered as a suggestion, by no means inflexible, of a way to attain desired ends.

"The question of a guarantee was freely discussed in our deliberations, but we do not ask for a guarantee. We recognize that the establishment of a definite guarantee would stifle all incentive to efficient management and would destroy competition as to service and facilities, for if necessary revenue could be obtained without effort what inducement would exist to make an effort?

"Under our plan, if a rate system be put in effect in a given region that will produce revenue adequate to yield a fair return on roads operated under average conditions and with reasonable efficiency, and to enable them to maintain their credit and pay satisfactory returns to their security holders, some roads below the average which should never have been built, or which were poorly located and are indifferently managed, may be forced to reorganize or sell their properties, while those above the average will prosper. But all without exception will be stimulated by self-interest to create new and increase existing traffic by competition in service and facilities, because by so doing the net returns to the owners are increased and at the same time the public is better served."

One of the representatives of the four railroad brotherhoods, probably Warren S. Stone, head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, will present views to the Senate Committee tomorrow at the morning session.

I.W.W. GAINING HERE, SENATORS ARE TOLD

Federal Agent Also Testifies Over 250 Papers Support Radical Socialism.

PACIFISTS UNDER SCRUTINY

Many University Professors Among Them — Government's Census of the Red Agitators.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The Senate Committee on Propaganda, after an executive session, decided late today to hear evidence bearing on present radical activities, particularly those of the radical Socialists, the I. W. W., and kindred movements which are agitating for a condition in this country similar to that which now exists in Russia.

For several months the Military Intelligence Service has been taking a census, so to speak, of persons of Bolshevist activities and listing organizations and newspapers which are advocating attempts to overthrow the Government.

Archibald E. Stevenson of New York, now of the military intelligence service, is a member of a commission which has been investigating this question, and he began, late this afternoon, his narrative of some phases of the situation. The narrative unfolded up to the time the committee adjourned had to deal principally with the activities of the I. W. W., and radical Socialists led by Victor Berger and others of that school.

The data in possession of the Government shows that the agitators were never more busy than they are now. They are supplied with large funds and are backed by several hundred daily and weekly newspapers.

Closely co-operating with the I. W. W., Mr. Stevenson said, was the National Civil Liberties Bureau of New York, which numbers among its members many prominent persons of pacifist views. This organization helped finance the defense of Haywood and the other I. W. W. agitators convicted recently in Chicago and flooded a large part of the country with propaganda in their favor.

Tried to Influence Officials.

Evidence now in the possession of the Government showed, it was testified, that efforts were made before the I. W. W. trial to influence the authorities, but without success. The entire mailing list of the Civil Liberties Bureau was turned over to the I. W. W. The Government has the complete files of the Bureau.

These files showed, it was testified, that in December, 1917, Frank P. Walsh, former co-Chairman with ex-President Taft on the Industrial Relations Commission, addressed a letter to the National Civil Liberties Bureau announcing J. A. Law and L. T. Chumley of the I. W. W. Defense Council, and thereafter Chumley established an office at the bureau.

On Jan. 11, of last year, Roger N. Baldwin, then head of the Civil Liberties Bureau and now in prison, sent to Clarence Darrow, a Chicago lawyer, copies of the minutes of a meeting that was held in this city at about that time. The minutes stated that no action was taken in the absence of Messrs. Walsh and Darrow." A letter written by Chumley stated that he was sending matter to be used in compiling a propaganda pamphlet, and he added that Frank P. Walsh will do the same, and asked for suggestions as to how to raise the $25,000 bail for Haywood.

An advertisement which appeared in The New York Tribune before the I. W. W. trial was also placed in the record. This was an appeal for funds to help finance the trial, and among those whose names appeared as signers of the appeal were Robert W. Bruere, the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, Walter E. Weyle, George P. West, and John A. Fitch.

Despite the conviction of its leaders, the I. W. W. continues to grow, and its propaganda is carried on through newspaper and pamphlets. The principal ones of these papers are published in New York State, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Michigan, California, Washington, Illinois, Ohio, Kansas, and Oregon.

Bolshevism Began in Germany.

Mr. Stevenson said that a close study of the present worldwide radical movements showed that it was of German and not Russian origin. It was all an outgrowth, he said, of the Marxian theories, and the present Bolshevist situation in Russia had spread there from Germany. He cited the fact that at an international conference held by these radicals in Brussels a few years ago the delegates included Lenine of Russia, Victor Plecaf, a Swiss, and Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, the German Socialists who were lynched by Berlin mobs last week.

"The Radical Socialist party," said Mr. Stevenson, "has become the most active propaganda agency in the United States. It operates or has the support of more than 250 newspapers, probably a majority of them printed in foreign languages. The circulation of these papers is extremely large, in some instances in excess of 50,000 daily. There is also a large number of smaller publications.

"The party is today holding meetings in all parts of the country. In New York alone the number held each week probably exceeding one hundred. They are not street corner meetings either, but are held in halls. And I may add that they are organizing schools for the education of the children along radical lines. In other words the Socialist party, as it now exists in America, is a revolutionary organization."

Senator Nelson asked the witness if he had a list of the newspapers. Mr. Stevenson said he had a list of every important one among them, and at the suggestion of Senators Nelson and Overman that list was put into the record.

Mr. Stevenson also testified regarding certain other phases of the propaganda. He mentioned the American League to Limit Armaments as one of the earliest of the pacifist organizations whose activities did not tend to help the United States in preparing to bear its part in the European struggle. From this grew the Union Against Militarism, which sought to influence Congress against preparedness and which, after this country declared war, opposed the conscription act, and sought among other things, it was testified, to discourage recruiting.

Active in Propaganda.

The witness named as having been active in the union the Rev. Dr. Frederick Lynch of the Church Peace Union, Professor Emily Greene Balch, formerly of Wellesley College; the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, Amos T. Pinchot, Oswald Garrison Villard, Max Eastman, Crystal Eastman, and Scott Nearing.

Mr. Stevenson made a reference to a "Who's Who" of college and university Professors who have been identified with the form of propaganda under discussion.

"Are there many of these Professors?" asked Senator King.

Mr. Stevenson—Quite a large number of them, mostly among Professors of Sociology, economics, and history.

Senator King—We ought to drive out of the universities these pernicious teachers.

In connection with propaganda in universities and colleges, the witnesses cited the Intercollegiate Anti-Militarist League, which got a foothold in some of the principal educational institutions.

The Church Peace Union, which was founded by Andrew Carnegie, and which was described as a perfectly proper organization, did not escape contamination, according to the testimony.

"The Church Peace Union," said Mr. Stevenson, "was used by its secretary, the Rev. Frederick Lynch, to gather information for the use of the National Civil Liberties Bureau. Dr. Lynch issued letters to preachers and others to express themselves on conscription and the answers were placed at the disposal of the league.

"The Ford Peace Mission was really inspired by the Rosalka Schwimmer, now Hungarian Minister to Switzerland, who was a German agent. Mr. Ford's peace secretary at that time was L. P. Lochner, and it is interesting to keep his name in mind, for he shows up prominently in many organizations such as we are describing, which came into existence at subsequent dates, among them the People's Council for Peace and Democracy."

Mr. Stevenson will continue his narrative tomorrow. John R. Rathom of The Providence Journal will be summoned to tell what he knows about enemy propaganda in America.

SOCIALISTS CANNOT SAIL.

State Department, Meyer London Says Refuses to Issue Passports.

It was announced last night at the Rand School, 7 East Fifteenth Street, that the State Department had refused to issue passports to the three Socialists who were to have sailed on the Rochambeau today to attend the International Socialist Conference at Lausanne, Switzerland, on Feb. 23.

Because of the delay the Socialists here telegraphed to Congressman Meyer London, asking him to investigate the reason for the nonarrival of the passports. Congressman London replied that he had made inquiries, and learned that the State Department would not issue the passports. The delegates are Alderman Algernon Lee of this city, James O'Neal of Brooklyn, and John M. Work of Chicago.

COLLUSION IN BUYING DENIED BY ARMOUR

FAVORS AID FOR GROWERS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Two Congressional committees were occupied again today in hearing witnesses, who were questioned concerning evidence brought out at the Federal Trade Commission's meat packing inquiry. The committees have under consideration legislation providing for Government control of the meat packing industry.

J. Ogden Armour, President of Armour & Co., continued his testimony before the House Interstate Commerce Committee. He said his salary was $25,000 a year and had never been any higher. He asserted that Armour & Co. would welcome means to enable livestock producers to market their animals at a price based on the cost of production, suggested a central control of livestock shipments as a possible means of obtaining this, and renewed his opposition to a pending bill to empower the Government to take over control of adjuncts of the packing industry.

Mr. Armour said he thought the control bill probably meant ultimate government ownership of the packing industry, and he agreed with Representative Cooper of Ohio, that if the bill were constitutional, there was no limit to which the Government might go in controlling private industry.

Representative Dillon, of South Dakota, tried to find out how cattle buyers determine the prices. He drew from Mr. Armour the admission that Armour & Co. insisted on having an equal division of the cattle offered at markets where there were only two packing plants, such as Fort Worth and Denver, but he said there was no collusion; that the purchases were made on a basis of plant capacity.

Mr. Armour defended the practice of "bidding on," whereby a buyer who failed to obtain cattle which the grower wanted on shipping to another market or a better price notifies the company's representative at the new market of the price he offered.

Denies Juggling Figures.

Foreign business of Armour & Co. was said to be divorced from the parent corporation because it was desirable to have the companies operate under the laws of the country where they were located. The South American plants made $10,000,000 last year, Mr. Armour said. Virtually all the South American meat had been shipped to Europe, and Mr. Armour thought there would be little of it sent to this country in the near future, especially if a free market were opened in Germany, which the company hoped would result from the establishment of a new Government there.

Charges of juggling figures were resented by the witness. He said that reports of transferring prices to make a department of the business show better results than another was "a child's talk." Mr. Armour criticised the Federal Trade Commission for alleged unfairness in conducting its inquiry. Discussing in detail recommendations by the commission, he said:

"I think the commission made a lot of foolish suggestions that won't work. Anything that is hardship to the packer is bound sooner or later to manifest itself in hardship to the consumer or producer."

Mr. Armour said the consumer could protect himself against high prices by refraining from purchasing, but that the producer of livestock, like the packer, had to take whatever the market was paying at the time he sold.

Bringing out that the $15,000,000 earnings shown in Armour's annual statement did not include $8,800,00 set aside for income and excess profits, Representative Stephens asked:

"Then you are passing that on to the consumer?"

"That may be so," Mr. Armour replied.

Brings Up Relief Bill.

Representative Hamilton of Michigan attempted to develop the possible effect on the packers of the food relief appropriation of $100,000,000 requested by President Wilson.

"They say that the fund will enable the packers to sell in Europe a great surplus of salt pork, which has been accumulated in England and which the people there won't eat now that the war crisis is past," Mr. Hamilton said.

Mr. Armour replied that the packers perhaps had larger stocks of salt pork than ordinarily, but he thought there was going to be a demand for it.

Representative Winslow of Massachusetts, questioning Mr. Armour regarding his company campaign of publicity, elicited this reply:

"If it is commendable for the Administration of this country to spend untold millions to defend its conduct of its business," Mr. Armour said, "it certainly is not reprehensible for a business corporation to follow its example."

Mr. Armour told Representative Rayburn that what the packers objected to most in the Federal Trade Commission's inquiry was the commission's trial of the packers through the newspapers."

"Did the newspapers ever give you a chance to answer," asked Mr. Rayburn.

"No," Mr. Armour replied.

In the course of the examination of Thomas F. Logan, Washington representative of Swift & Co., and other corporations, before the Senate Agriculture Committee, Senator Kenyon of Iowa said:

"You were a lavish entertainer of members of Congress?"

The witness objected to this question as unfair.

"I think a social lobby is about as effective as a money lobby on legislation," replied Senator Kenyon, and as guests were putting their feet under table furnished by packers' money."

Representative Bailey of Texas, who appeared for Mr. Logan's counsel, interrupted to say: "Most of the lobbying in Washington is through the social lobby, and to protest that the Senate Committee had no power to investigate Mr. Logan's relations with executive officials or Congressmen. He insisted that only alleged efforts to procure defect legislation could be subjected to scrutiny.

"It is all right to question Mr. Logan about his affairs with Secretary Tumulty," replied Senator Norris.

"While I take the stand that the inquiry should be limited," Mr. Bailey suggested, "Mr. Logan is willing to testify concerning any relations to any one in the service of the Government."

The witness said he became acquainted with Mr. Tumulty immediately after the latter came to Washington with President Wilson, and that he had business with him frequently. They were sometimes joined by Mr. Hurley, he said. He added that Henry Veeder, counsel for Swift & Co., had ever been in the party.

"Did you render an expense account to Swifts for these luncheons?" asked Senator Kenyon.

"Never," was the reply, "and I never introduced Mr. Tumulty to any of my clients."

Offers Plan for a New County.

ORANGE, N. J., Jan. 22.—The formation of a new county, which would include the Oranges, neighboring towns and Western Essex, in opposition to a plan for consolidation with Newark, has been urged by Judge Daniel A. Dugan. Newark by itself is large enough to be a county, Judge Dugan asserts, and the establishment of a new county, he declares, would mean better representation for the Orangee in the Legislature.

FOR BUSINESS BASIS IN NEW LOAN APPEAL

Gates W. McGarragh Declares Issue Should Be Floated on More Than Patriotism.

FEELING AMONG BANKERS

At a dinner given by the Forum of the New York Chapter, American Institute of Bankers, in honor of Robert F. Maddox, President of the American Bankers' Association, at the Hotel Astor last night, Gates W. McGarrah, President of the Mechanics and Metals National Bank, urged that the next Liberty Loan should be on a sound business basis rather than be offered as an appeal to pure patriotism.

Mr. McGarrah, who later was warmly praised for his stand by many of those present, said that while no one could possibly take issue with Secretary of the Treasury Glass on the patriotism of the American people, he felt that it was good business common sense, in view of all the burdens the people already are carrying, that the forthcoming appeal should offer them an investment which would appeal to their judgment.

The speaker, who is Assistant Chairman of the Central Liberty Loan Committee of New York, instanced the falling off of previous issues of the loan and said he felt that a bond which would stay at par, one that would carry a fair rate of intetrest, could be absorbed with far less difficulty. He felt, he said, that a bond with a somewhat higher rate of interest would be widely accepted and the burden of the loan would be shifted on to the shoulders of the many instead of being concentrated on those of the few.

Uncertainty After Glass Speech.

Mr. McGarrah's brief discussion of the loan was interpreted by Wall Street men as affirming an understanding current yesterday afternoon that prominent bankers of this and other cities soon would recommend to Secretary Glass that he modify somewhat the attitude expressed in his recent speech when he said he felt sure patriotism would play an effective part in floating the next loan.

There was much uncertainty in financial circles following the speech, in which Mr. Glass indicated that he did not believe the final loan should be offered as a purely business proposition, particularly as financiers differed as to the exact interpretation to be put upon the Secretary's remarks.

The Loan Committee discussed the situation at its meeting last Monday, it was learned yesterday, and it is understood that some concern was expressed over the general understanding of Mr. Glass's meaning, particularly as reports had poured into New York from many out-of-town banks and investment houses of uneasiness over the possibility that the new issue would be offered at too low a rate, the Treasury Department relying upon the continuance of the same spirit which carried the previous Liberty Loans to success while the country was in the midst of war.

The reports of uneasiness in outlying districts were not surprising to New York bankers and bond men, as they themselves have been anxiously awaiting a definite indication of just how the new bonds will be placed on the market. The Secretary's speech provided food for thought, and the financial community needed only the spur of a country-wide expression of opinion to resolve that the new loan should be made more attractive than any of its predecessors.

It has also been generally agreed upon, according to authoritative information, that the new bonds should be of comparatively short maturity and offer a real business inducement to make their oversubscription a wholesale success.

Suggestions of Some Bankers.

In some quarters it has been suggested, and it is not improbable that the point will be embraced in the recommendations which will be placed before the Secretary of the Treasury, that it would be much wiser to make the issue an attractive one to begin with, which will find a ready market, than to have the offering subscribed to in the first rush of the campaign by individuals, and later have to place large blocks of the residue with the large and small banking and investment institutions of the country, causing a heavy drain on their absorptive power and possibly causing so far-reaching an effect as temporarily to curtail and embarrass their banking activity.

Some of the more conservative bankers are not inclined to commit themselves publicly as to their views on what the terms of the new loan should be, but it is understood that an official announcement from Washington that the bonds would pay 5 per cent., would run for ten years, would carry the rediscount privilege at Federal Reserve Banks, and would amount to $5,000,000,000, would be received with a great deal of relief.

In some quarters a higher interest rate has been suggested as necessary, but there have been an equal number of proposals that a lower rate with shorter maturities would prove more efficient.

Mr. Maddox asserted in his speech at the dinner that we are on the crest of a world-wide wave of inflation, but he said the very fact that it is world-wide is a favorable feature, as it will result in a more gradual reduction of wages and prices. He declared no one expects prices and wages to be maintained at the artificial level to which they were raised by the war's demands, now that the war is over, but that a good deal depends upon the fairness and promptness with which the Government settles the contracts for labor and supplies to which it was committed at the time the war ended.

The Great Question at Present.

"The great question now is," said Mr. Maddox, "how can we continue to maintain or increase our foreign business with a credit balance of approximately $500,000,000 in annual interest due to start with, an amount nearly equal to the balance of our foreign trade four years ago? How can we be paid for the goods we hope to export in the future? It would be unwise to add to our already large stock of gold. There are some articles which we now import which we could use in increasing quantities, but there is little hope that this increase will keep pace with our ability to increase our own export products.

"One of the plans suggested is for this country to continue to buy the obligations of the Governments of our debtor countries until our people are educated to buy direct foreign Governments' securities or the securities of well established industrial enterprises in other parts of the world. If we expect to increase or even maintain our foreign business, it is absolutely essential to grant these credits in some form, and we must begin at once some plan to absorb these securities."

Touching on the railroads Mr. Maddox said:

"The operation of the railroads by the Government may have been a war necessity, but the service has not improved. It is a general impression among business men in every section that these railroads should be returned to their owners under proper conditions. With an estimated loss in the operation during the last year of $350,000,000, it cannot be claimed that they have been operated more economically.

"The future of our merchant marine, to my mind, is the most vital question to be solved during the coming year. The small amount of tonnage under the American flag before the war was a disgrace to this country. It remained for the emergency of war to emphasize our pathetic dependence on foreign bottoms and to start the construction of a creditable fleet.

"There has been a great awakening throughout the country as to the importance of ships, and the man now in Omaha is as much impressed with the necessity of a large merchant marine as a resident of California or the Carolinas."

FAVOR TREATY FOR HARBOR.

Joint Commission from New York and New Jersey to Control It.

Scant disapproval of the proposed treaty between New York and New Jersey for joint harbor control found expression yesterday at the public hearing held by the New York-New Jersey Port and Harbor Development Commission in the City Hall. The principal feature of the proposed agreement is the creation of a port authority, a joint commission, made up of three Legislature appointed Commissioners from this State and a like number from New Jersey. The tentative draft of the treaty which was presented for consideration is an amendment of the States' treaty of 1834 fixing and determining the States' rights and obligations in and about the Harbor and Bay of New York. It is specifically stated that at least two of the New York Commissioners shall be residents of New York City.

The treaty provides that no grant of land within the port district shall be made without approval of the port authority, and that any plan for the development of the port shall bear the stamp of its approval. It will also be the duty of the port authority to make plans for port development and from time to time make recommendations for improvement to the Legislatures of the two States. It will also petition the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Public Service Commission or such bodies having jurisdiction, for the execution of physical improvements, changes in methods of transporting or handling freight or to petition on other matters for the public good. Unless the revenues from operations conducted by the port authority are sufficient the Legislatures of the two States will appropriate an equal amount for the sustaining of the port authority. That body will determine salaries to be paid to its staff. It is proposed that for violation of an order of the port authority the offender is guilty of a misdemeaner and subject to a fine of from $10 to $5,000, or imprisonment for not more than a year or by both fine and imprisonment.

SENATE VOTES DOWN FOOD RELIEF CURB

Penrose Amendment, Making the Commission Responsible to Congress, Is Beaten.

HOOVER IS AGAIN ASSAILED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Criticism of President Wilson and Food Administrator Hoover was continued today in the Senate debate on the Administration bill appropriating $100,000,000 for food relief in Europe. The Senate again failed to reach a final vote but the disposition of amendments was begun, and Administration leaders hope to pass the measure tomorrow.

Without a record vote, the Senate rejected the amendment offered by Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, providing for distribution of the fund by a commission to be named by the President subject to confirmation by the Senate and to be responsible to Congress.

The amendment by Senator Ashurst of Arizona, authorizing a bonus of sixty days' pay to privates and non-commissioned officers discharged from the army, met a similar fate. Senator Ashurst vainly sought a record vote and said that he would call up the amendment again for final disposition. The Senate this week passed a bill to give one month's pay to enlisted men on demobilization.
